This body of Baptists have before them a bright future. I believe it is conceded by all who know the working of this body that the organization of this new Association was wise and opportune. The motives of our dear Bro. Bright in working up the new Association were doubted by some; but all now seem to feel assured that the move was a wise one, and that it will result in developing an enlarged liberality by the brethren and lift every church in our bounds to a higher plane of duty. I favor the plans of work introduced by Bro. Bright—a visit by a colporter to every church and house in our bounds, supplying them with good Baptist literature and trying to get the BIBLICAL RECORDER into every Baptist family; also, his plan, as introduced in the Association, looking to the establishing of a high school in our bounds known as "The High School of Sandy Run Association."

We regret that we were deprived of the presence of Bro. Durham and other representative brethren at our meeting, but hope they will be with us at our next session.

Two churches united with the Association by letter—Camp Creek and Cain Creek.

God bless the RECORDER and help us to get it into every Baptist family.

Yours in brotherly love, J. W. D.

Southern Baptist Convention.

MEETING PLACE.

In June, and again in September, I published a card in the name of the Boards, calling for invitations from churches for the meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention. It was understood at the time that this referred to invitations on the free entertainment plan. No invitations have come on this plan in response to these cards. An invitation has come from the churches of Baltimore based upon what is known as the pay plan.

The Boards have not felt that it would be fair to other places to accept an invitation on this latter plan without giving an opportunity for others to extend an invitation on that plan; so I make a statement of facts to the churches, and we await further invitations until the 15th of November, at which time such as may have come in will be submitted to the three Boards and a prompt decision rendered.

Any churches inviting the Convention on this plan will please state carefully what advantages they can offer the Convention as to building in which to meet, rates of board, &c., &c. Address

Call to Prayer.

Christians of all churches—all who sincerely desire the enactment of better temperance legislation for the "Old North State"—are hereby requested to be in fasting and prayer on Friday, November the 2nd, 1894, unitedly requesting Almighty God to so direct and over rule in the election of the following Tuesday, as that such good and true men may be elected who will give the desired legislation. Remember the great things that have been accomplished in answer to prayer, and be encouraged to pray, believing that ye have the things for which you ask. See Matt 18: 19; and Phil. 4: 6, 7.

We take the liberty of suggesting that any pastor or teacher or other responsible person, who desires a complete dictionary of the English Language, may secure one by taking a local agency for Mr. Wayne Allcott, Raleigh, N. C. Fifty thousand copies of this work—the Standard Dictionary—were ordered before it was published, thus making it a most popular achievement.

INTERESTING TO LADIES.—The latest invention of the Brainerd & Armstrong Silk Co. is a Patent Skein Holder for Wash Embroidery Silks. Each and every Skein is to be enclosed in a Paper Holder, and one needleful at a time can be drawn out as wanted. This saves ladies the trouble of undoing the Skein and re-winding upon Cardboard, as in the old-fashioned Skeins.

Any lady interested in this improvement and wishing to see it, can get a sample Skein, together with a copy of the new "Blue Book" on Embroidery, by sending 6 cents in stamps to No. 2 Union St., New London, Conn.

Afflictions.

BY REV. J. A. STRADLEY.

"Many are the afflictions of the righteous." Psalms 34: 19.

This statement would not seem strange and mysterious to us if it read, "Many are the afflictions of the wicked." We see, or think we see, why God might in justice and mercy afflict the wicked, to humble them, and cause them to repent. But why God should allow the righteous, those who love and serve him, to be so often and so sorely afflicted, is not easy to see. No parent would allow his child to be afflicted if he could prevent it. God could keep his children from being afflicted, but he does not. He is too good to be unkind, too wise to make a mistake. He afflicts, then, because it is best for the righteous. Can we see any good that comes from afflictions? May it not be that God permits them to come to make us feel what a dreadful thing sin is? All afflictions are the result of sin, and God wants to make us realize what a bitter, hateful thing sin is, so that we may loathe it and turn from it.

If we had no afflictions we would be satisfied with our earthly home. But God loves us, and has prepared a better home for us. He knows how we cling to our old home, imperfect as it is, and make us desire the better home in heaven. Many a man leaves his home on account of afflictions and annoyances incident to that locality, and seek a happier home. So the Christian, wearied and worn by the afflictions of earth, longs for a home where "sickness and sorrow, pain and death, are felt and feared no more."

When gold is dug from the earth it is put into a red hot furnace to separate the dross from it and thus better prepare it for use. So God often puts his people into the fiery furnace of affliction to cleanse them from earthiness, and thus better prepare them for his use on earth and for the society of the pure in heaven. In their afflictions they may hear the Master say:—

"When through fiery trials thy pathway shall lie,
My grace all sufficient shall be thy supply;
The flames shall not hurt thee, I only design
Thy dross to consume and thy gold to refine."

Then, too, when in the furnace of affliction, as with the three Hebrew children, Daniel 3, there shall be "One with them as the Son of God," who shall comfort them and keep them from harm.

God permits Christians to be afflicted to test the piety of individuals and to show the genuiness of Christianity. For this purpose Job was afflicted. Satan claimed that Job was a hypocrit. He said, "Doth Job fear God for naught? Put forth thine hand and touch all that he hath, and will he curse thee to thy face." Job 1: 9, 11. God did put forth his hand and touched all Job had, his children and his property, and he lost all. But "in all this Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly." Job 1: 22. His afflictions proved his religion to be genuine.

Afflictions are not tokens of God's disapprobation, but rather of his love. "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." Heb. 12: 6. God will not allow one affliction more to come upon his people than is for their good.

Our suffering time will soon be over, and we shall enter that blessed home where "Not a wave of trouble rolls across the peaceful breast."

May these reflections bring some comfort to the many hearts that have of late been made to ache and bleed by sickness, suffering and bereavement.

We know whereof we affirm when we state that Ayer's pills, taken promptly, at the first symptoms of colds and fevers, arrest further progress of these disorders, and speedily restore the stomach, liver, and bowels, to their normal and regular action.

From Rev. J. N. Stallings.

Dear Recorder:—I came to this place Saturday last to hold our regular meeting. At conference six came forward and related their experiences and were approved for baptism. We had expected Bro. Conrad to be with us Saturday, but being with Bro. Haymore at Germanton he did not reach us till Sunday. He preached a very strong sermon at 11 a. m. to a packed audience. At 3 p. m. the writer baptized the candidates in South river at the shoals. Our meeting continues with good prospects. Bro. Conrad is doing excellent preaching.

On Saturday before the second Sunday in September Bro. John Robertson went with me to Farmington. We continued the meeting till Friday, Bro. Robertson doing most of the preaching, which he did excellently well. There is not much material, except in some denomination. All who attended were greatly revived. Bro. Robertson is now at the seminary. He will make a strong and useful minister.

Saturday before the third Sunday I went to Eaton's church. There were very few present that day or the next, because of diphtheria which had become epidemic in the community. That day Bro. P. P. Greene's baby boy was laid in the church cemetery by the side of his sainted mother, who died about ten weeks before, leaving five little children. Her little boy was the sixth victim of the fell disease. Since then two others have been interred in the same graveyard, besides one at Farmington. One of the last two was Ethel Eaton, aged about thirteen. She was baptized a month before. Of the nine who have died only two had reached the years of accountability, and both were bright, beautiful little Christians. Three, all he had, have gone to heaven from Bro. Gaston White's; two from Bro. Richard Eaton's; two from Bro. Wesley Eaton's; one from Bro. P. P. Greene's; one from Bro. Sink's. The Lord sanctify and comfort all the bereaved.

Besides these deaths from diphtheria, a number of my Eaton's and Farmington people have had typhoid fever, but all have recovered except Bro. J. T. Tatum and Sister Belle Eaton, the brother and sister of our missionary, Bro. Frank Tatum. The Lord spare and cure them.

May the severe afflictions of the dear brethren and sisters work for them "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." "Whom the Lord loveth he chaseneth." Our Father comfort them all.

I was at our Union at Shady Grove church, Iredell county. We had a small attendance of delegates, but an interesting meeting. The next Union goes to Mocksville. Mission methods were discussed at Shady Grove and will be discussed again at Mocksville. We who stand for our organized work find it necessary to meet the issues thrust upon us by the brethren who advocate independent or direct missions instead of through the Board.

I went the fifth Sunday afternoon to Cook's school house, a point in the corner of Davie county about equidistant from Bear Creek church, in Davie; Rocky Springs, in Iredell; Sandy Springs and Cross Roads, in Yadkin. The threatning weather caused rather small congregations, still there was a considerable number of inquirers. Seven professed faith and will unite with some of the above churches.

Bro. Robert Bore, a member of Eaton's church, began a mission Sunday-school at this place last spring. It has been, and still is, in a flourishing condition. Most of the inquirers are members of the Sunday-school and so are all the professed converts except one. Let all our churches look out destitute places and establish mission Sunday schools and get their pastors to give occasional preaching services.

I was asked to baptize these converts and give them certificates. I thought it best to request them to go to the church of their choice and present themselves for membership. It seems to me the more conservative way, as well as more courteous to the neighboring churches and their pastors.

I call attention wherever I go to your offer of nineteen weeks for fifty cents. You ought to double your circulation. Continue your offer as long as you can.

Yours fraternally, J. N. STALLINGS.

Literary.

McClure's Magazine for October has as one of its features a great lot of Brownie pictures by Palmer Cox and others, and some merry Brownie jingles, together with an account of the Brownie play that is soon to be produced.

The North American Review for October has two articles entitled "Issues of the Coming Elections," written respectively by the Hon. William L. Wilson and Ex Speaker Reed, in which the principles on which both the great parties will go before the nation in the approaching election are outlined with precision and authority.

The Quarterly Illustrator for October, November, and December gathers in a store of summer memories. Through its pages one may live the outdoor season over again with any of the two or three hundred artists to whose near and distant haunts it shows the way. In "Art's Summer Outings" Alfred Tumble searches the continent over and concludes that the question is not where the artists are, but where the artists are not; and from the spirit in which he writes, the places where they are not will be considered by him as undesirable places until the presence of a white umbrella endorses them.

American Life Insurance Methods by Miles M. Dawson, Esq., of Chicago. American Academy of Political and Social Science, Publication, No. 115. 8vo. Paper. Pp. 12. Price, 15 cents. Philadelphia: 1894.

The purpose of the paper is to explain to the lay reader the methods in vogue in american life insurance companies, showing how essentially simple they are. He explains the method of apportioning death losses, of collecting premiums, of assessing expenses, etc. Every one can obtain from this pamphlet a clear idea about life insurance.

Biggle Horse Book is number one of the Biggle Farm Library, edited by Judge Jacob Biggle, a long time and popular contributor to the Farm Journal of Philadelphia. The publishers of this series of books are aiming to treat in a concise, practical and interesting manner the many interests of farm life. They will be bound in pleasing style, carefully printed on good paper, and with numerous handsome and well executed illustrations, so that the series of ten books, which will ultimately compose the library, will make a valuable and attractive compendium of farm information. Biggle Horse Book contains 128 pages, bound in cloth, with 59 illustrations. Price, fifty cents by mail. Address Wilmer Atkinson Co., Publishers, Philadelphia, Pa.

Musical Novelties. J. Fischer & Bro., No. 7 Bible House, N. Y., have recently published the following pieces of Sacred Music and Secular Choruses. 1. Lord Most Holy. Soprano or Tenor Solo. By John Wiegand. Price, 40 cents. 2. God My King. Solo, Duet, and Chorus. By J. Wiegand. Price, 30 cents. 3. Holy, Holy is the Lord. Grand Chorus. By F. C. Goeb. Price, 35 cents. 4. Bill of Fare. Comic Quartet. By Carl Merz. Price, 25 cents. 5. Laughing Chorus. For four mixed voices. By F. Schaller. Price, 30 cents. Nos. 1, 2, and 3 are meritorious and exceedingly effective compositions for the service of the church, while 4 and 5 are delightful and pleasing pieces for the concert room or musical entertainments.

M. Hammerly, a well-known business man of Hillsboro, Va., sends this testimony to the merits of Ayer's Sarsaparilla: "Several years ago, I hurt my leg, the injury leaving a sore which led to erysipelas. My sufferings were extreme, my leg, from the knee to the ankle, being a solid sore, which began to extend to other parts of the body. After trying various remedies, I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, before I had finished the first bottle, I experienced great relief; the second bottle effected a complete cure."

Talks About Law.
A Law Book That Everybody Needs

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON, RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its massing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

HELPLESS INVALID.

"About 18 months or two years ago my wife's health gave way, and she grew steadily worse. She could not retain scarcely anything she ate and the case finally assumed the worst form of

and she became a helpless invalid at the age of 18. I had her under the treatment of a good physician, but his efforts to relieve her were of no avail. So, after matters had continued thus for 8 or 10 months, and my wife had given up to die, I took the case in my own hands and purchased a bottle of Dr. King's began giving it to her in water as hot as she could drink it, before and after each meal, using a mild purgative occasionally on retiring at night.

Suffice it to say in less than a week there was

A WONDERFUL CHANGE.

She could eat a little of anything she desired, and today is a well woman. She used altogether possibly 4 or 6 bottles. In my opinion

GERMETUER HAS NO EQUAL."

Mission Work.

In the bounds of the South River Association, and just within the limits of the county of Johnston, about ten miles from Dunn, is a public school-house in the Meadow township known as Poplar Grove. The people live quite thickly for a country locality and are moderately intelligent, but the religious sentiment of the community, with here and there a few glorious exceptions, is almost entirely Hardshell, deep dyed and stagnant.

Everywhere it is anti mission, anti-Sunday-school, anti-prohibition, anti Bible Society, anti everything like effort for salvation and, to all appearance, whatever tends to lead to enlightenment and progress in this age of advancement, and whatever is desirable and praiseworthy both for old and young mentally and morally, all is denounced and discarded by the elders as devil works. The young are taught in ignorance and seem not to know that any talent is committed unto them at all, except that of living and enjoying life, if it may be, in their own way and on the fruit of their own daily labor.

It was to this Primitive point that the South River Baptist Association some two or more years ago began its work of missions, directing through its executive board its laborers to occupy this destitute field with once a-month preaching at the school house aforesaid.

Several pioneer ministers have labored here from time to time, namely, brethren Wiley and Cephas Page, W. F. Watson, now in Norfolk, Va.; W. B. Harrell and R. Honeycutt. Then Bro. Naylor, Harrell again, and, perhaps, others who have entered with zeal into this part of the vineyard and with the gospel of God offered to unsaved sinners have declared unto them the great truth, heretofore hid to them, that the Son of God came to save, to rescue the lost—even the chief of sinners.

In this locality the idea has long been inculcated that the elect, the fore-ordained, the pre-determined, the eternally predestinated hereabouts are the saints to whom belong by right of inheritance the whole field, and they have held it for years. Consequently a large number of young people of both sexes have grown up here, hearing nothing else, knowing nothing else, and desiring nothing else but to "eat, drink and be merry," take their pleasure on the Lord's day and wait till such time as God shall bring them, against their will, into the fold and dump them down among the other sheep already there. And so they have waited, living as they list, but all the time being rooted and grounded in the extreme ideas of the super-Calvinistic faith as their fathers and mothers, aided by the so-called Primitive Baptist preachers, have taught them from their helpless infancy.

It is sad to think of a whole section of country growing up in such doctrine, but "truth is mighty and will prevail."

In a recent meeting of days held at the school house, assisted by our whole-souled Baptist evangelist, Rev. J. T. Jenkins, it was gratifying to see the house packed full of young ladies and gentlemen sitting with gaze intently riveted upon the earnest speaker, but sad to say not one of whom had ever given themselves to Christ. Alas, alas! and what was more sad, they had never been taught that it was their duty to "seek the Lord" or to "flee from the wrath to come," but only to wait, wait; that God could save them when he got ready, and all such as this.

But thanks be unto His holy name forever, the Word preached was with power, the evangelist was faithful and true, and many believed the message and we trust were saved.

As the result in part, on last Sunday in the presence of about a thousand people standing around a half circle mill pond, the writer led down into the water and "buried with Christ in baptism" nine females, some of them mothers and grown daughters together, and two young men, all of whom had publicly professed their faith in Christ and expressed their purpose to live for him.

A Missionary Baptist church will, therefore, be organized at this mission probably at our next visit, and through their messengers will apply for admission into the South River Association, which convenes with the Mount Elam Baptist church, in Sampson county, on the 24th inst. We can only say, "Oh see, what hath God wrought!"

Working for a Soul.

Not for souls. But for a soul. Only one. One at a time. Not by wholesale, but individually. Not indefinite souls in Africa or New Zealand, but one soul in your own family, in your own circle, in your own community. Work for a soul. Dr. Cuyler tells us of a warm hearted lawyer in his church who made up his mind to work for the conversion of a certain infidel in the congregation. He went to work deliberately. He was patient and persistent. He did not lack faith or wisdom, he was kind and gentle. His yearning after the soul of his friend brought a rare degree of Christlikeness to his own life. After a while the infidel said to him in a half jest, "Mr. J——, you would better give me up as a hard case, and try somebody else." But the soul hungry lawyer did not give up his friend. He gave himself all the more to his self appointed work, and he did not cease his praying and working until his friend was soundly converted to God.

O worker in the cause of the unsaved, pick out your own soul; then devote yourself wholly to your task. Do not be diverted from your royal purpose. Let that one soul be constantly in your thoughts, in your prayers, in your plans. And it may be that sooner than you think for, God will grant you your heart's desire. One soul. Not a score. Only one. Pray for one. Plead for one. Work for one. Live for one.—Epworth Herald.

Hold your tongue when angry.

An Open Letter to the Baptist Pastors of the South.

Dear Brethren:—You have doubtless seen one or two letters in the papers recently asking our churches to make an advance in their regular contributions to Foreign Missions so as to enable the Board to send out missionaries. We appealed to you in those letters, but so much do we feel depends upon you in this matter that we wish to write you a personal letter through the papers asking the help of your tongue, your pen and your prayers. We know that there are many local interests which require contributions, and do not ask that you neglect one of them. We do not ask that you try to increase the contributions of your churches so much as to crowd out other things. But we do ask you to try to get your churches to make an advance. "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." Our people need information, they will never do much for that cause about which they know nothing. Will you not tell them about this great work and urge them to make an advance. Dear brethren, if you will only help there will be no lack of funds to send out all the God-called men and women.

Bro. R. J. Willingham, our Secretary, at Richmond, Va., will furnish you tracts from which you can get the information you need in stirring up your people. As Dr. Strong has said, "Now is the nick of time." One man now on foreign fields will be worth fifty ten years hence. The great question of this day is the evangelization of the world. Our Board can only move as the churches move. They will move if you, dear brethren, will lead them. Will you help us?

R. T. BRYAN.

How Editors are Treated in China.

Nineteen hundred editors of a Pekin paper are said to have been beheaded. Some would shudder at such slaughter, who are heedless of the fact that Consumption is ready to fasten its fatal hold on themselves. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the efficient remedy for weak lungs, spitting of blood, shortness of breath, bronchitis, asthma, severe coughs, and kindred affections.

STAMPS, LA FAYETTE CO., ARK.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—I will say this to you, that consumption is hereditary in my wife's family; some have already died with the disease. My wife has a sister, Mrs. F. A. Cleary, that was taken with consumption. She used your "Golden Medical Discovery," and to the surprise of her many friends, she got well. My wife has also had hemorrhages from the lungs, and her sister insisted on her using the "Golden Medical Discovery." I consented to her using it, and it cured her. She has had no symptoms of consumption for the past six years.

Yours very truly, W. C. ROGERS, M. D.

SUBJECT FOR OCTOBER: COLORED PEOPLE.

"The needy shall not always be forgotten." Increased contributions needed to enlarge the work of institutes for instruction of colored ministers.

STUDY TOPICS.—The claims of the colored people upon us as Baptists. May not a closer union between the Baptists North and South be secured for the educational and religious interests of the colored people. Rome's effort to secure control of the colored vote.

Some Unoccupied Fields.

Besides Tibet, which has some little work done on its edges, but nothing in its interior, there are other lands where Christ is not preached. Adam Dorward died, in great distress, about five years ago, after a few years of itinerating in the Hunan province of China, since which time there has been no one even to itinerate in that home of anti-foreign feeling. For two years past even the posts on the edge of this province have been abandoned. This province is as large as all Great Britain, and has 16,000,000 souls within it and not one missionary. South of Hunan is the province of Kwang si, with 5,000,000 people and not a missionary. Our American Baptist missionaries made a try at it in 1879-1881, but were driven out, and never attempted it a second time. These two are the only provinces of China at present without missionaries. China is the land of "Black Death" in more senses than one. The plague which at present is doing its terrible work, being the outgrowth of the uncleanliness of the people, is typical of the plague of sin. Beluchistan has 500,000 people; has just one little missionary station. This one station, where a medical missionary lives, is at the fort of Quetta, where the English have a garrison. Afghanistan has 6,000,000 people and not a single missionary as yet. Indeed, no missionary work has ever been attempted here. The New Testament and Psalms have been translated into the Pashtu, the commonly spoken language. The people understand the Persian speech. Turkestan has 8,500,000 souls and not one missionary. Here are calls for missionary work that are to be added to the summons from fields all too imperfectly occupied. Where is the need the greatest? where lies the worst destitution?—F. S. D.

Earthquakes in Japan.

Japan is a land of earthquakes. There are nearly two a day on the average, and in ever-recurring cycles of time these small shakes mass their forces together and produce effects on the solid earth like the effect of a storm upon the sea, causing the ground to move like waves, throwing down cities and towns as though they were the playhouses of children, destroying the most solid mason-work of man, and twisting the heaviest steel and iron trusses as though they were wire.

Such an earthquake occurred Oct. 28th, 1891, in Aichi and Gifu provinces, in which ten thousand people were killed, fifteen thousand wounded, and one hundred thousand houses were thrown down and destroyed.

The earthquake, followed as it was by the efforts to relieve the sufferers on the part of the foreign missionaries and native Christians, did much to open up this part of Japan to Christian work. Before the earthquake it was impossible to do any Christian work in some parts of the earthquake region; but after the earthquake and the exhibition of Christian philanthropy by the missionaries we were welcomed, and little churches were planted in these same bigoted Buddhist strongholds. The effect upon the officials, from whom many letters of thanks were received for help given to the sufferers, was excellent, and has resulted in bringing about a kinder and more friendly state of feeling.—Rev. W. S. Worden, M. D., Nagoya, Japan.

According to the New York Tribune, China is this year to have an exhibition of her art and industry on a scale which might be called a world's fair if it were not that it is entirely of domestic institution and confined to her own productions and people. It is held in honor of the Queen Dowager, who attains this year her sixtieth birthday, and will exceed in cost and splendor any display of like kind ever known in the Middle Kingdom, or perhaps anywhere in the world. It is computed that the expenditure will reach $200,000,000. Apart from the central display at Pekin, celebrations will be held in all the towns and cities of the empire, and the renown of the imperial woman who has really directed Chinese affairs for a score of years will be signalized in every form which the ingenuity and loyalty of that ingenious and loyal people can devise.

"To know the facts of modern missions is the necessary condition of intelligent interest."

There is only one real failure in life possible; and that is, not to be true to the best one knows.—Canon Farrar.

A Statement from President McIver.

Editor of the Biblical Recorder:—In the RECORDER of October 10th, the following appeared on the editorial page:

"Dr. C. D. McIver, President of the Greensboro Normal and Industrial School, and Treasurer E. J. Forney refuse to make known the income of said school.—C. Durham."

In your editorial columns of Oct. 17th, is the following:

"Prest. McIver has refused, Dr. Durham informs us, to make known the income of the institution over which he presides. This does not sound well. Public officials are public servants; public institutions are public property.

It is Prest. McIver's business to let the public have the facts."

These statements produce upon your readers a wrong and unjust impression, as will be seen by reading my letter to Dr. Durham:

"GREENSBORO, N. C., Sept. 27th, 1894.

REV. C. DURHAM, Raleigh, N. C.

Dear Sir:—Absence from home has prevented an earlier reply to your letter of the 23rd. I beg to say that I have no right to give you the information which you seek, nor have I the information in my possession now. Your application for it should go to the Board of Directors, the chairman of which is Hon. John C. Scarborough.

Very truly,
CHARLES D. McIVER."

Your editorial would create the impression that I had the authority and that it was my duty to give the information asked for, and that I was arbitrarily withholding it. I desire your readers to know that I had no authority to give the information, and that in my letter to Dr. Durham I directed him to the proper source from which it could be obtained. Whether or not Dr. Durham sees fit to take the suggestion in my letter and apply to the proper authority or not, the Board of Directors is required by law to make a biennial report and will at an early meeting prepare an official statement of the operations of the institution for the first two years of its existence, ending September 30th, 1894. CHARLES D. McIVER.

October 18, 1894.

Any one of ordinary sense knows that the President of the State Normal and Industrial School could have furnished Bro. Durham with the information desired, if he had chosen to do so. Bro. Durham probably suspected that, after his vigorous exposure of the University authorities for not making public their report, the reports of public institutions in North Carolina would be regularly printed hereafter. But Bro. Durham desired the information in time to use it for the instruction of the public this fall.

If the information desired by Bro. Durham were creditable to the President of the State Normal and Industrial school, it would have been readily given. Certainly it were an insane law that prevents the public from obtaining any knowledge of a public institution that the public at any time desires. But there is no such law. The President of the State Normal and Industrial School is dilly dallying for a purpose: any kind of a report will do after it is too late for the people to act; and in two years they might forget it.

It was very kind to tell Dr. Durham of the "proper source" of information. You know Dr. Durham doesn't know anything at all!

And the silence of the tomb broods over that bothersome interest on the "loan" which means gift.—EDITOR RECORDER.

Since the preceding was put in type, Bro. Durham has returned from an Association and submits the following:

I followed Mr. C. D. McIver's advice of Sept. 27th, 1894, and saw Mr. Scarborough about this matter. Mr. Scarborough referred me to Mr. M. C. S. Noble of Wilmington, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees. I at once wrote Mr. Noble, addressing him at Wilmington, and asked for the information. I have heard nothing from Mr. Noble.

Mr. McIver will not I suppose deny that there has been correspondence between the gentleman named above and an agreement reached that they will not, for the time being, give the asked-for information.

In evidence that Mr. McIver had all the necessary authority to give us the information desired, let me say that Col. A. Q. Holliday, President of the A. & M. College, did not hesitate, but freely gave us the information needed about the A. & M. College in response to a similar request.

Rev. E. W. Oakes at Faison, N. C.

After a summer spent in China and Japan, Bro. E. W. Oakes, who so endeared himself to many of God's children in our State last winter, has returned to us to labor in word and doctrine. He began a series of sermons last Sabbath morning in the Presbyterian church at Faison to a large audience who hung upon his words.

Bro. Oakes' place among evangelists is unique. He seeks chiefly to reach the church membership—to awaken them to the reality of their faith, and to move them to greater consecration and surrender to the Master. A year ago he labored amongst us, and we have had time to test the permanency of his work, and we have occasion to thank God and take courage. The men whom he reached have continued in the good way, in some cases having to hold out against strong temptation.

Bro. Oakes cannot visit a community or church without bringing it a blessing. May many doors be opened to him by the Master to whose direction he submits his entire life.

Facts and Figures, or Side-Lights on the Educational Discussion—No. 10.

BY REV. C. DURHAM.

After waiting all these months for the Bursar's report for Dec. 31st, 1893, to Aug. 15th, 1894, the same has been received, and below I give it to the public. It speaks for itself. Its form is very different from the other reports. The Catalogue for 1893–94 says the number of students was 388, but the Bursar's report shows only 305 students. Where are the other eighty-three students? Why were they not accounted for in the Bursar's report? They got in, of course, free in some way not named in this report.

Out of 388 students reported in the Catalogue for 1893–94, the Bursar's report shows that only 139 paid any tuition at all, and only 132 paid tuition in full. It thus seems that 249 students paid no tuition from Dec. 31st, 1893, to Aug. 15th, 1894. These, too, who pay no tuition, are reported, as a rule, to represent the best to-do families in the State.

The scholarships are not named in this report—they are only called "private scholarships." The Trustees committed a crime against the State when they issued these scholarships. But see the Bursar's report:

REPORT OF BURSAR OF THE UNIVERSITY AT CHAPEL HILL, DEC. 31st, 1893, TO AUGUST 15th, 1894.

There were connected with the University during this term 305 students.

Of this number,

305 paid each $5 annual fee..... $1,525 00
148 occupied rooms in college paying for same..... 543 00
249 paid gymnasium fees..... 311 25
121 paid tuition $30 each.
1 paid tuition previously (Sept. 16th, 1894) $30.
14 were medical students paying medical tuition to Dr. Whitehead and taking a few studies in the University, paying for same at regular rates as follows:
2 paid $11 each.
3 paid $12 each.
1 paid $10.
1 paid $5.
1 paid $8.
1 paid $4.
1 $11 (note).
1 Wood scholarship.
3 had no College studies.
2 were pharmacy students—
1 paid $17 for instruction in the University.
1 paid $23 for instruction in the University.
1 special student who paid $15 for instruction in the University.
5 were post graduates receiving free tuition.
28 gave notes for $30 each.
1 was assistant in Chemistry.
1 was assistant in Biology.
1 was assistant in Physics.
1 was assistant in History.
1 was assistant in English.
1 was Librarian.
1 was Gymnasium Instructor.
65 had private Scholarships.
29 had free tuition under the State law as follows:
1 was a cripple.
13 were teachers.
7 were candidates for the ministry.
8 were preachers' sons.
1 left early and was excused from paying anything but the annual fee.
31 were law students who paid tuition to Law School, and received no instruction in the college courses.
305 total.

TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNIVERSITY:

In former articles I have asked you some questions. I did not expect you to answer them. No man, on the witness stand, is compelled to answer a question which would criminate himself. I now make a proposition:—

If you will send me, in the next ten days, the original paper, or an exact copy, presented by you to the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of the University, some weeks ago, and from which the statement, signed by the committee, and published in the News & Observer and Charlotte Observer, was arranged, I will pay the tuition in the University at Chapel Hill, for one year, of any student you may select. The money will be placed in any Bank in Raleigh you may name, to your credit in five days after the reception of the above named paper.

Raleigh, Oct. 23, 1894.

Here and There.

Dear Recorder:—For the most of my time since the second Sunday in August, I have been engaged in the Lord's work.

I began a meeting at Liberty church in the country seven miles south of Thomasville, N. C., on Saturday in August. Rev. Henry Sheets came to my assistance, and preached with much power. God blessed his Word to the conviction and conversion of about twenty souls, and up to date there have been added twenty-one to our number—sixteen by baptism, four by restoration, and one by letter. One other has a letter to present at the next meeting. This church has 212 members. Rev. J. M. Hilliard has been elected to succeed the writer for the ensuing year. May God's blessings be upon these dear people, and to God be the glory.

From this place I went to Worthville, where I received and baptized three persons into the fellowship of this little church. Here is a noble-hearted band of brethren and sisters.

I then started for Holloway's church, where I met a host of friends gathered in the Liberty Association, planning to better do the Lord's work.

From this place I went to Eldorado church where I commenced a meeting of six days. I was assisted by Rev. Jeff. Lanning, a young preacher of the Liberty Association, and he won the hearts of the people. There was one addition by baptism. I resigned the pastorate here, the distance being twenty-six miles from my home.

From here I went to Mt. Leban, a small mission church located in Randolph county, where I met Elder M. J. Leach, the pastor. We began a meeting here the first Sunday in September. The Lord greatly blessed his Word. Many souls were saved, and on Saturday the pastor baptized twelve happy converts.

I left here for home, sick. The Lord helped me home, and then I was prostrated for three weeks with intermittent fever; but by the aid of medicine, on the fifth Sunday I was able to drive five miles over the hills to Oak Hill Baptist church, where I had been called to serve as pastor. I commenced a meeting, and from the very first service the Spirit of the Lord was with us, and we had a glorious meeting, which resulted in the salvation of many souls. Brethren Newton, Hall, Morton and Roper visited the meeting and preached the Word. I think that there is a bright day before this little struggling band. To God be all the glory.

One half of my time for the ensuing year is not yet engaged, and I feel it my duty to give the Lord my whole time.

JOHN A. SUMMEY.

Tar River Notes.

October 11 witnessed the gathering of the tribes with us in their annual Association, and we are now in the pleasant after-glow. Owing to the floods, probably a third of the churches were not represented save by letter, and yet I have never seen a finer session of the body. In spite of distressing market reports and general depression, the enthusiasm reached high water-mark. It was one of the old-time meetings of the Tar River.

The pledges for Associational missions ran up to more than $1,500. The churches and Sunday-schools sent up for the Orphanage about $150, and on Saturday night a cash collection of $205 was taken for the same object, which was increased to $236 by the Sunday-school collection next morning.

The sermons and addresses were of a high order, while the crowds tested the capacity of the main body and both wings of our building.

The work of the session was gloriously rounded off on Sunday morning by a collection of one hundred dollars for the new house in Wilson, which collection was raised under the auspices of this church. The spirit of our old leader, Dr. Hufham, lingered in the body, and about three hundred dollars was raised in his memory to carry on the work which he began here seventeen years ago.

We gave a standing invitation to the Association to hold its sessions here whenever it will, and many were the expressions of desire on the part of our people that the brethren would come to see us again next year.

Bro. Hocutt, who came to us sick and was taken down during the session, is now up, and hopes to return home to morrow.

R. T. VANN.

Sandy Run S. S. Convention.

This body met last fifth Sunday at Henrietta, and a happy time we had. Such ministers as Bright, Hollifield, Harrill, Moss, Hord, McMahan, Goods, Green and Alexander were there to add interest to the meeting; besides, we had cultured and influential laymen, such as Lynch, Bridges, Davis and Marrow, together with M. L. Padgett, ex-Sheriff Blantz, ex Representative G. B. Pruett, and a host of others whose names I would like to mention.

The speeches were very good both days.

Henrietta's hospitality is unsurpassed. They made you feel very welcome to help them dispose of the inviting viands which loaded down their well-filled tables.

The music—with Mr. D. W. Hicks and Prof. Bridges to lead, and Misses Maggie Smith and Viola Lancaster at the organ—was very good.

Mr. Hoover, the Methodist pastor, with many of his flock, helped to swell the congregation. Mr. Hoover also made some timely speeches.

Bro. M. L. Padgett was chosen Moderator, and Prof. Lynch, Secretary.

Rev. Z. D. Harrell preached the missionary sermon on Sunday at 11 o'clock to a well packed house. The collection amounted to twenty dollars.

Sunday night Rev. T. Bright preached at the Methodist church, and Rev. Z. D. Harrill at the Baptist.

R. W.'s Contrast.

R. W.'s "Contrast between the Baptists of the first decade of this century and the last decade" was, to me, very interesting reading. It was on the first page of your issue of Oct. 10th.

The first page of the RECORDER has been, for some time, so full of charming interest, that I can't skip over it as I used frequently to do.

R. W. is probably in error when he says that R. B. Semple was the first president of the old Triennial Convention.

According to Gammell, twenty-six ministers and seven laymen from eleven different States and the District of Columbia met in Philadelphia, May 18th, 1814, and organized the General Convention by choosing Richard Furman, D. D., of South Carolina, as President, and Thomas Baldwin, D. D., of Massachusetts, as Secretary. R. B. Semple was present, though not President. See Am. Bap. Missions, page 18.

REV. T. E. SKINNER, D. D., Raleigh, N. C.

My Dear Dr. Skinner:—Permit me to thank you for the copy of your Sermons and Reminiscences, a considerable portion of which I have already read with a great deal of interest. I could not help but think, while going through the book, how great the amount of labor, influence, and power upon the hearts of others this condensed statement represents. I trust that your life may be spared for use for many years, and beg to remain, with best wishes,

Truly yours, CHAS. H. BANES, Sec.

Commendation.

Dear Brother:—There have been several editorials in the RECORDER this year, for which I felt like thanking you. Your last, "The Earthly Relation of Christianity," seems to me to be Christ's own truth, and I hope you will do much teaching along that line. The RECORDER grows on me.

Sincerely, H. T. WILLIAMS.

Mr. Danford Edmondson died on August 18th, 1894. He was born Feb. 29th, 1836, in the home where he died. He had an indomitable will, was very self reliant and just in his dealings. Next week will appear a just tribute to his character, written by Dr. Vann.

From Madison.

Dear Recorder:—I baptized nine into the fellowship of the Providence church yesterday as a result of a few days meeting held at a mission point. Twenty professed faith in Christ, and the most of them will unite with the church at the next meeting.

Bro. C. M. Billings assisted me, and did good preaching. There is no better man than Bro. Billings, and he is going to make one of our best preachers. Some church that is without a pastor would do well to call him. He was raised in Virginia, but was educated at Wake Forest, and prefers locating in this State. We would like to have him in the Pilot Mountain Association. He preaches the old-fashion gospel, and therefore is a safe man.

Yours for Christ, W. H. WILSON.

Meeting in Georgia.

Dear Recorder:—It may be of interest to your many readers to hear of the success of my meetings out here. In September we began a meeting with Elim, which continued eight days. At the close I baptized fourteen persons in the likeness of Christ's Resurrection. At our last regular meeting we thought it best to continue a few days, and I baptized eight more, making a total addition of twenty-two by baptism.

Resolutions Adopted.

The committee appointed by the Woman's Missionary Society of the Henderson Baptist church presented the following resolutions, which were adopted:

WHEREAS, It has seemed good to our Heavenly Father, in his infinite wisdom, to remove from our midst by death Mrs. Mary E. Hicks and Mrs. Margaret S. Smith, members of this Society; therefore,

Resolved, That while we sincerely lament their departure, the one in the very flower of her usefulness—affectionate, tender, faithful in every relation of life, an earnest, efficient laborer for Christ—the other in serene and beautiful old age, who, after a life devoted to the sweet ministry of service wherever her lot was cast in the home circle, the church where her very presence was a gracious influence, suddenly, without sickness, pain or anguish, put on the white robes of immortality; yet we bow in humble resignation to his will "who gave and who hath taken away," believing that our earthly loss has been to them "exceeding great gain."

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved ones, and commend them to the mercy of Him who is the Resurrection and the Life.

Resolved, That this expression of our sympathy be sent to the families of the deceased, and that a copy of the same be sent to the Gold Leaf and BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

MRS. F. M. MEADOWS,
MISS HATTIE MITCHELL,

Vindicatory Resolutions.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Mt. Holly Baptist church, Oct. 14th, 1894:

WHEREAS, We feel sorely grieved at the manner in which Mr. F. P. Hall has publicly and maliciously assailed the personal character of our pastor, Rev. M. P. Matheny, in the Charlotte Observer of Oct. 9th; and whereas, we believe the attack wholly unjust and uncalled for; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we cheerfully vindicate our pastor, in that we believe he was prompted only by pure motives. And inasmuch as we know many of Mr. Hall's statements to be untrue, we resent and deplore such methods.

Done in church conference assembled, and unanimously adopted.

ROANOKE'S FORTY-SECOND YEAR.—The forty-second session of Roanoke College, Virginia, opened on September 12th with the largest enrollment for seventeen years, which is especially gratifying in these times of financial depression. The students already present represent thirteen States and Territories and Korea. The annex to the library, erected during the summer, is completed and the books arranged in it for the daily use of the students. Roanoke now has a building 95 feet long, 30 feet wide, and through the wings of the Annex 72 feet, devoted exclusively to the Library and Reading room.

DIED.

DANIEL—Little Braxton, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Daniel. Braxton was a sweet little babe, and sadly is he missed in the home circle. God gave the little rosebud a short life, being only fourteen months and twenty-five days old at his death. A loving God gave him, an affectionate Father has taken him, and humbly do we submit to his will. He is safe in the arms of Jesus, and a connecting link between earth and heaven for mamma, papa and little brother. Look up, dear loved ones, into the face of your God, and catch the sympathizing and compassionate look for you. In your bereavement he will be to you a child, and even more. No longer does your little Braxton feel the effects of sickness, but with the ransomed throng praises your God. On August 15th, 1894, your babe fell on sleep in Christ Jesus. May the God who gave and has taken, give the needed consolation, is the prayer of UNCLE GEORGE.

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, God in his providence has seen cause to remove from among us our beloved Sunday-school classmate, Claudie Bridges; and while we bow in humble submission to his will, we deplore the loss, and will miss the ever-loving and cheerful Claudie.

Here was the walk of a sincere, humble Christian, ever ready for a deed of kindness. To know her was to love her. She was always punctual in attendance at Sunday-school. And we extend our deepest sympathy to her bereaved family, but feel confident that what is their loss is her gain.

COTTOLENE.

Many Persons

Cannot touch food prepared with lard, and yet all such people can eat freely of food shortened with, or cooked (even fried) in COTTOLENE. For dyspeptics, and those with delicate digestive powers, Cottolene is invaluable. Having all the good features of lard, with none of its unhealthfulness, its wonderful success is easily explained. The genuine always has trade mark—steer's head in cotton-plant wreath—on every pail.

The electric thrill of health is never felt by those who are run down—out of sorts—poor in blood—badly nourished—dyspeptic. That would be impossible, and so the delight of living is lost!

Brown's Iron Bitters

brings weak people up to the standard of health—feeds the blood—acts on the nerves—strengthens the muscles. It brings the blush of youth to weary women's cheeks—is a boon to the invalid—refreshes and renews life in the aged—nourishes the weak, puny child—briefly said, it gives strength, and strength cannot exist without perfect health. It is a necessity in every family. It does not injure the teeth or cause constipation.

"Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep"

The fire upon the hearth is low,
And there is stillness everywhere;
Like troubled spirits, here and there
The firelight shadows flutter go;
And as the shadows round me creep,
A childish treble breaks the gloom,
And, softly, from a farther room
Comes, "Now I lay me down to sleep."

And, somehow, with that little prayer
And that sweet treble in my ears,
My thought goes back to distant years
And lingers with a dear one there:
And, as I hear the child's amen,
My mother's faith comes back to me,
Crouched at her side I seem to be,
And mother holds my hands again.

O for an hour in that dear place!
O for the peace of that dear time!
O for that childish trust sublime!
O for a glimpse of mother's face!
Yet, as the shadows round me creep,
I do not seem to be alone—
Sweet magic of that treble tone—
And "now I lay me down to sleep"
—Eugene Field, in "Chicago News."

Were They Answered?

Not long ago an engineer brought his train to a stand at a little Massachusetts village where the passengers have five minutes for lunch. A lady came along the platform and said: "The conductor tells me the train at the junction in P., leaves fifteen minutes before our arrival. It is Saturday night, that is the last train. I have a very sick child in the car, and no money for a hotel, and none for a private conveyance for the long, long journey into the country. What shall I do?"

"Well," said the Engineer, "I wish I could tell you."

"Would it be possible for you to hurry a little," said the anxious, tearful mother.

"No, madam, I have the time table and the rules say I must run by it."

She turned sorrowfully away, leaving the bronzed face of the engineer wet with tears. Presently she returned and said, "Are you a Christian?"

"I trust I am," was the reply.

"Will you pray with me that the Lord may in some way delay the train at the junction?"

"Why, yes, I will pray with you, but I have not much faith."

Then the conductor cried, "All aboard." The poor woman hurried back to her deformed and sick child, and away went the train climbing the grade."

"Somehow, says the engineer, "everything worked to a charm. As I prayed, I couldn't help letting my engine out just a little. We hardly stopped at the first station, people got on and off with wonderful alacrity, the conductor's lantern was in air in a half minute and then away again. Once over the summit it was dreadfully easy to give her a little more, and then a little more, as I prayed, till she seemed to shoot through the air like an arrow. Somehow I couldn't hold her, knowing I had the road, and so we dashed up to the junction six minutes ahead of time."

There stood the train, and the conductor with his lantern on his arm. "Well" said he, "will you tell me what I am waiting here for? Somehow I felt I must wait your coming to night, but I don't know why."

"I guess," said the brother conductor, "it is for this woman, with her sick and deformed child, dreadfully anxious to get home this Saturday night." But the man on the engine and the grateful mother think they can tell why the train waited.

Men can raise objections, and ask questions, and make out of this anything but divine help manifesting itself in a natural way, but to the believer in God's Word, it is a manifestation of that power promised every sincere believer. And how far off from the promises and this divine teaching concerning prayer lives the average disciple! Indeed he who has now the name, Israel, will say that his experience in prayer and his proving its efficacy is like drawing a few dollars from a bank now and then, where the deposit is a million. Does the Bible treat the question in a metaphorical way, or is Christian faith too weak to find the meaning underlying these apparently far-reaching promises? If there be a God, such as is revealed in nature, then prayer is the only reasonable thing for man, and the promises only faintly describe the possibilities in prayer.—Watchman.

Poisoning Poisons.

"Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging." This is true of it at its best estate. The purest of these beverages when touched by death in the process of fermentation, becomes poisonous and dangerous. But the liquors now sold and drank are still more destructive and deadly. A recent telegram from Washington says:

"To day's session of the sub committee of the House Judiciary Committee investigating the Whiskey Trust was devoted to watching experiments by Mr. Veazey, in producing liquors by adulteration. By the use of essential oils, essences, and coloring matter, he produced in a few minutes, whiskeys, rums, and gins similar to those that are placed on the market and sold as pure goods. The basis for this product was an odorless and colorless liquid known to the trade as 'spirits.' It was worth about $1 80 per gallon. By the use of compounds worth about 1½ cents he produced a gallon of liquor that would sell as high as $4. The production of adulterated goods represented one-half the liquor business of the country."

The genuine pure wine "biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder," but this stuff biteth like a whole den of vipers, copperheads, rattlesnakes, and cobras. "Look not upon the wine when it is red."—The Christian.

He that does good to another does also do good to himself; not only in the consequence, but in the very act of doing it.—Selected.

The Worship of Intellect.

The race of which we come is largely Teutonic. Its dispersed members, like those of the fatherland, are too much inclined to exalt sheer mental power. The honor they yield it is sometimes a homage not due to the creature, but only to the Creator. That which we idolize, to which we burn incense, is not simple moral worth, but natural genius, refined by scholarly culture. In this habit lies our special peril. It makes us too willing to be influenced by men of commanding intellect, without regard to the moral principles they teach, and, it may be, also practice. This habit shuts our eyes to the higher and nobler part of man's nature. It prepares us to accept doctrines which may poison our character, simply because they are held, and urged upon our attention, by some imperial thinker.

I would not discredit mental activity. Let it continue to distinguish the English-speaking races. In the future, more than in the past, let ours be the land of teachers, lecturers, authors, scholars. But let us not worship intellectual eminence. Let us insist on some other and diviner qualities in the man whom we accept as truly great. Let us demand of every leader, and of every volume that asks our favorable verdict, fidelity to conscience, moral purity, in tendency as well as tone. Let us bid the newcomer stand afar off, as an infected and deadly thing, if it only stimulates the thinking faculty, and does not lift the soul nearer to God. If it would escape this quarantine, and sail into the harbor of our faith and love, let it bring, besides and above everything else, an influence which will cleanse and exalt the natural affections; which shall guard the sanctuary of the heart; which shall build broader and higher, instead of stealthily undermining that wall of instinctive delicacy which keeps the honor and happiness of our firesides.—Manning's Half Truth's.

Diphtheria Treatment.

First, strips of linen or cotton fabric, about eight inches wide, folded several times, and long enough to reach from ear to ear, should be wrung out of ice water (if in winter), and if in summer put directly upon ice, and then applied externally to the throat, and as fast as one cloth gets warm another should be ready to take its place. If the child complains of being cold, its feet and hands should be bathed in as hot water as it can stand. When the child is very young, it may be readily ascertained if it be cold or not by feeling its hands and head. Under no circumstances should hot applications be made to the throat. If the child is old enough, it may be given broken ice to suck constantly, even if the water is spit out. The cold applications inhibit the growth of the microbes. The patient's hands should be washed frequently—and here let me say so should those of the attendants—and the vessel used for the purpose should not be used by any one else. The patient's clothing needs protection in front. This may be done by pinning back of the neck a large piece of linen or cotton fabric, which will cover the whole front of the child and reach as far as the knees. A material should be used which can easily be boiled or burned when soiled. The little patient, if old enough, will want to spit, and for a spittoon a small wooden box, with an inch of sawdust on the bottom, is capital. Fresh sawdust should be supplied at least once a day—three times a day would be better—and that which has been used should be emptied upon a good, hot fire, and thus burned at the time the change is made. If there are any flies about, the box should be kept covered, and, as a matter of course, only uncovered when the patient desires to spit; otherwise, the flies alighting upon this spittle would carry the germs of the disease with them, and then alighting upon the family's food and drink, necessarily infect them, and thus indirectly infect the whole family. This is by no means chimerical, but a well established fact.—D. G. B. Klophel, M D.

The Dog and the Tow Line.

A gentleman connected with the Newfoundland fishery was possessed of a dog of singular fidelity and sagacity. On one occasion a boat and a crew in his employ were in circumstances of considerable peril, just outside a line of breakers, which—owing to some change in wind or weather—had, since the departure of the boat, rendered the return passage through them most hazardous. The spectators on shore were quite unable to render any assistance to their friends afloat. Much time had been spent, and the danger seemed to increase rather than diminish. Our friend, the dog, looked on for a length of time, evidently aware of there being great cause for anxiety in those around. Presently, however, he took to the water, and made his way through to the boat. The crew supposed he wished to join them, and made various attempts to induce him to come aboard, but no! he would not go within their reach, but continued swimming about a short distance from them. At last, after several comments on the peculiar conduct of the dog, one of the hands suddenly divined his apparent meaning: "Give him the end of a rope," he said; "that is what he wants." The rope was thrown—the dog seized the end in an instant, turned round, and made straight for the shore, where a few minutes afterwards boat and crew—thanks to the intelligence of their fourfooted friend—were placed safe and undamaged. Was there no reasoning here? No acting with a view to an end, or for a given motive? Or was it nothing but ordinary instinct?—F. C. Atkinson, in Zoologist.

A Plea for the Horse.

The Baltimore Sun "takes the bit in its mouth" and makes this plea for the noblest of animals: "During the bitter cold weather in winter much suffering is thoughtlessly inflicted on horses by putting cold bridle bits into their mouths. If the person who does this will apply his tongue to a piece of iron on a frosty morning he will understand at once what the suffering to the poor brute is. To slightly warm the bits before putting them into the horse's mouth would require only a small expenditure of labor. This can be done by rubbing them with a blanket or other cloth a moment or two if other means of warming are not at hand. The beneficial results in the gentleness of the animal will amply compensate it."

California peach growers have found that the use of lime, salt and sulphur wash in the winter, when the trees are dormant, prevents mildew during the following summer. This wash, if properly prepared by a long boiling, is a very active fungicide, and destroys the spores of the mildew where resting upon the bark during winter. The application of dry sulphur during the spring will also check mildew, but the winter use of lime, salt and sulphur meets the double purpose of killing both scale insects and fungus pores.—Exchange.

COUGHED DAY AND NIGHT.

MRS. L. F. COATES.

Three years ago, I was so sick I could not eat, sleep or walk, for I coughed all day and night, my weight was reduced from 150 to 127 pounds. The first night that I slept four hours at one time, was after I had taken three doses of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The offensive matter expectorated grew less every day and when I had taken the whole of one bottle, I could sleep all night without coughing, and have been well ever since and weigh 175 pounds.

IN THE election next week the climax of ten weeks anxious work will be reached. Men have worked for results they desire, some for ambition, some for envy, some for love, some for principles, some for office, with zeal and vigor that in religion would have created a reformation, that in the industrial arts would have transformed commerce. The energy of many will have passed void; for political work, so far as the defeated are concerned, is ephemeral.

A political speaker creates nothing, leaves nothing behind. An orator makes a lasting impression, but political speakers are not orators. The difference is in the ends which either seeks. One uplifts, inspires, ennobles—he has no selfish animus; the other usually has an office in view, and, if not seeking office, he is probably so anxious to convince his hearers, so beholden to his party, that he cannot raise himself to the elevation of the orator. The politician is at best an implement in his managers' hands.

To a young man, the route to honor and a competence by way of the legislature, Congress, a State office, the United States Senate, then the cabinet or other high Presidential appointment, seems very rosy. We know a young man who is already aspiring to the United States Senate. That's as far as he cares to see for the present, he says; and he is very happy with his prospects. He agrees with every one, and has offered to support a number of people for President! He is so happy, indeed, so engrossed with his prospects that he has stopped working, and does nothing but recount them in "a confidential way" to all who listen to him. He is sane, that is, generally speaking.

Now suppose our friend begins with the legislature. He will have to favor and flatter in order to hold that. Suppose he does. He must now secure friends and admirers all over several counties in order to get to Congress, and having secured them, distribute the patronage that he may command so that as few as possible of those who helped elect him will be offended. That is hard. It is hard to cater to this man because he is powerful and turn against that one because his followers are few. It makes a brute of a man. But one cannot keep an office to which patronage is given without being politic. Think how many ex Congressmen you know. Think how many have come back from Congress with unrelenting enemies. One must not only have an honorable record, but must also keep the home "fences" in repair. It's a hard way,—ambition and envy and determined opposition on every hand. Our friend may attain his ambition, but he will seek vainly for his roses. His chance of success, granting that he is no ordinary young man, is one in ten thousand. It is rare as a miracle that a man holds office twenty-five years in succession. The avocation is one of anxiety all the time. Uncertainty wears men out.

No man ought to grow up regarding public office as a means of sustenance. The life is too precarious. And in the present time it is unnatural, for that independence of thought and action is abrogated.

A SERMON upon brotherly-love, or, at least, upon tolerance, is timely in election times. Difference of political opinion should be such a small matter compared with faith, that two men, having the same faith in the same Saviour, could not feel at all separated because they vote contrarily. Certainly one's ambition for, one's zeal for the coming kingdom, ought to be too great to permit one to make strife over the most serious temporal problem.

Tolerance is a quality that all men ought to cultivate. Every one is entitled to his creed, political or otherwise, and so long as one is honorable, no matter how unwise, in pursuit of one's creed, one ought not to be accused of evil or ridiculed. Arguments are always in order; but only he who is desperately put to can afford to use ridicule or accusations of evil.

WILLIAM BOOTH, founder of the Salvation Army, its present commander-in-chief, is in this country on a tour of inspection. His armies have done good, but there's no denying that they make a deal of noise about it. Commander Booth speaks of his followers as the "noisy party" in religion. They make much noise that is unnecessary, too. They laugh with joy rather than shout, they hurrah rather than preach, they lift up their voices, all differently, rather than sing. They have thus brought the attention of many lowly living people to the gospel, who otherwise might not have been reached; and it can be said that the Army has done good for God and man. They have stations in many localities, which had been abandoned to Satan, in the great cities.

IT WOULD be wholesome for Japan to think upon the Scripture that runs, "the race is not to the swift nor the battle to the strong." Japan has been going ahead in the war with China by great strides. Victory upon victory has been achieved; and China is dismayed. Some say the Chinese emperor will be dethroned and the celestial Empire divided into four parts. It does seem as if China has at last been made to bow to Progress. But China is torpid. It may yet arouse and learn. It has patience. We would be glad to have Japan conquer; but we are not at all certain that it will. China can lose fifty men to Japan's one until the former's reserves have learned how to fight, learned from Japan, and then join battle with superior numbers! It is very difficult to appreciate China's vastness. It is larger than the United States, and its population is six times ours. Japan is about the size of North Carolina and less productive.

FEMALE political clubs are being organized in various parts of the North. The creatures flatter themselves that they are doing much good and seem to enjoy their notoriety. They do no good. A man who is corrupt enough to disregard his oath, a political party that buys votes, or a bar keeper who cultivates a pull, cannot be turned by the jabbering of women, for whom they have no respect. They ought to be made to work real hard about a day in order that their exuberant energy may be exhausted, and then, we doubt not, they will be content to remain, so far as politics and public life is concerned, "the weaker vessel."

THE Czar of Russia has been reported as having half a dozen different fatal afflictions in as many weeks of late, but at this writing he is still sufficiently alive to send a telegram. It is said that his wife has apoplexy, and one of his sons has consumption. Poor Czar. Ten weeks ago the world thought Alexander III the heartiest of European monarchs; now the world looks confidently for his early demise. He kept the secret of his ill health well, but once divulged the morbid news-venders make a business of distorting it. The Czar's ill health began with "the grippe." This disease, by the way, started from Russia. He is now suffering with Bright's disease. His son will succeed him. His death would be an opportune occasion for an uprising of the oppressed Russians, but the Russians are such extremists that they prefer anarchy—nihilism, they call it,—after absolute monarchy; and anarchy, of course, will not be permitted by the other European powers.

There are people who are not fit for self-government, and who, therefore, need a stringent ruler. The Russians are good examples, and Alexander III has been a right wholesome ruler of them.

THE price of wheat is very low, while that of corn is high. For the first time, so far as we know, in history the poor man's bread is made of flour and the rich man's of meal. Flour contains less substance, but when made into bread occupies more space than wheat. This is not altogether unworthy of serious consideration.

Cotton is selling deplorably low. The price is variously attributed. We incline to the opinion that to a considerable extent the lowness of the price is chargeable to the abundant output—9,000,000 bales. There is always reason for gratitude, and in this instance we are grateful that bread is cheap, and that the farmers as a rule have a good supply of meat, though of course it seems that they ought to have many other things. The low price of wheat is attributed to cultivation of that cereal in India and South America and the abundant production of it in North America. European countries no longer look upon America as their granary, and that deprives us of good customers.

HUNGARY is about to grant freedom of worship to all sects. Probably it is difficult for some of our readers to think that liberty of worship is not granted throughout Europe. But it is not wherever Romanism is dominant. Rome fought the bill in the Upper House of the Hungarian Diet with Rome's persistence, saying that such an act "would ruin society and the government." It never thought to include religion, which, however, could hardly have increased the extravagance of the statement.

Good Works.

BY REV. G. W. HARMAN.

A characteristic difference between Christianity and all false religions is the relative position of works. A Christian works because he has been saved, others in order to be saved. All acceptable service lies beyond a full surrender at the cross of Christ. All good works are performed in Christ.

In order that works be in themselves good, they must be enjoined by divine command. The will of God is the foundation of morality, and the only intelligible and solid ground of obligation. It is our duty to do this or that, not because it accords with human reason, a sense of propriety, decency, order, or utility, but because God has commanded it. Practices of the Jews were sometimes condemned simply because they were not commanded. See Jer. 7: 30, 31. "In vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." Matt. 15: 9.

In order that works be good as performed by us, they must be done by proper characters, and from right principles and motives.

These things being so, the writer is persuaded that no unrenewed person can perform good works.

1. Works to be good and well pleasing in the sight of God must be in the divine order. Baptism before faith, the Lord's supper before baptism, contributions before self-surrender, are not good works. "Seek first the kingdom of God." Matthew 6: 33 "But first gave their own selves to the Lord." 2 Cor. 8: 5 "We never can offer anything to God until we have offered ourselves in sacrifice to him. Then follow afterwards prayers, giving of thanks, alms deeds, and all the exercises of piety."

2. The unrenewed are in the wrong sphere. "The whole world lieth in the wicked one," spiritually indifferent, unconscious, and helpless. They are under law, under wrath, in the kingdom of darkness, in the flesh, and dead in trespasses and sins. Now "they that are in the flesh cannot please God," nor can the dead serve him. A man lying in the grave cannot plow, nor sow, nor reap, neither can the spiritually dead put forth the activities of a spiritual life. A translation out of death into life must precede all good works—all spiritual service.

3. Good works are performed from respect for divine authority. A good work is not only according to divine command, but is done from regard to the divine Lawgiver. It is not done to please men, satisfy conscience, nor from fear of the consequences of disobedience, but from filial reverence for the divine Being.

4. The sacred Scriptures teach that the motive of acceptable obedience is the glory of God. "Whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." 1 Cor. 10: 31. Good works are performed not to gratify vanity, nor to promote our temporal interests, nor indeed our eternal happiness independently of the glory of God. God must sit enthroned in the heart, and be the center around which gather our thoughts, words and deeds. Through Him and unto Him are all things.

5. The Bible puts redemption, regeneration, and sanctification before good works. "Who gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto himself a peculiar people zealous of good works." Titus 2: 14. "We are his workmanship created in Christ Jesus unto good works. Eph. 2: 10. Good works result from the new creation, and are the fruit of the new, divinely implanted life. "Good works cannot be performed until we are new "created unto them." All works which precede regeneration are "dead works." See Heb. 6: 1. "Men must be regenerated before they can make progress in religion, or perform a single action which the Searcher of hearts will approve."

6. Faith must precede good works. "Without faith it is impossible to please Him." Heb. 11: 6. "These things I will that thou affirm constantly that they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works." Titus 3: 8. Cain offered sacrifice without faith, and therefore was rejected. "Faith causes the believer's person to be accepted, and then his offering."

7. Love is antecedent to good works. Love is the mainspring of all acceptable obedience. Nothing is of any value in the divine estimation without it. Whatever be our gifts or attainments, wanting love, we are nothing. Though we give all our goods to feed the poor, and our bodies to be burned, if we have not love, it profiteth nothing. "All works done in the natural state * * * are dead, for they came not from living faith in and love to the living God."

8. Works are accepted only through Christ. Good works are done in Christ, and accepted through Christ. He is the Door and the Way through which must go our souls, our sacrifices, and our services. "Ye are * * * an holy priesthood to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ." 1 Pet. 2: 5. "Through him, therefore, let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually," &c. Heb. 13: 15. From these and other Scriptures, it is obvious that our persons, prayers, praises, deeds and alms are acceptable and well-pleasing to God only as they come up before him in the name of Christ, and perfumed with the incense of his infinite merit. I believe, therefore, that the unrenewed being out of Christ, without faith, love, and respect for God's authority, with no regard for his glory, under the curse of the law, and spiritually dead are unable to perform good works, or render service acceptable to God.

From these considerations, it is the opinion of the writer that to organize the unconverted for Christian service is pernicious in tendency, and contrary to the Word of God. He does not believe that an unconverted person whether ten, twenty, or forty years of age can serve the Lord acceptably. To organize the children of the Devil to serve the Lord is

1. Hurtful to the church—inasmuch as it obscures the line of distinction between the church and the world.

2 It is fraught with danger to the unconverted. It tends to divert them from the first great duties of repentance toward God, and faith in Christ, and to beget and strengthen vanity, self conceit, and self-righteousness, and may be the stone over which they will stumble into hell.

3 It is dangerous to Christians, in that it may divert them from the great work of soul saving. Our first duty to the unconverted, our own children included, is to seek to bring them to Christ. They are lost and unfit for God's service, until they embrace Christ in loving faith, and we are trifling with their eternal interests when we spend our time in trying to train the little unbelievers in Christian work.

All this, and much more of the same sort, has come from contact with Pedobaptist societies, and Arminianism, from a frantic desire to "raise" money, whatever the methods, and above all from our want of faith in God.

Finally, God requires first the man, then the means; first the soul, then the service; first the heart, then the hand; first our love, then our labor.

Restoration of Excluded Church Members.

REV. HAYNES LENNON AT COLUMBUS UNION MEETING

What scriptural authority have we for requiring an expelled member of a church to be restored by the church excluding him?

ANSWER.—An unerring Providence makes it an apparent fact that consistency characterizes his operations in all things pertaining to this life and that which is to come. In the dispensations of his grace he brought life and immortality to light. Through the abundant mercy of his Son repentance is granted, sins are pardoned, souls "are justified from all things that the law of Moses could not justify,"—"Jesus Christ is made unto them wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption; but now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness: and the end, everlasting life," To all these, the Great Shepherd gives direct command, "to follow me," "to learn of me," and the God the Father saith, "I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

2 A church is a divinely organized body of baptized believers in the grace, mercy and love of the Son of God, who have from a sense of Christian duty united in covenant with God to take him as their father, ruler and Saviour, through the mediation of his Son Jesus Christ as their Covenant Redeemer, whose blood was shed, and by faith applied for the cleansing of their sins, that through him they might be presented to God the Father without spot, and blameless to the praise of his grace and glory. In the common acceptation of the term Church in the New Testament, it is applied to local assemblies. They are called "the elect of God," "children of God by faith," "sanctified in Christ Jesus," "called to be saints," "saints in Christ Jesus," "followers of the Lord," "beloved of the Lord."

3. Each church, as a distinct organization, was independent of every other church. No intimation is anywhere given that the acts of one church were supervised by another church, or by any ecclesiastical judicatory established by a combination of churches. In the direction given by Christ, for settling a difficulty between two members, the aggrieved brother is first commanded, in Matt. 18: 15, to see his brother and tell him his offence; next to take one or two more and tell them the same thing, then if these measures fail, to tell it to the church, and the action of that particular church is represented as final. The church at Corinth excommunicated the incestuous person by its own act and without reference to a higher judicatory. 1 Cor. 5: 3, 4, 5, 7, 13. As if to settle the question of church independence, Paul, though possessing apostolic authority, and though he commanded the act to be done, yet required it to be done by the assembled church, as the proper agent for performing this act. Again, when the same individual was to be restored, the action of the same church became necessary, and this action completed the deed. 2 Cor. 2: 6, 7, 8, 9. In the book of Revelation distinct messages were sent to the seven churches of Asia. The character and work of each church are distinctly and separately referred to, and the duties prescribed are assigned to each church separately, and that church alone is required to perform them.

Only one more fact would I now present, which may be found in Matt. 18: 18-20, and in direct connection with the exclusion of the brother who refused to be reconciled to his brother who in accordance with the Saviour's explicit direction, "Let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican." "Verily I say unto you, whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." "Again I say unto you, That if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my father which is in heaven. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them."

In this paragraph Jesus directs the erring, instructs the church, and specifies the power of his people to bind and to loose in obedience to divine direction in a ministerial and executive sense.

A Felt Want of Our Churches and Associations.

BY REV. J. S. HARDAWAY.

Sometime within the past two years book agents passed through this section, Granville and Vance counties, and through other sections of the State, selling their books to the people. They came without observation, going here and there and everywhere. Few, if any persons, knew of the character and teachings of the books. They simply knew that they belonged to the class called religious; and if they had noticed the place where they were printed they would have seen that they were published at "Battle Creek, Michigan."

At about the same time tracts on the Sabbath day setting forth the peculiar views of the "Seventh Day Adventists" began to come through the mails to the pastors of churches scattered throughout the land. What is the significance of book agents and tracts coming together, coming so quietly, into our midst?

The advent of these agents and tracts pointed to the coming of the Adventist missionaries among us with their doctrines of Saturday instead of Sunday, the annihilation of the wicked, &c., &c.

Now, behold, we hear of the Adventist preachers in various sections of our State setting forth their peculiar views, and of even whole Baptist churches being led away by them.

I give this bit of history to enforce a moral.

Why is it that in our Baptist churches we have so many "children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine?" Why is it that we have so many "Reeds shaken with the wind?" Are our people peculiarly liable to be carried away with "divers and strange doctrines?" Now tossed and shaken with the wind of Campbellism, and now with the witk the wind of Seventh Day Adventism? What is the matter with us?

Is not this the answer? Our preachers and leading members have turned largely aside from the preaching and teaching of the doctrines of the gospel?

As a result of preachers falling into a trite anecdotage, the people have fallen into dotage, and are become children doctrinally, and hence, a ready prey for any religious teacher that comes along?

What is the remedy for this state of things?

(a). The ministry should begin vigorously to preach gospel doctrines, urging upon the people to search God's word, and thus build themselves up in the truth.

(b). We should teach doctrine in our Sunday-schools faithfully.

(c). We should have a consecrated, godly colporteur in every Association in the State circulating far and wide Bibles, tracts, and doctrinal works of every description.

(d). Every pastor should be a self-appointed colporteur in his own field, calling the attention of the people to helpful books, to doctrinal tracts, to articles that appear in the RECORDER that are specially useful.

Brethren of the Baptist churches of North Carolina, shall we suffer the truth for which our fathers endured imprisonment, and even death, to be supplanted by error, while we sleep?

Physical and Spiritual Dyspepsia.

Dyspepsia is frequently found to be a divinely-appointed health officer, stationed at the gateway of excess, to warn off all comers, and to punish those who will persist in entering the forbidden ground. Spiritual dyspepsia is, in most cases, the result of sin indulged or of duty neglected. How can a Christian be healthy who neglects a wholesome diet for his soul, or who seldom does a "stitch" of work for his Master? How can his faith be strong who seldom enters his closet? The constipation of charity soon becomes chronic when selfishness locks its purse against the most eloquent appeals. My dyspeptic friend, I commend to you the double remedy—Bible diet and Bible duty. If these don't restore you, then your case must be past all medication.—Guyler.

The Bible may not be to us all what it was to Augustine and Cowper, the former of whom was roused from despondency and the latter rescued from temporary insanity by its soothing language; but it is, after all, the only unfathomable well to which resort for comfort may be had. It is like the tent which the fairy Paribanou bestowed on Prince Ahmend; folded, one person could carry it in his hand, spread open all the armies of the Sultan could repose beneath its shade.—Rev. R. W. Lowrie, D. D.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

THERE is every reason for encouragement in the cause of Christian and Popular Education. It has adherents all over the State. It will have loyal friends in the next Legislature. Its ultimate success is not to be doubted. The continuance of State aid depends upon the backbone of those who oppose it. We have the numbers and the right principle; and it looks now like they will prevail this winter, the probability being that the majority of the Legislature will be opposed to the appropriations.

WE HAVE been informed that a young pastor of country churches in this State recently said in effect: "I know Paul said, 'let your women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to under obedience, as also saith the law,'—but I do not believe in old man Paul's teaching about women." If a preacher says anything of this kind he has no call to preach in Baptist churches; and if he believes anything of this kind, it is his duty to resign. No jot or tittle of God's Word can be regarded lightly.

THE brother who tries to curry favor with other denominations by flattering their preachers is on a par with the brother who was all breadth but utterly deficient in depth. The consequence of such efforts is seen in weak and lifeless church-members, in changing members, etc.

There is need to "ground" many preachers. They seem always ready to fly off after any new thing, to seek to attain unto liberalism rather than perfection. He serves God best who best preserves God's law. It is not tolerance to sacrifice one's convictions for the sake of good-nature; it is not liberalism to conceal one's principles in the presence of varying persons. The man who knows the doctrine and who, while willing to listen to other doctrines, insists on having his own heard, he is the man. Extreme liberalism is vapid, extreme tolerance is moral weakness.

EVERY word of Bro. Harman's article in this paper is golden. Good works are often occasion for division and misunderstanding, but in this instance the lines are drawn so clearly, the distinctions so plainly, and the whole of the article so thoroughly well planned, that no one can mistake it. We do not recall having presented our readers with an abler effort. Bro. Lennon offers a model discussion of a union meeting topic, a question that has often been cause for trouble. The frequent recurrences to Scripture in these two articles is surety of their wholesomeness. Bro. Hardaway did not purpose writing an article. He calls attention to a serious detriment to our work, and offers several suggestions that we earnestly commend to the reader. Bro. Tyree refrains from writing a tribute to Bro. Albright in deference to Bro. Gattis of the Methodist church, who knew him most intimately. Upon reading the tribute a brother who weighs his words said that the subject was worthy of the meaningful sentences. Bro. Moore's article is unusually good, containing valuable history and instructive commentary.

THE following from the Western Recorder is particularly commendable to North Carolina brethren just at this juncture. It meets our hearty approval. Young People's Societies are notable for running wild; and a word of caution now, in the beginning, cannot but conserve the best interest of the Lord's work:

"The Occident says, it hears 'from many directions' that the young people's societies in the churches 'are passing resolutions, and entering into various lines of work without consulting pastors,' and without consulting churches. The Occident proceeds to lecture the young people for behaving so. The simple fact is no society should exist in a church, but by authority of the church, and it should do just such work as the church appoints, and none other.

There should be no organization of young people's societies within the limits of a district association, separate from that association. There should be no organization of young people's societies in a state separate from the General Association or Convention of that state. There should be in the South, no general convention of young people's societies separate from the Southern Baptist Convention. There should be no general convention of young people's societies in the North separate from the anniversaries.

Our young church members must be trained to believe that the church to which they belong is their church, that the district association is their association, that the general association or state convention is theirs, that the Southern Baptist Convention is their convention. Herein is our safety, and any departure from this will surely bring trouble."

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S MOVEMENT IN NORTH CAROLINA.

In the beginning let it be said that grown men may be implicated in young peoples' movements. The average age of those who compose young people's State or general meetings is more than twenty-one. The men at the head—not necessarily the officers—of the young people's general organizations in the United States, are not at all in need of guardians. They are working for the young people; their deliberations, their eloquence, their inspiration, is placed to the credit of the young people. So when one speaks of a young people's movement it is wise to anticipate action by old as well as young people.

It may be that the elders move for the young people, yea, move the young people for the young people's sake. There is about as much not in a name as there is in one.

At any rate there is a young people's movement in North Carolina. One may obtain some idea of its nature, its methods and movers by reading the program on our third page. We have got to face the matter; and it is serious. Anything that is expected to do what our fathers from immemorial time till now never saw the need of being done, or seeing, didn't know how to do, or doing never recorded, is serious But it is a progressive age, the school-boy truthfully says; and new methods, new expedients, new instrumentalities turn up every week or two.

The movement in North Carolina, like the movement everywhere else, meets with more encouragement in the cities than in the country. Most all other new things do. The names of the pastors who are to take part in this movement represent the cities of North Carolina, with one or two exceptions. They are able men. They have pastorates that require able men. When they reach the opinion that a thing is desirable, it ought to be considered. But what is good for the city is not always good for the country; and in the mater of expedients, it is good for both city and country to exercise tolerance of one another.

The RECORDER is heartily opposed to the B. Y. P. U. A. No North Carolina Baptist can read the report of its last meeting and approve it, except specifically. Most of the brethren on the North Carolina movement program do not advise North Carolina young people to join the B. Y. P. U. A. We hope they never will. The RECORDER stands squarely by the action of the last Convention. The organization of the young people locally was urged. Agitation of the matter was advised. We have published more than twice as many articles favorable to the organization of the young people as we have opposing them. In fact there has been a notable derth of articles on the negative of the question. The Convention did not approve State organization. The matter was left to the individual churches; and we expect that the next Convention will determine the question of State organization, if, indeed, there is need to determine it.

The present movement is not to be deprecated except in so far as it represents a tendency. It itself is not State organization. The Charlotte local young people have invited the young people of the Baptist churches in the State to meet at Charlotte during the Convention. Each individual church can say whether its young people may accept the invitation. There is no mention of election of officers, adopting constitution and by-laws, etc. There is no more nor less than a good program of topics assigned to capable speakers, whom any one might gladly hear. Who can oppose this? It is not more unscriptural than a union meeting.

But what of the matter as a tendency? Is it a step toward the B. Y. P. U. A.? We believe not. The men who are behind it are too wise to saddle that organization on North Carolina. Is it a preliminary to State organization, election of officers, adoption of constitution and by-laws? We fear it is. If it is not, very well. If it is, there is every reason for precaution.

The young people ought to engage more actively in the Master's service. So ought the old people, the middle aged, and all others. The proposition that something is needed to arouse Baptist young people applies to all other Baptists. Very few of the old people in our churches do as much for God as they ought. It is not organization that they need; it is religion. It will not always pay one to change harness when a horse doesn't pull. He may lack life. It does not seem to us that the young people are one jot more inactive than the old.

The arguments on which organization of the young people into individual societies in the local churches stands, are, that the pastor cannot adapt his sermons to the younger members and the Sunday-school cannot; that organization is desirable for bringing the young people together, giving them something to do and to think about; and that organization increases strength and sense of responsibility, and, therefore, zeal. But organization inside the individual church is sufficient for this. The church itself is qualified to direct its members. There is no necessity, no reason for organization for spiritual or business purposes, because the churches with their present plans, associations, conventions, the boards, etc., are sufficient.

It is profitable to old and young to come together to hear talented and consecrated men speak on topics that they have studied; and if the brethren choose to do this any time, in the name of old or young, every one ought to thank them.

If there is one man in the Convention who is more interested in the young people's movement than another, that man is Bro. Van Deventer. Doubtless to him is due the present plans. He is one of the committee appointed by the Convention. He will not do anything that he thinks the Convention does not sanction. We feel safe with the matter in his hands, for he is loyal and true.

READ and think on Bro. Hardaway's suggestions. They are timely; they appeal especially to pastors. There is need of vigorous work in many sections. There is need of doctrinal preaching everywhere.

POLITICS and Business are bushels over the lights of millions while half a world struggles in utter darkness. That Christian who uncovers one light—be it his own or another's—serves man best and God noblest. A Christian that doesn't shine and a lamp that will not burn belong on the same shelf.

FROM now until the Convention let us make all possible efforts to increase our contributions. We ought not only to strive to equal amounts raised last year, but to exceed them largely. The destitution here at home, the need of workers and the wherewith to maintain them on the foreign field, the duty to bring our orphans up, should not be out of our minds as long as we have while others have not.

ONE M. Notovich has been getting no little notoriety in recent months from the sale of the reproduction of a manuscript "Life of Jesus" from childhood, which he claimed to have found in Thibet. Why any one should believe that a history of the unknown years of Jesus' life has been preserved in Thibet, where Jesus never went, is not known. But interest in the book has been increasing as though it could reasonably be genuine; and many have been persuaded to accept the fabrication. Prof. Max Muller, however, easily proves in the Nineteenth Century that M. Notovich is himself an impostor, and also that his work cannot possibly be genuine.

THESE columns contained several remarks not long ago upon the methods of men in newspaper disputes. It is hoped that the following from one of our most valued exchanges is not so apropos that any one will wince upon reading it. It is very timely.

"If you wish to answer an opponent and can not meet his arguments perhaps the cheapest method is to charge him with 'prejudice,' with being 'too extreme' in his views, and avow your desire to 'look at the matter calmly,' and to 'take medium ground.' Look as wise as possible as you say, 'there is much that can be said on both sides,' and that it is well to 'avoid dogmatic statements.' Thus some people may think that after all you are a wise and safe man, and they will forget to note that you have no answer to make to your opponent's arguments."—Western Recorder.

THE congregations of Beecher, Talmage and David Swing are remarkable witnesses of the danger of too much pulpit power. In life Beecher and Swing held large and enthusiastic congregations in apparently close bonds. There was perfect unity, it seemed on the surface. But when Beecher and Swing had died the bonds were loosed and the unity was seen to be a mockery. Talmage's congregation has dispersed since he began his world tour.

The Holy Spirit alone can preserve the life of churches. The eloquence of men may build great cathedrals, may move vast multitudes, but without the presence of God's Spirit the influence will prove ephemeral. When a church talks more about their pastor than about their Saviour there's occasion for calling a new man.

The disposition to criticise sermons, picking them to pieces, signifies lack of spirituality. Likewise the habit of comparing preachers is unwholesome. The Spirit that moves the God called pastor—and every pastor is presumed to be God-called—is the same Spirit, although the men are different. Of course pastors are fallible—the best of them are; but that is no reason why people should go hunting for their faults, holding them up to contrast. It is a good reason why churches should not blindly worship their pastors instead of God, as did the congregations of Beecher, Swing and Talmage.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

SANDY RUN ASSOCIATION.

This body met with Mt. Harmony church in Rutherford county. This is one of the young Associations which formerly was of the King's Mountain and Green River Associations. From the first, it was full of life and promise, and continues to be so, increasing in strength and interest every year. This session was perhaps the most interesting meeting the body has yet had. Whatever differences as to the best methods of doing mission work they have heretofore had seems to have been put aside, and there was not a single church which did not pledge for the objects of the Convention.

Bro. Hollifield was again made Moderator, and Bro. Bridges, Clerk. These brethren enjoy the confidence of the Association in a most marked degree, as was fully attested in their election.

I did not reach the church till Saturday, but found a considerable portion of the work still before the body.

The discussion on Foreign Missions was excellent and had a fine effect on the representatives of the different churches. More was pledged for this object than ever before by the Association.

The churches feel a live interest in ministerial education, and are specially interested in the two young men they are supporting at Wake Forest.

The subject of general education was one of the topics in which the Association showed special interest. I have not seen the people in any section of the State more anxious to learn the truth about the State's policy in reference to higher education, and when they do find out the truth, there are no people in the State who will take more prompt and decided action. One of the wisest and most conservative men in Rutherford county said to me, "This whole State policy in reference to higher education is resting on a powder magazine which will not wait to be touched off."

The Orphanage, in the absence of any representative, was represented by a number of the brethren, who always show their interest in this object wherever and whenever it is discussed.

Sunday the weather was beautiful, and people were there from every direction. From 10 to 11 o'clock a Sunday school mass meeting was held. A large number of the brethren participated in the exercises; after which Revs. H. D. Harrill and A. C. Irvin preached, the first named in the house, and the last named at the stand.

This is one of the finest sections in the State. Several good schools are in successful operation, and the Association passed a resolution asking for a committee to locate in the bounds of the Association a school of high grade to be named "The Sandy Run High School." This is a move in the right direction, and we hope to see the example followed by many Associations in the State.

The people in this section were well clothed, cheerful and apparently contented. The land which is especially adapted to the raising of corn, wheat and cotton, has been well cultivated, and this year has yielded an abundant crop.

The brethren and friends in the community entertained the delegates in handsome style, and a number of churches petitioned for the Association next year.

MT. ZION ASSOCIATION.

This body met with the church at Mt. Moriah, seven miles from Durham. The weather which at one time promised to be uncertain, was nice and fair, and a large delegation came up from the churches. Since this body last met, Bro. Albright, the former Moderator, had died. The brethren had not realized their loss so keenly before the Association met. One who had been so true, so considerate, so fair and so kind, could not go from his place without being greatly missed by his brethren.

On assembling, Dr. J. L. Carroll led the audience in prayer in which he alluded to Bro. Albright in a most touching and tender manner.

The introductory sermon was preached by Bro. C. W. Blanchard from the text "The Lord is with you."

Prof. Gore of Chapel Hill was elected Moderator of the Association, but declined on the ground that he could not remain during the entire session of the body. Dr. Carroll was then unanimously elected Moderator, and proved himself a most worthy successor to him whom the Association had so long loved and honored in this position.

The churches in this Association had done nobly, as the reading of the letters showed, many of them going beyond the pledges made at the last meeting.

On motion of Bro. Gore, the subject of Periodicals was discussed the first thing on Tuesday evening. Brethren Gore, Blanchard, Tyree and H. A. Adams made strong and effective speeches on this subject.

State and Associational Missions were ably discussed by Dr. Durham and brethren Tyree and Hocutt.

Dr. Mitchell was given a good hour for the discussion of Ministerial Education, and he and Prof. Gore made their best efforts in support of this report.

The report was read on Foreign Missions and ably discussed by Drs. Hume and Durham.

Bro. Dowell of the Second church, Durham, met for the first time the brethren of the Mt. Zion Association. The zeal he feels in the work generally and especially in Associational Missions, I will find abundant scope in this Association.

Bro. J. W. Watson was present, but was sad over the recent death of his most estimable wife, and had a full share of the sympathy of his brethren.

Brethren Tyree, Markham, Riggsbee and Howerton were very kind in their efforts to take care of the travelling brethren and provide them a conveyance to the Association. The Association was most handsomely entertained, and we find our attachment grown stronger for the Mt. Zion brethren.

At this point we must leave to be at the South Fork the balance of the week.

....Hon. Geo. W. Sanderlin of Washing-ton City spent Fair week at Raleigh, where many of his friends were glad for the oppor-tunity of a word with him. Washington Life agrees with Bro. Sanderlin, but he makes no effort to conceal his pleasure for being again in North Carolina.

....Bro. John Mitchell says his Board is getting along with the support of a goodly number of promising young men. Money is needed, pressingly needed, and Bro. Mitchell is ready to receipt for any amount. Let us see to it that Bro. Mitchell doesn't report a debt at the Convention.

....There can be no new principles for the salvation of the world. The declaration of independence platforms, the cure-all consti-tutions, the take-the world by storm-and-handkerchief eloquence, is calculated to lead one to think that something new has been discovered. All that is new in religion is perverted.

....There's a man down in Florida who cannot find anything more in need of kick-ing than the frequent use of the word *Col*ored. Happy man. It is quite often the case that people spend their energy kicking small matters all over the face of creation, while great and grievous ills exist and increase all around them.

....Rev. D. B Ray has issued a vigorous tract on Seventh Day Adventism, which may be had for ten cents. Apply to Bro. Ray at St. Louis, Mo. "Annihilation of the Wicked," by Rev. J. D Pope, is another work on the subject that may be had for a small consideration, of the American Baptist Publication Society, Philadelphia, Pa.

....We most cordially welcome the Rev. C. G. Jones to Kentucky. He takes pasto-ral care of the First church, Covington, the first of November. Bro. Jones is one of our brightest and best preachers, and we are sure that, by God's blessing, he will do a noble work in Covington. The First church have waited long for a pastor and now they have one well worth waiting for.—Western Recorder.

....The Wake Forest Student for October—the first number of the present session—is be-fore us. The editorial staff consists of L. A. Beasley and S. R Buxton, editors; S. W. Oldham and J. L Cornwell, associates; Prof. C. E. Brewer, faculty editor, and J. W. Carl-son, business manager. Their work in the current number speaks well for them and the college. The contributions, though as able and interesting as those of the usual college journal, are neither so numerous nor so praiseworthy as might be gotten out of the talent at Wake Forest.

....We congratulate our brethren in Charlotte, N. C, and their sterling bishops, Rev. T. E. Pritchard and L. R. Pruitt. They invite the Southern Baptist Conven-tion to hold its next session in Charlotte, and they offer free entertainment. Noble churches and noble pastors! Ah! "there's life in the old land yet," and Southern hos-pitality is not dead. God grant that it may never die!—Western Recorder. The invita-tion was extended only to the North Caro-lina Baptist Convention which meets Dec. 6th, and which voted last year to meet at Charlotte this time. We are sure, however, that the hearts of the brethren at Charlotte, Wilmington, Asheville and Raleigh are large enough to invite the Southern Conven-tion, but we are deficient in buildings.

....The acquaintances of Bro. John Len-non of Perry's Mills, Ga., will be glad to hear from him. "My work is progressing," he writes. "Good meetings make me grate-ful to God. The RECORDER is worth to me what an estate would be to a child. I am glad to be heir to it by being a son of the Old North State." Lyon's church, Ga., re-cently presented Bro. Lennon with an ap-propriate gift.

....Dr. Thos. Hume, the genial head of the department of English at the State Uni-versity, delivered an able address before the district Y. M. C. A. Convention at the North Carolina College of Agriculture and Me-chanic Arts the 27th. He occupied Brother Simms' pulpit Sunday morning, and his ser-mon was a source of instruction and com-fort to a large audience. At night, Elder Duncan McLeod preached an able sermon to a good congregation.

....Rev. C. J. F. Anderson, who now serves as pastor of one of the best fields we know of,—Carthage, Jonesboro, Sanford and Aberdeen,—was a pleasant visitor to this office last week. Brother Anderson is meeting with much success in his work, and bids fair to develop into larger and larger usefulness. He received a good degree of instruction at Wake Forest, but he purposes further preparing himself at Johns Hopkins and our Louisville Seminary.

....Rev. L. G. Broughton writes from Clifton Forge, Va., Oct. 23rd: "I am here in a gracious meeting. A great awakening among the unsaved. Between fifty and sev-enty five conversions. A choir of fifty, the best voices in town, led by an organ and two cornets, led the singing, which is a great help. Meeting been going on only five days. Virginia is looking to North Carolina with anxious eyes for an example in educational reform. Our new church is nearly ready for us."

....Rev. M. A. Adams of Reidsville took occasion to visit relatives and friends in Wake Forest and Raleigh last week. Bro. Adams is meeting with notable success in his Reidsville work. One hundred and two persons have been baptized since he took charge. Meetings have been held in several communities. Bro. Adams informs us that the vigorous work will be kept up. The Reidsville brethren and sisters were so ap preciative as to present their pastor with a baptismal suit not long ago.

....The revival which has been conducted in the Baptist church at Seaboard by Rev. Samuel Saunders, assisted by Rev. J. D. Hart, of Carrsville, Va., for the past two weeks, has been a great power of good to our community, about thirty-five professions having been made; the meeting closed on last Friday night but such an interest was shown in our Sunday night prayer meeting that it was decided to continue it through this week. Rev. Mr. Hart will return to day and continue the services. The baptizing was had at Jordan's pond yesterday after-noon —Patron and Gleaner.

....Of the twelve North Carolina students at the Seminary, all but four, viz, Porter, Blalock (R. Y), Plemmons and Cross, are Wake Forest men. They hold a prayer meeting every Sunday morning after break-fast. Brethren Milliard, J. G. Blalock and Cullom are candidates for full graduation next June. Bro. Cross will complete the English course plus Greek. Nearly all of the North Carolinians do religious work—preaching or teaching—Sundays. Bro. R. G. Kendrick is superintendent of a city mis sion Sunday school. "All are well and at work," Bro. Kendrick writes, in a letter from which the foregoing was gathered.

....Candidates who scorned the idea of voting against the useless, unwise and wrongful appropriations to higher education in this State have of late been glad to say that they "will consider the matter favor-ably," that at any rate they will vote to re-fer the question to the people. They are dallying for time. Elect them, and they will laugh at you. Better be sure that your representative will represent you. A man on the fence is about as safe as a bird in the bush. The question now is not whether the appropriatio is shall be discontinued, but whether they shall be cut off altogether next year or not. No principles ever be-came so popular in this State in so short a time.

....The Patron and Gleaner thinks that the RECORDER is inconsistent, and is unkind enough to say that we appeal to the preju-dices of the people when we say that the people are in no humor to increase taxes. We merely stated our opinion, and we are still inclined to think that the people agree with us. Our contemporary asks, "how are we to have six or eight months schools every year without increasing taxes." We can have a four months school if the money that is now absorbed by the institutions of higher learning and given to other things not pro vided for in the Constitution is turned over to the public school system. Let us have the four months school according to the Con stitution before we begin to talk about eight months schools. Let us learn to properly apply the people's taxes before we increase them.

....Israel was taught to believe that length of life and prosperity and happiness are evidences of faithful service of God. We could not but be inclined somewhat to Israel's doctrine as we read last week a neat invitation to the fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Brewer, nee Ann Eliza Wait, November 5th, 1894, at Wake Forest. The half century, no doubt, seems short to Brother and Sister Brewer, so well have they used it, so richly has their stewardship been rewarded. Surrounded as they are with a goodly share of earth's com-forts, spared to see a large family well-set-tled in general affairs and identified with Christ, their own faith increased nigh unto ripeness, it is not to be wondered that their gratitude is as boundless as that of the Psalmist, whose words (Ps. cxvi, 12) the in-vitation cites. May they be spared yet many years to their friends and children to testify to God's goodness and mercy.

Missionaries on the Way.

Bro. R. T. Bryan writes from Chicago: "Our party has reached here, where we spend one day in arranging tickets. So far our trip has been pleasant. I will write from Tacoma." Bro. Bryan sends us an account of the Louisville farewell meeting, which was held in Walnut Street church. Bro. Bryan's three little girls sang a hymn in Chi-nese before the large audience. The follow-ing brethren occupied the platform: Drs. J. M. Warder, W. L. Pickard, D. Y. Bagby, R. J. Willingham, R. T. Bryan of China; Dr. J. M. Weaver, Dr. W. B. Crumpton of Alabama; Dr. J. T. Christian, the Rev. M. P. Hunt, Dr. T. T. Eaton, and the Rev. Car-ter Helm Jones. Dr. John A. Broadus opened the exercises by announcing the hymn, "Jesus shall reign." Dr. J. M. Weaver then prayed. Dr. Broadus selected for the Scripture reading the close of the gospel of Matthew and of Luke. He intro-duced the Rev. Dr. Willingham of Rich-mond, Va., who made a feeling address, in which he said, "I believe the present war in China means the opening of that country to the gospel as never before." Bro. Bryan also made a hopeful talk. He was followed by others of the party. They will not embark until the end of this month. God speed them on their noble way.

Another Word About the Convention

Dear Recorder:—We are hoping for a large attendance on the Convention, and propose to entertain all the delegates to the Young People's Convention, the Women's Missionary Society and the State Conven tion. There are a few things we wish espe-cially to be remembered. First, send us at an early day your names; don't say, I ex pect to come and two others; give us your names. If you find that you cannot come, after your names have been forwarded, no-tify us at once. And also let us know by what route you will come, and when you expect to reach Charlotte, if convenient.

For the benefit of those, delegates or oth erwise, who may wish to pay their own way, we give the rates at which the hotels will entertain. There are no better hotels in North Carolina than those in Charlotte, and their rates are very reasonable. The Cen-tral will charge all guests, delegates or visi-tors, two dollars a day. The Buford will charge delegates one do lar and a half a day, and visitors two dollars. The Arlington will charge all guests one dollar and a quar-ter per day, and the Charlotte and Queen City hotels will entertain at one dollar per day.

The commmittee will take pleasure in en-gaging rooms for any who may wish to be the guests of either of these hotels.

Meeting of Baptist Young People.

Dear Recorder:—The Tryon Street Baptist church of Charlotte, N. C., endorsed the ac-tion of their Young People's Society and in-vited the churches to send representatives from their Young People's Societies to a meeting to be held in the Tryon Street Bap-tist church Dec. 5th, 1894.

It is further desired that churches having no young people's band will send a repre-sentative from their young people.

It is the desire of many pastors and Young People's Societies that such a meeting shall be held. A provisional program has been prepared as follows:

PROVISIONAL PROGRAM—WEDNESDAY, DECEM-BER 5TH, 1894.

Opening exercises 7:30 p. m., led by Rev. C. A. G. Thomas, Greensboro, N. C.

7:50 p. m.—Address of welcome on behalf of the Baptist young people of Charlotte.

8:15 p. m.—What the Young People's movement stands for.

1. Bible Baptist—Rev. C. S. Blackwell, Elizabeth City, N. C.

2. Loyal Baptists—Rev J L White, Ashe ville, N. C.

3 Missionary Baptists—Dr. J. W. Carter, Raleigh, N. C.

THURSDAY, DEC 6.

9:30 a. m.—Praise service, led by Rev. R. T. Vann, Scotland Neck, N. C.

10 a. m.—The kind of Young People's So-ciety North Carolina needs: (1) Devotional—Rev. A. M. Simms, Raleigh; (2) Evange-listic—Rev. J. H. Edwards, Fayetteville; (3) Educational—Rev. F. H. Martin, Lum-berton.

11 a. m.—Open parliament: What is your Society doing! Conducted by Rev. J. Q Adams, Wadesboro.

2:30 p. m.—Praise service led by Rev. J. S. Hardaway, Oxford.

2:50 p. m.—Conference on State organi-zation.

2:45 p. m.—Culture for service. Dr. T. Hume, Chapel Hill; Rev. M. P. Matheny, Gastonia.

Speeches to be limited to thirty minutes.

R. VAN DEVENTER,
For the Committee appointed by the State Convention.

Thirty Days.

The Treasurer's report in this paper shows the receipt of $8,938 62 for State Missions since Dec. 1st, 1893. His report to the Con-vention will close Saturday, Dec. 1st, 1894. To go to the Convention free of debt the Treasurer must receive in the next thirty days $6,061.38 for State Missions. This will be $220 46 per day for each day which now remains. There are nine Associations yet to be held. The last one to be held this year will close November 17th. The Treas-urer of every Association is most earnestly requested to report promptly all the money paid out on the field, and to forward all the money on hand to J. D. Boushall.

It is most important, too, for every mis-sionary to send in promptly on Nov. 1st the last quarterly report. In haste,

Oct. 30, 1894. C. DURHAM.

How North Carolina Stands.

Dear Brethren of North Carolina:—Ac-cording to an apportionment of the amount needed to pay off all obligations and support our missionaries in the field this year, we should look to your State from May 1st, 1894, to Oct. 15th, for $4,125. In that time we have received $2,092 57; W. Convention, $402 75.

"Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come."—1. Cor. 16: 2.

The work is the Lord's and we are His. North Carolina has had and has now some noble workers on the field. Support them, brethren. It is God's work.

Fraternally,
R. J. WILLINGHAM, Cor. Sec.
Richmond, Va., Oct. 20, 1894.

To Those Who will Attend the Convention.

All who expect to attend the Convention in Charlotte, Dec. 6th, will please forward their names to the undersigned.

Homes will be provided for the delegates, and cheap rates of board secured at the ho-tels for visitors.

Let us hear from you at an early day.

To the Ladies of Robeson Association.

My Dear Sisters:—We expect to hold a Ladies' Meeting at the Robeson Association (which meets with Ashpole church) on Wednesday, Nov. 14th, by the request of our President, Miss Heck, and we hope to have a good meeting, and help and encour-age the missionary societies of Robeson As-sociation, and we want you to come, if pos sible, and let us hear from your Society. We would be glad if each Society would write a brief report of its work, telling the number of members, the amount contrib uted for missions last year, and tell how your work is progressing in all its depart-ments. You will greatly encourage us by your presence, and we hope to accomplish some good by this meeting.

Hoping to see you at the Association and the Ladies' Meeting on Wednesday,

I remain your friend in the work,
MRS. F. H. MARTIN.

Letter From China.

THE WAR BETWEEN JAPAN AND CHINA—THE JAPS MAY WIN.

We are just now in more or less suspense in China. A few weeks ago war was de-clared between Japan and China over the question which of these two greater powers should control Corea. Corea has heretofore owned allegiance to China. Corea is a pe-ninsula lying between the Yellow and the Japan seas, and will be of great value to the commerce and naval interests of either Ja-pan, China or Russia, and it is possible that while China and Japan fight over it Russia may come in and take it.

We in the interior of China are so far re-moved from the scene by very slow means of communication that the news is old by the time we receive it. I suspect that the people of Shelby may hear news of the great features of the war before I will, though I am perhaps not over 1,000 miles from the field of the conflict. The last news we had was that soldiers were being poured into Corea both from Japan and China, that Ja-pan had captured the palace with its occu pants, and had attacked and sunk a Chinese transport vessel, drowning at one blow 1,200 Chinese soldiers. Our next news may be that the war is ended, or that it has assumed much greater proportions. The Chinese have but little fighting skill and much less bravery, hence their expensive equipments do not amount to a great deal, especially their naval equipments. The Japanese are much more like western nations in the vim, tact and courage with which they carry on war.

This war is affecting trade in China al-ready very materially. The women and children in this city feel it. This is a straw-braid-making district. It is made for the foreigh market, and just in the last few days the price has dropped down from 80 or 90 cash to 50 cash a bunch. This means a loss of thousands of dollars to even this small re-gion on this one commodity. Then all im ports will also immediately shoot up in prices and so it works hard upon this poverty stricken people. All this makes one long earnestly for the coming of the time when "the nations shall learn war no more." It not only effects the poor natives, but the missionary as well who is here for their good. All Japanese steamers are cut off between Japan and China. These are the steamers that usually convey our mails to and from Shanghai and so we have now to trust to other steamers. The last news we have from the United States is now nearly two months old. Two other mails are due, and we are looking for our messenger hourly to return from Chefoo, but he may return without any U. S. mail. It has been two weeks to day since our last U. S. mail reached us. Our use of Japanese stamps may also cause many of our letters going home to be lost. We took to U. S. stamps as soon as we learned the situation. All these waitings and di s appointments are trying on one's patience, but a few years in interior China greatly im-proves his patience if it does not utterly ruin it.

We are in good health and spirits. We realize that we are in God's hands and that He is over all. We feel that our hottest weather is past now. It has been unusually hot this summer. We trust that all goes well with our friends on that side of the world.—G. P. Bostick, in Shelby Aurora.

Catawba River Association

Dear Bro. Bailey:—The Catawba River Association convened with Enon church in Burke county, near Connelly Springs, Thursday before the second Sunday in this month, in its sixty second annual meeting. The churches were all represented either by messengers or letter.

The annual sermon was preached by Bro. E A. Poe, and was good and appropriate. Brethren J. H. Hoffman and R. L. Moore were re-elected Moderator and Clerk, and both make efficient officers, and are popular with the brethren.

A number of visiting brethren were pres-ent, among whom I recall brethren M. P. Matheny, C. S. Cashwell, C. M. Murchison, C. E. Gower, J. H. Mills, W. R. Bradshaw and Baumgarner, and J S. Gwaltney. These brethren took an active part in the work of the Association.

Bro. Matheny spoke on education, C. E. Gower on periodicals, Cashwell and Brad-shaw on orphanage. Bro. Mills, coming in after the discussion and adoption of the re-port on orphanage, was given an hour on Saturday to present the claims of the or-phans, followed with a cash collection. The Association pledged something over $200 for the orphans next year.

Bro. R. L Patton made a strong speech on Foreign Missions, but was very conser-vative toward the Foreign Mission Board, yet very decided in his convictions as to method of foreign mission work. The As-sociation pledged about $250 to pay Brother Patton's passage to China some time next year, and in case Bro. Patton is prevented, the money is to be forthcoming for some one else.

The Association the past year paid $200 or more dollars to Bro. Blalock. All the brethren of this Association want is liberty to work as they think most scriptural, giv-ing all who differ with them perfect liberty to work in the way they think is right.

The report on periodicals recommended the Foreign Mission Journal and Home Field. Any brethren or churches in the Association that wish to send their contri-butions through the Foreign Mission Board are at perfect liberty to do so. I was glad to find such a broad and conservative spirit in this old time honored Association.

The report on State Missions, as first of-fered, virtually severed the Association, but it was promptly vetoed, and sent back to the committee, and next day a good State Mission report was offered and unanimously adopted, some of the brethren asserting strongly that two years hence the State Con-vention would be asked to meet with the Morganton church.

A spirited discussion was had on the tem-perance report, some of the brethren advo-cating rather extreme views, but a compro-mise was agreed upon, but failed to compro-mise all the brethren; but it is to be hoped all will work out right before another Asso ciation.

I did not hear the report on Home Mis-sions, it coming up after I left.

The brethren gave no encouragement to State aid in higher education.

Sermons were preached at night by breth-ren Setzer and Baumgarner.

Bro. Setzer is from South Fork Associa-tion, and is anxious to go to Wake Forest College. He is a promising young man.

I learn Bro. Patton preached an able ser-mon on Sunday to a large gathering on the subject of hell and possibly eternal punish-ment.

Brother Gower has been pastor of Enon church for two years, but is to be succeeded by Bro. J. S. Gwaltney of Amherst, Bro. Gower contemplating taking work else-where. Bro. Gower looked well after the comfort of all the delegates and visitors. The hospitality of Enon church and com-munity was all that could be desired.

The next session will convene with the Morganton church at the usual time.

Bro. R. L. Moore is having a good school at Amherst Academy. He is a live man, and is the right man in the right place.

A Tribute to Col. W. A. Albright.

"And the elements
So mixed in him, that Nature might stand up,
And say to all the world, "This is a man"

Fifty-eight years ago the 25th of last March, among the hills of Alamance, not far from Haw Fields, the subject of this sketch first saw the light. His parents were members of the Methodist Prostestant church, and he was brought up in the fear of the Lord. He was converted early in life and joined the Presbyterian church at Haw Fields. About twenty-five years ago, when I went as pastor to the old Alamance Circuit, I made his acquaintance. He was then Judge of the Probate Court, and I think the most popular man in Alamance county. This acquaintance in after years ripened into warm and intimate friendship which lasted until August 30th, 1894, when he departed this life. In heaven I confidently expect this acquaintance to be renewed and last forever.

During the last four years he has been one of my nearest and best neighbors as well as one of my most intimate friends; so I have had opportunities of knowing him that many others did not have, and I can truly say the better I knew him the more consistent and beautiful appeared his daily life, and to me as well as to others, his death has been a deep personal bereavement.

Col. Albright was tall and large in body, with a finely shaped head and noble brow, a bright and genial face, and a heart large in proportion as his body and as responsive to genuine love, sympathy and suffering as ever throbbed in human bosom. His intellect was strong, his judgment fine, and his knowledge of men and things extensive and remarkably accurate. There were in him elements that would have made of him a leader in legislative halls, if he had belonged to the dominant political party of his State. As it was, he was appointed Probate Judge in his native county in 1865; elected to the same office three times afterwards, resigning before the close of his last term; and then filled for five years the most important office in our city with as much satisfaction as it was possible for mortal man to have done.

As a citizen he was true, patriotic, cherishing a deep and abiding interest in the welfare of Durham, N. C., and the entire country. As a neighbor, he was a model that any of us might do well to imitate. As a friend, he could be trusted at all times and under all circumstances, and never failed in the hour of need. To the sick, suffering and poor, he was a true friend, finding time to visit them in their homes and administer comfort in both word and deed. As a husband and father, he was loving and devoted, gentle and thoughtful, looking far more to the comfort of wife and children than his own.

In some of the elements of his character, we have other men equal, perhaps superior, but in him blended more of the elements of true and noble manhood than are often found in one man. As a well-rounded character, he stood in the front rank.

In 1873 he dedicated his life more fully than ever before to the service of God, and together with his family, became a member of the Baptist church; and from then until the close of his life, first in Graham and the last seven years in Durham, he has been among the foremost in every good word and work. In the First Baptist church at Durham where he held his membership, he was a Deacon and Superintendent of the Sunday-school; also Moderator of the Mt. Zion Union Meeting, and for the last three years Moderator of the Mt. Zion Association. But while true to his own church, his good works were not confined within denominational lines. He was one of the Executive Committee of the North Carolina Sunday-school Union and President of the Durham County Bible Society, and was ready to lend a helping hand in everything that tended to the elevation of humanity and the glory of God.

Surely, when such a man's work is done, he deserves far more than I have said in his praise, and I am glad to be permitted to pay this tribute to his life and character. But his work is done, and he is gone. We shall not again in this life look into his genial face or behold his manly form, nor will we again feel the warm grasp of his hand or hear his kindly voice. In the early morning of a lovely September day, with religious service conducted by his pastor and the funeral rites of the Masonic Fraternity, in his native soil by the side of loved ones already sleeping there, we laid his mortal remains to rest.

Farewell, dear friend and brother, until life's work is done. Then again we hope to meet and greet thee, and forever live with thee and all the glorified ones in our Father's house above.

Literary.

The leading article in The Forum for November will be "The Political Career and Character of David B. Hill," by an anonymous writer, who will attempt to make an independent measure of Senator Hill's position and influence in national politics. In the same number, Ex-Senator Edmunds will discuss the question of the popular election of United States Senators—a noteworthy article from perhaps our highest constitutional authority, and a man who has himself had long Senatorial experience.

"Thoughts for the Occasion," patriotic and secular, a repository of historical data and facts, golden thoughts and words of wisdom. Helpful in suggesting themes and outlining addresses for the observance of timely occasions indicated by our secular calendar year. Arbor Day. Discovery Day. Flag raising Day. Grant's Birth day. Independence Day. Lincoln's Birth day. Orange men's Day. Decoration Day. Emancipation Day. Forefather's Day. Labor Day. Liberty Day. St. Patrick's Day. Temperance Service. Washington's Birth Day. This truly helpful volume for pastors, teachers and others who are called upon to make addresses, gives evidence of a vast amount of research in collating such a wide range of thoughts from the best authors for so many occasions. 576 square 12mo pages, $1 75. There is an unfailing charm about a Scotch story which all will acknowledge. The quaint, half shortening of the words, and the broadening of the vowels, are attractive to our American ears. Mrs. Rouse is well known by her Scotch stories, and this new one from her pen will be welcomed by the many readers of her previous books.

A Hand Book of the Bible. A Compendium of Facts and Curiosities By the Rev. Wm. Turner. 335 pages, cloth binding. Price, $1.00 postpaid. Thomas Whitaker, Publisher, 2 & 3 Bible House, New York.

The Bible to be read intelligently requires the aid of some other book or books which shall explain things concerning it which ought to be known by the reader. This admirable hand-book imparts the desired information. It explains the design of the Bible, its authenticity, its antiquity, its divisions, its chronology, its geography, its genealogies, the formation of the Old Testament, the Hebrew months and measures, obsolete terms, and Jewish history from B. C. 396 to A. D 89. It gives titles of the alleged missing books of the Old Testament and the New Testament, and some remarks about them; the special prayers of both Testaments; lists of miracles and parables; an index of the first line of each psalm; the names of Gentile countries and nations; about two hundred and fifty names and titles of Christ, with references to chapters and verses containing them; His discourses arranged in the order of the time of their delivery; the authors of the books of the Bible, where, when, and for whom each book was written; biographies of the New Testament writers; symbols of the evangelists and apostles; how and where the apostles died, and the floral emblems of the Christian church. It tells about the Jewish doctrines and opinions and ecclesiastical officers and sects, misquotations from Scripture, Bibles with singular names and many other things, and some of which are quite curious. An extensive index and good illustrations make the book additionally valuable.

"For Years,"

Says CARRIE E. STOCKWELL, of Chesterfield, N. H., "I was afflicted with an extremely severe pain in the lower part of the chest. The feeling was as if a ton weight was laid on a spot the size of my hand. During the attacks, the perspiration would stand in drops on my face, and it was agony for me to make a sufficient effort even to whisper. They came suddenly, at any hour of the day or night, lasting from thirty minutes to half a day, leaving as suddenly; but, for several days after, I was quite prostrated and sore. Sometimes the attacks were almost daily, then less frequent. After about four years of this suffering, I was taken down with bilious typhoid fever, and when I began to recover, I had the worst attack of my old trouble I ever experienced. At the first of the fever, my mother gave me Ayer's Pills, my doctor recommending them as being better than anything he could prepare. I continued taking these Pills, and so great was the benefit derived that during nearly thirty years I have had but one attack of my former trouble, which yielded readily to the same remedy."

Every Dose Effective

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON, RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its massing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

SAVES THE BABIES.

For Teething, Cholera Infantum, Summer Complaint, and other troubles common to children, Germetuer is beyond doubt the greatest of all remedies. Nothing on earth will take children through the trying ordeal of teething so pleasantly, safely and surely as Germetuer. They all like to take it, and it acts like magic in meeting the troubles of that critical period. It is perfectly harmless, containing no alcohol or opium in any form whatever. Thousands have tried it and it has never been known to fail.

"SAVED OUR BABY."

Mr. J. T. McAllister, of Atlanta, Ga., says: "Germetuer saved our baby, Paul, carried him safely through an extremely bad case of dysentery and teething, and from a mere skeleton of skin and bones, it has made him a great big solid chunk of thirty or thirty-five pounds.

"FAT AS A PIG."

J. J. Scruggs, of Sidon, Miss., says: "Our little girl, nine months old, was in a very low state from summer complaint, and Germetuer made her as fat as a pig."

"FAT AND GROWING."

Rev. J. I. Oxford, Atlanta, Ga., says: "My baby was sick from its birth, and we expected it would die. At the age of nine months we began to give it Germetuer. The effects were magical. It began to improve at once and is now fat and growing every day."

"WELL AND FAT."

G. W. Clarke, McGregor, Texas, says: "Our little baby daughter has been cured of a violent case of Summer Diarrhœa from teething, by the use of Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. She had been reduced nearly to a skeleton. The first dose of Germetuer helped her, and now she is well and fat."

Germetuer is the thing for children;
It's good as lemonade to take
And cures sick folks without mistake.

New Testament Studies—No. 10.

BY RIGHT C. MOORE.

THE EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS.

1. Rome in the time of Paul. Ancient Rome, lying on the seven hills by the Tiber, fifteen miles from its mouth, was the seat of the empire and the metropolis of the world. The imperial city is mentioned in only three books in the New Testament—Acts, Romans, and second Timothy. Nero, a wicked and heartless tyrant, was the reigning emperor. The inhabitants of Rome at this time, according to Gibbon, numbered twelve hundred thousand. Half the population consisted of slaves gathered from all the known nations of the earth. The wealthy nobility were few but influential, and there were large numbers of pauper citizens who relied for support upon the public gratuities.

2. Jews in Rome. Cicero in his defence of Flaccus (B. C. 59) informs us that the Jews in Rome were then numerous, wealthy and influential. Their number was augmented by the conquest of Pompey when many Jewish captives and emigrants were brought to Rome. They were assigned a separate district across the Tiber and many of them became freedmen. Protected and favored by Julius Cæsar and Augustus, they rapidly increased in strength and general prosperity. And although they were severely persecuted under Tiberius and banished by Claudius, still they flourished; even winning, according to Tacitus, numerous proselytes from among the Roman freeman in the face of the violent ridicule thereby incurred.

3. Introduction of Christianity. Though a matter of slight fractical importance, this has been a subject of much historical research and conjecture. When and by whom the new faith was planted in the metropolis is not likely to be known with absolute certainty. However, it is highly probable (1) that the church at Rome was not founded by Peter since there is no conclusive evidence that Peter ever saw Rome and since Paul never interfered with another apostle's field of labor. (2) That Paul was not the founder is evident from the fact that the church was already established and famous before either his epistle was written or his visit was made. (3) Since the Roman Jews were in constant communication with Jerusalem, it is generally believed that the "strangers from Rome," present at Pentecost, were converted and returned to declare the achievements of Christianity and set its standard in the heart of the world.

4. Composition of the church. (1) As regards nationality there were at least three prominent peoples represented in the Roman church: the Jews who introduced the new faith; the Romans who, amid their own decaying religious systems, longed for a loftier morality; and the Greeks who here embraced the religion already popular in their native land. (2) The company of Roman believers was composed of both Jews and Gentiles. Some scholars (as Sabatier) believe that the Jews were greatly in the majority, while others (as Dods) conclude that the Gentile exceeded the Jewish membership. The latter view is held on the ground (a) that it is justified by the language of the Jews to Paul when he visited Rome and (b) that in the closing salutations of the epistle the majority of the names mentioned are Gentile and for the most part Greek. (3) The type of Christianity seems to have been neither actively Pauline nor positively Jewish-Christian. The epistle does not warrant the supposition of greatly strained relations existing between the two sections of the church. That such a state of affairs might arise was not improbable, but as yet "the church was virgin, and therefore neutral soil."

5. Occasion of the Epistle. "Rome was the true metropolis to which every road led, which received from all the provinces whatever they possessed of interest or value, and which distributed to the world law, order, civilization." Naturally, Paul wished there to promulgate the doctrines so dear to himself. More than once he expressed the desire to visit the imperial city (1 Rom. 1: 13; Acts 19: 21). At least he decides to undertake the journey after carrying to Jerusalem a poor fund collected from the churches of Macedonia and Achaia. Before leaving for Palestine he writes his letter to the Romans. He hopes thus to supply the lack of needed personal teaching, to pave the way for his intended visit (as did a letter to the church at Corinth), and to prepare the church to aid him in carrying out his proposed journey into Spain.

6. Language. It is not a little singular that Paul should write a letter in Greek to a city where the Latin language was created and cherished. But it must be remembered that the Greek language had now become the language of culture and commerce. "The active, pushing and pliable Greek was possessing himself of every remunerative business, of all promising commercial and social activity at the metropolis." Juvenal, the Roman satirist, upbraided Rome for having become a Greek city. A large number of the Roman believers were doubtless Greek, and the rest were perfectly familiar with their tongue. Greek is also the language of the early literature of the church at Rome and of many of the inscriptions in the catacombs.

7. Composition. The letter to the Romans was in all probability written at Corinth where Paul spent the winter of 57–58 A. D. on his third visit to that church. Paul was living with Gaius (Rom. 16: 23), who was a Corinthian (1 Cor. 1: 14), and Erastus, a resident of Corinth (2 Tim. 4: 20), and chamberlain of the city (Rom. 16: 23), salutes the church at Rome. Phœbe, a deaconess of the Cenchrean church, is commended to the Romans (16: 1, 2) and, since she was on the eve of the departure for Rome, it is thought that she conveyed the letter to its destination.

8. Design. (1) The great theme of this epistle is justification by faith—the one way of salvation for Jew and Gentile. The all-sufficiency of this faith is forcibly presented and strongly emphasized. (2) The Apostle here justifies his mission to the Gentiles, and his letter is an exposition of the applicability of the gospel to them as well as to the Jews.

9. Genuineness. Some suspicions have arisen regarding the integrity of the closing portions of the Epistle. By some (Marcion, Baur), parts of the last two chapters have been rejected, but without sufficient reasons, according to the ablest critics (Mander, De Wette, Olshausen). To account for some discrepancies in a few important manuscripts, it is believed either that several different editions of the Epistle were sent out to separate churches, or that Paul adapted the letter to general circulation by omitting the last two chapters and the words "in Rome."

10. Facts and features. (1) The body of the letter was written by Tertius at the dictation of Paul; the doxology, judging from its abruptness, being added with the Apostle's own hand. (2) It has comparatively few direct and personal allusions. (3) The treatment of the subject is so logical and systematic that it may properly be termed a treatise. (4). This Epistle is regarded as giving "the religious philosophy of the world's history." (5) Sometimes Paul directly addresses the Jews (2: 17, 27; 4: 1), and sometimes the Gentiles (1: 13; 11: 3; 15: 16). (6) The names in the letter are Greek rather than Latin. (7) Here is found the fullest and most systematic exposition of the Apostle's teaching, and also a striking expression of his character. (8) In this letter Paul is "true to his unvarying practical aim of religious edification, and the preservation and extension of the supremacy of Christ." (9) Romans is more objective and impersonal than the other Pauline Epistles. (10) The letter seems to close repeatedly (15: 33; 16: 20, 24, 27), but is re-opened. (11) "This Epistle is rich in incidental expressions abounding in spiritual significance."

11. Style. "There is scarce a word or expression that Paul makes use of, but with relation and tendency to his present main purpose." (J. Locke). "The writer of Romans is calmer and more contemplative than in the Galatians and Corinthian letters. His thought is not so trammelled by conditions of time and locality, and flows onward with more freedom and less impetuosity. The atmosphere is not so charged with electricity and the fierce energy of his personality is below horizon." (W. L. Poteat). This Epistle is a "writing which for sublimity of truth and sentiment, for brevity and strength of expression, for regularity in its structure, but above all, for the unspeakable importance of the discoveries which it contains, stands unrivalled by any mere human composition, and as far exceeds the most celebrated productions of the learned Greeks and Romans, as the shining of the sun exceeds the twinkling of the stars." (Macknight).

12. Analysis. The introduction embraces the first seventeen verses of the Epistle. Then follows the body of the letter in two great divisions—doctrinal and ethical. The doctrinal section treats of justification by faith and covers the first eleven chapters. The substance of the doctrine is given in the first three chapters and illustrated in the fourth and fifth; chapters six, seven and eight deal with sanctification; the remaining three chapters of this section relate to the privileges of the Jews and Gentiles. [See Broadus: Sermons and Addresses, p. 181]. The last five chapters are devoted to an ethical exposition of practical affairs. Chapters twelve and thirteen contain exhortations to love and obedience; the next two chapters relate to the weak and embrace some personal communication; the last chapter contains various salutations and the conclusion of the Epistle.

McClure's Magazine for November has as the frontispiece the famous painting of Napoleon by Greuze, perhaps the most remarkable of the fifteen early portraits of Napoleon. The first painting of Napoleon was made under peculiar circumstances. He was a mere youth, a second-lieutenant, and utterly unknown to fame and wretchedly poor. The famous painter, Greuze, happened to be passing through Valence, where Napoleon was stationed, and Madame du Colombier, a lady of prominence into whose circle Napoleon had been admitted, ordered the painter to make his portrait, saying that, if no misfortune befel him, he would play a great role. The portrait passed from Madame du Colombier to her daughter, Madame de Bressieux, and at the death of the latter, it was acquired by the uncle of the present owner, who is the Marquis de Las Cases.

A Chinese Woman's Sacrifice.

Pastor Hsi, a native Chinese Christian, was a most devoted servant of Christ. The city of Hoh-chau (writes Mr. Hudson Taylor, the well-known missionary), on the main road to the capital, was much on the heart of Pastor Hsi. Day by day, at family prayers, he pleaded for that place and neighborhood, deeply feeling its spiritual destitution. At last his wife said to him:

"You are always praying for Hon-chau. Why do you not go and commence an Opium Refuge there, as you have done in so many other places?"

"I have spent all," he replied, "that I can use in this way: unless the Lord supply the means, no more can be attempted."

"Why," she responded, "what do you think it would cost?" "Twenty to thirty thousand cash," he answered gravely. (About £5 sterling.)

When the wife heard that she went away and said no more. But she could not forget it. There was a city needing the gospel. Here were ready, willing workers, longing to enter it. But means were lacking. What could she do?

Next morning the good pastor pleaded, as usual, the need and darkness of Hoh-chau. What was his surprise, as he rose from his knees, to see his wife standing beside him with all her jewelry, including many much prized possessions, which she handed to him, saying, "I can do without these. Sell them, and let Hoh-chau have the gospel."

Here, surely, is a striking lesson for Christian sisters at home! The city soon had its opium refuge and a good work commenced.

Mr. W. D. Powell, evangelist, Toluca, writes: "There are 11,000,000 people in this republic; 10,000,000 of that number never saw a copy of the Bible. The majority of Mexican people are so ignorant as to be little more than children. Since I wrote to you last, one of our candidates for baptism has been killed, and another stabbed seven times and left for dead. But the work goes forward. I beg for thousands of tracts in Spanish—short, direct, simple gospel tracts."

The Christian world must not forget Clara Barton and her Red Cross Society. What she did during the civil war, in caring for the sick and wounded and dying, was enough to immortalize any name. Again, in Europe she displayed the same noble qualities. And now, with less than $35,000, it is said that she and her helpers have actually cared for 30,000 people who were left homeless by the dreadful cyclone which swept the coast of South Carolina in August, 1893.

It is gratifying to note that the Japanese Christians are sending preachers to labor among their own people in the Sandwich Islands. The Japanese pastor of the church in Honolulu has secured the services of five native ministers, who will be supported by their own countrymen. Rev. O. H. Gulick and wife are in the islands to aid in the good work of carrying the gospel to the toilers on the sugar plantations.

At least in some parts of China the truth has been fairly well planted. For a missionary affirms: "I could walk from Canton to Shanghai, over 800 miles, not walking more than twenty miles a day, and could sleep every night in a village or town that has a little Christian community."

A Baptist association in Burma is named after the place where Dr. Judson suffered his cruel imprisonment, from which he nearly died. The place is Oungpenla, or, as it is now spelled, Aungbinle. The site of the death prison is now occupied by a Baptist mission school.

When we pray let us not forget the Methodist missionary, Miss Mary Reed, who, bearing the spots of leprosy, with true Christian heroism and unselfishness, lives in seclusion among the lepers of North India, striving to free their souls from that deeper leprosy—sin—and bravely, calmly watching the slow advance of this dread disease in her own body. She ministers to the afflicted in a hospital located at Chandak Heights, in a mountain region, where suitable buildings have been constructed for the accommodation of several scores. The British Government has recently made a grant of 48 acres of land.

The prayers that we are proud of never receive any attention in heaven.—Ram's Horn.

From Georgia and Florida, On the Line.

BY WM. HENRY STRICKLAND.

"Now you see it, now you don't see it; here it is, now it's gone." It is not just that way with the writer, but Bainbridge, my base of operations, is the county-town of Decatur county, Ga, the S. W. county of the State. Gadsden county, Florida, lies adjacent and only fourteen miles away. To its county-town, Quincy, I go once a month; am preaching to a mission there. So I am in Georgia and I am not in Georgia; I am in Florida and am not in Florida.

Quincy is one of Florida's conservative old towns. It might have been on a great railroad, but away back yonder in the fifties and sixties when the Florida Central and Peninsular road was being built (the oldest line in the State) such enterprises had not won their way to favor in the public opinion—so towns, especially interior and provincial towns, looked on railroads with doubtful and suspicious eyes, and Quincy chose to be near rather than on a railroad. You hack it, or walk it, you dray your goods "upwards of a mile" through the woods part of the way from depot to court house and postoffice.

Nevertheless when you get to Quincy you find a beautiful town and a noble, high-toned people. It has been for seventy five years almost entirely Pedobaptist—no Baptist church having ever been established there, 'till, truth to tell, they think the land is theirs by right of discovery and possession. Some of them tolerate the Baptist folk with ill concealed grace, and some have been heard to say "there is no demand nor opening for a Baptist church here."

But about a dozen of us "beg leave to differ." We have about fifteen of us, and we feel set for the defense, maintenance and illustration of the truth as set forth, not by Calvin nor Wesley, nor King Henry VIII, but by Christ, Peter, John, Paul, and the rest of New Testament worth ei. We have no house over our heads, no vine and fig tree; we must needs rent the old opera house. The court house is refused us, but we stand together, and by the grace of God will yet get us a church house. Five males, each labors daily to support his family, and yet our pastor does not go away without his monthly allowance. Our little Sunday-school is alive and active. We are teaching missions, home and foreign, and contributing to them, too. We patronize our Convention literature and Kind Words, and regard them as ne plus ultra.

Not yet have the baptismal waters been troubled, but we hope to baptize soon. It will be a novel scene to the average Quincyite.

We must arise and build soon; a beautiful lot awaits us; we only need the money to buy it. Are there not a good many generous North Carolinians who will look with sympathy on us at Quincy and send us a small contribution? Florida is one of the younger and weaker States—only 15,000 white Baptists and a great many church houses to build. Send dollars or greater amounts to Deacon A. S. White, Quincy, Fla., and they will be gratefully received and promptly acknowledged.

I will write from the Georgia side next time.

I greatly enjoy the RECORDER, then pass it down the line to some one else. It is up to high-water mark all the time. Who writes those paragraphic editorials on the first page? They are better than the N. Y. Examiner's first page.

The heirs of Dr. F. T. Fuller have received three thousand dollars from the Staunton Life Insurance Company, in payment of their policy on his life. This is a prompt payment, and sustains the record that this Company has acquired by its dealings for the past twelve years. "Never delayed a payment, never compromised a claim, never had a law-suit," being its motto.

The new "Coupon Policy" they are now writing is a model of simplicity, and in addition to all the best features of modern life insurance, provides for the payment of the "coupon" immediately after death, without notice or the formality of proofs. We are glad to know that the business of the Company is rapidly increasing, as we have a policy with them ourselves.

Mr. J. J. Hayes is the General Agent with headquarters at Raleigh, and he wants good agents all over the State.

Hall's New Church Record Book.

It is something every church needs. It makes it easy to preserve the history of the church relations of every member of a church, when received, how, where, when removed, whither; residences indexed, and so arranged that a desired name can be found in a moment.

Every church ought to keep a thorough record of its membership. The need of it is apparent. Dr. Hall has studied the matter; he has examined other record books, and he has made one that excells them all. You will be pleased with it. Associational letters will be easily prepared with the aid of Hall's Record Book.

It is handsomely bound and will last a decade or more. It has been commended by all who have seen it, and is selling fast. To see it is to want it.

The Sunday school Supply Store at Raleigh keeps them.

The North American Review for October is a notable issue, containing many articles on timely and interesting topics by distinguished writers. It opens with two articles entitled "Issues of the Coming Elections," written by Hon. W. L. Wilson and ex-Speaker Reed. In "The Catholic Church and the Saloon," Archbishop Ireland explains the meaning of Mgr. Satolli's recent decision regarding liquor dealers which has caused so much discussion.

Montgomery County Baptist Association.

This Association in its sixth annual session met with Mt. Gilead church, Montgomery county, N. C., on Thursday, Oct. 18th, 1894.

The introductory sermon was preached by Rev. S. W. Fuquay from Acts 10: 38—"Who went about doing good."

After a short intermission the Association was called to order by the former Moderator, Rev. W. M. Bostic.

The list of churches was called and names of delegates enrolled. All the churches in the Association were represented by delegates.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Moderator—Rev. W. M. Bostic; Clerk—J. M. Wright; Treasurer—M. McMillan.

Thursday evening was spent on the report on the Aged Ministers Relief Board. Good speeches were made on the report by Rev. G. O. Wilhoit, and brethren H. M. Igram and J. W. Dixon.

Thursday night the writer preached from Matt. 28: 18—"All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth."

On the Friday morning's session, the reports on Temperance and Periodicals were read, and speeches thereon made by several brethren.

During the evening's session the reports on the Orphanage, Pastoral Support and Home Missions were considered. The brethren's remarks on these reports were good.

Rev. Mr. Settle preached Friday night from Rev. 22: 11—"He that is unjust, let him be unjust still, and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still; and he that is holy let him be holy still."

Dr. C. Durham came Friday evening. The report on State Missions was considered on Saturday morning. Dr. Durham was at his best. I have had the pleasure of hearing him often in our Associations and in our State Conventions, but his speech on this occasion was perhaps the best I ever heard him make. I speak the glad feeling of my heart, when I thank God for giving to the 300,000 Baptists of North Carolina Dr. C. Durham. They ought to help him in the noble, good work of giving the gospel as proclaimed by Baptists to every destitute place in North Carolina.

The session of the Association was the best one held since the Montgomery County Association was established six years ago. The brethren were in Christian love, and worked under the influence of the Master's Spirit. I believe the Association ought to do more for the work of missions in her own bounds and for missions abroad. I say this because I have acquainted myself with her condition. God blesses those who work for themselves, and who do not forget to give a helping hand to others.

May the blessing of God rest upon the Montgomery County Association, and may she do more and more for herself and others.

Dr. Skinner's Book.

This volume, entitled "Sermons, Addresses, and Reminiscences," has recently come into my hands through the courtesy of the author. A hasty glance through its pages has afforded me much pleasure. It is a distinctively North Carolina book; its author and publishers being North Carolinians, and its contents, apart from the sermons, relate mainly to persons and events in this State. Messrs. Edwards and Broughton have displayed their usual care and neatness in printing and binding, and have given us a book of 437 pages at the remarkably low price of one dollar. The frontispiece is a speaking likeness of the author as he sometimes appears, but his friends will think that the artist must have caught him in too serious a mood; that stern aspect is seldom worn by the features of the genial Doctor.

The title pretty clearly indicates the scope of the book, but not its real excellence and value. The sketches and skeletons of sermons, of which there are about a hundred, are for the most part clear, terse, pungent, suggestive, and thoroughly spiritual. Judiciously used they ought to be of great service to the average preacher. The twenty nine revival sermons strike me as specially good. Of the six addresses those on "The Prohibitory Liquor Law," "Denominational Strength," and "Charles W. Skinner" (by John W. Moore) possess exceptional interest and value.

The "Reminiscences" while relating mainly to persons and affairs in and about Raleigh, will be found exceedingly interesting to all who care to know the really remarkable story of Baptist beginnings in our capitol. In the brief sketches of men as in no other part of the book one sees Dr. Skinner's own personality. He writes precisely as he speaks in off hand addresses and in the social circle; the same colloquial style, rambling freedom, and volatile humor, and all thoroughly enjoyable.

The critical reader of the volume would detect a slip or two in dates and minor facts, a lack of completeness in a few of the sermon sketches, some evidences of haste in the latter part of the book, betrayed in a somewhat careless cast of sentences now and then, a point in which Dr. Skinner is usually watchful and happy—and a few expressions which, after allowing for the freedom of colloquial style, scarcely comport with the dignity of the work. Nor would he be likely always to agree with the author's views. But these are trifling defects in a book that is really valuable.

Under God, Dr. Skinner more than any other man first gave strength and dignity and the foremost place to the Baptists in Raleigh, and bore no small part in laying the foundation of our present denominational strength. A book from him, therefore, from its intrinsic merits, is entitled to a respectful and generous reception in North Carolina.

Resignation of Rev. M. V. MacDuffie.

Dear Recorder:—For several weeks I have had under consideration the matter of changing my field of labor, and on yesterday resigned my pastorate here to accept the call extended to me some weeks ago to become the pastor of the Middle Street or First Baptist church of Portsmouth, New Hampshire. Portsmouth is a very pretty and healthy city, fifty-eight miles from Boston, and is the only port of entrance in New Hampshire.

It has been hard for me to make up my mind to leave the friends in New Brunswick, with whom I have been for more than eight years. They have not accepted my resignation yet, but I hope it will be accepted. I want to begin work in New England in December. I will dedicate our splendid new house of worship before I go.

We have 484 members in the church. During my ministry here, 204 have joined. I have baptized 140. Others are waiting to be received. Without resorting to any of those questionable methods so common in this age and lowering to the dignity of religion and the church of God, and preventive of the development of true Christian benevolence, we have raised in this church more money for church expenses, missions and benevolence, than was ever raised in it in any eight preceding years of the church's history. And we have built our new church and partially furnished the Sunday-school room. Thus has been demonstrated the correctness of the doctrine we have taught as to the best way of getting money for the Lord's work.

Up to a few weeks ago it looked as if our new church which, together with the lot, has cost about $48,000 or $50,000, would be dedicated with a $25,000 debt on it. But I have secured by personal work in the last two or three weeks over $17,000 of the entire amount and hope to dedicate the building free of debt.

We had a sad and weeping time at the church yesterday when my resignation was read. The separation of pastor and people brings tears to all our eyes. I have seldom had such an experience as I had yesterday. But a pastorate of more than eight years is long enough, and I therefore turn my face towards Portsmouth, and purpose to go still further among the "Yankees"—Portsmouth being just on the edge of the State of Maine where we of the South consider the full-blooded "Yankees" come from. My experiences during the last years with the brethren of the North have been of a nature to encourage a longer stay in the cold regions.

The RECORDER has often cheered and helped me in New Jersey, and I shall, after the middle of December, anxiously look for it in New Hampshire. The courage, faith, and zeal of our brethren in the South, and especially in the Old North State, reflected in the reports, letters, &c., of the RECORDER, do those of us who have moved to other States good. We often seem to be drinking at the old fountains as we read in the RECORDER the words of beloved brethren at whose feet we sat in other years for sound instruction. May the years of their useful and holy lives be multiplied and "their shadows never grow less" in the land we love.

"There's a magical tie to the land of our home,
Which the heart cannot break,
Though the footsteps may roam."

Yours truly, M. V. MCDUFFIE.

Beulah Dots.

Dear Recorder:—We closed our meeting at Beulah the second Sunday in this month. Bro. W. W. White was with me and did most of the preaching. He is a very earnest and forceful preacher, and won for himself a warm place in the hearts of all our people. The meeting was a good one. Thirteen professed faith in Christ, and eight united with the church.

On the last day of the meeting I buried six in baptism. We are expecting others to join soon.

While rejoicing over the blessings of the Lord in the meeting, our hearts were made sad at the announcement of the very sudden and unexpected death of Bro. W. B. Graves of our town, and one of the oldest members of the Yanceyville Baptist church. The angel came just before the dawn of the second Sabbath and bore his life away, leaving us to mourn our loss.

On Tuesday evening following, his daughter, Mrs. Hattie Lea, who had been suffering for a long time with consumption, breathed her life out, sweetly confiding in the precious promises of Jesus. She was a member of Kerr's Chapel church.

May God bless the bereaved, and may "these light afflictions work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

Dr. W. J. Hawkins, Raleigh, died in Philadelphia Oct. 28th.

A business college will be established at Wilmington next month.

Mr. M. H. McIver of Sanford, a well-known citizen, died last week.

David Vance, son of the lamented Senator Vance, died last week at Morganton.

Howard Gaskill, a boatman, fell from a bark in the river at Newbern, the 25th, and was drowned.

Circuses are "doing" the State. The people had better keep their money than invest it so foolishly.

Fifty per cent. of the corn crop along the Cape Fear river bottoms has been ruined by recent freshets.

The "Daughters of the Revolution" at Wilmington will erect a monument to Cornelius Harnett, patriot.

The bankrupt People's Bank of Fayetteville has declared another dividend. To date sixty per cent. has been paid.

The Southern Railway is prospering under the new regime. One thousand new cars and eight locomotives have been ordered.

Dr. Beverly Carradine of Missouri is aiding Rev. D. H. Tuttle in a series of meetings in the Central Methodist church, Raleigh.

Rev. W. B. Arrowood of Laurinburg was elected Moderator of the Presbyterian Synod of North Carolina, which met in Greensboro last week.

Government officers brought $68,000 to this State last week to pay Cherokee land claims. The money is to be paid to Cherokee land settlers.

Two engines—the north-bound and south-bound mail trains—collided at Henderson the 27th. No one seriously hurt; engines considerably damaged.

Mr. W. C. Stronach of Raleigh has been chosen President of the North Carolina Confederate Veterans' Association, Col. E. D. Hall having resigned.

The Southern Railway warehouse at Asheville, four loaded cars and four shanty cars were destroyed by fire at Asheville the 27th. Loss, $8,000; covered by insurance.

It is reported that the "top crop" of cotton is opening unusually abundantly in many sections of this State. The corn crop is uniformly good, and the price is comparatively very good.

The general opinion is that the State Fair at Raleigh last week was the occasion of the most superb display of North Carolina products that has been made since the great Exposition; and even that did not surpass the late Fair in variety or excellence. The live stock, the poultry, etc., showed plainly that the State has been making great advances in this important feature. The attendance was very satisfactory.

An attempt was made Tuesday, the 23rd, to ship a package of stamps from Laurinburg to New York. The stamps are supposed to have been stolen from the postoffice at Bennettsville, S. C., which was recently robbed. The stamps were held by order of the government and detectives are looking for the men who tried to make the shipment. There were three men in the party, and two of them went from Laurinburg to Wilmington.—Landmark.

At the election next Tuesday, the following offices are to be filled: State Treasurer; Chief Justice and two Associate Justices of the Supreme Court; Judges of the Superior Court for the Third district, the Fourth, the Eighth, the Ninth, the Tenth, and the Twelfth; a Legislature that will choose two United States Senators; and Congressmen from the nine Congressional districts of the State. County officers, etc., are also to be elected. It is stated on good authority that six hundred political speeches have been made every working day for several weeks in this State.

During the past year the following roads were entirely or in part constructed: Glenden and Gulf, 6 26 miles; Wilmington, Newbern and Norfolk, 14 10 miles; Northampton and Hertford, 9 00 miles. Total, 29 36 miles. The follow were abandoned: Cashie and Roanoke, 15 miles; Jamesville and Washington, 15 miles. The taxable property was increased during the year $336,656.89. The valuation of railroad property in this State prior to the organization of the Ry. commission as a board of appraisers in 1890 was $13,494,540; in 1894, $24,565,611, being an increase of 100 per cent. The North Carolina Railroad is now the only corporation property within the State in part exempt from taxation. The efforts of the Governor to do away with this exemption and the difficulties attending the same, will doubtless form a part of his forthcoming message to the Legislature.

General News.

The President has returned to Washington. He called the first Cabinet meeting of the fall the 25th.

Sixteen persons perished and several others were severely injured in a hotel fire at Seattle, Wash., the 27th.

Cotton made a new low record the 19th, the futures for every month until next July being sold below six cents.

Northwestern Nebraska was swept by forest fires the latter part of last week. Thousands of cattle perished, and much general property was destroyed.

It is now known that the great Virginia train robbery was achieved by two bold men. One of them, Searcy, is under arrest. Most of the booty has been recovered.

The Czar of Russia and the Japan-China war have passed the week without being the subject of any sensational report. The newspapers are more interested in politics just at this juncture.

Adam Bede, United States Marshal in Minnesota, has resigned his position, assigning as his reason that he wishes to engage in campaigning, but thinks it would not be right to do so while drawing a Federal salary. He has made himself remarkable by doing what any man ought.

Chancellor Von Caprivi, whose sensational ascendency to the premiership of the German empire, succeeding Prince Bismarck, was a subject of much speculation, has resigned. The German Emperor has gained so much of the public confidence that this occurrence has created no apprehension.

The Russian situation is undergoing a decided phase this week. The heir to the throne, whose immediate prospects, according to reports about the Czar's health, are indubitable, will be married to the Princess Alix. The latter had to change her religion in order that proper compatibility, etc., may be assured.

Small pox has broken out at the National capital. There are six or seven cases. The epidemic was brought from New England by a little girl. There is no serious alarm, as vaccination will easily stay the disease. The Interior Department was closed Friday in order that its occupants might be vaccinated and other preventative measures taken.

MARRIED.

MOTSINGER—HINE—On Oct. 17th, 1894, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Andrew Hine, by C. H. Teague, J. P., Mr. W. F. Motsinger of Guilford and Miss Carrie Hine of Davidson.

DIED.

SMITH—Mrs. Isabella, wife of Chas. Smith of Beaufort, quietly passed away at three o'clock on Friday morning, Sept. 22, 1894. She was born Oct. 11, 1875. In her, the sorrowing had a sympathizer; the weak, a willing helper; her home, a centre of attraction, and her church, a beautiful worker. Her loss is keenly felt, but God cannot err.

PASTOR.

GRAVES—Bro. W. B. Graves died at his home in Yanceyville Sunday morning, Oct. 14th, in the 68th year of his age. In his death Yanceyville has lost one of its oldest and best citizens, our church one of its strongest pillars, and his family one of the kindest of husbands, and best of fathers. He had been a member of the church about fifty years, and a deacon for many years. We shall all miss him, but our loss is his gain. The summons came suddenly, but he was ready. He retired at night as well as usual, and the next morning his wife awoke about five o'clock, just in time to see him breathe his last. His remains were laid to rest in the Baptist cemetery in the presence of a large and sorrowing crowd of friends.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

J. R. JONES.

Milton, N. C., Oct. 20, 1894.

EDMONDSON—Twenty years ago, when the writer first came to this town a raw and callow school boy, three men with their families showed him special kindness. One of these, Mr. J. G. Shields, left us for the better land a year ago; the second still lives, while the third, Mr. Danford Edmondson, passed away on the 18th of last August. Born Feb. 29th, 1836, in the home where he died, Mr. Edmondson spent the whole of his life in the town of his nativity, saving a year or so in Florida. Of excellent natural ability, although wanting the advantages of higher education, his fine common sense and tireless energy won for him uncommon success, both as farmer and as merchant. Probably the most strongly marked traits of his business character were indomitable will, sturdy self-reliance, and inflexible justice. Though a man of large dealings with his fellows, I never heard his integrity questioned. When a knitting mill was established in this town he was made the first president of its board of directors. He was also at one time president of the board of trustees of the town academy, of which body he was a prominent member when he died.

Mr. Edmondson made no public profession of religion. Of a spirit naturally proud and reserved in such matters, few suspected that his thoughts turned much toward God, while many supposed that he trusted in his own righteousness. And yet several months before his death he told the writer in tearful and broken speech that he had long been struggling with his old self; that he had never done anything to commend himself to God, and his own righteousness was worthless, and that he was trusting in the mercy of the Father through faith in the atoning merit of his Son. Of this "good hope through grace" he loved to speak in his last days as often as his intense suffering permitted, and in the strength which it gave he met and conquered the last foe.

His wife, (nee Miss Mary Powell,) and two daughters survive him. In their bereavement they have the sympathy of the community, but they "sorrow not even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

R. T. VANN.

ALLEN—Lewellas Burrows Allen was born in Granville county, N. C., Oct. 16th, 1839; died at his home in Franklin county, N. C., Sept. 8th, 1894, lacking one month and eight days of being fifty-five years of age.

Mr. Allen joined Franklinville Baptist church in 1858, when he was nineteen years of age. After his marriage he removed his membership to Louisburg church, and continued to be an honored member of that church until his death.

Mr. Allen's piety was not of the demonstrative or obtrusive kind. It was something far better and nobler. It was the piety of silent conviction; and it was as steady to its purpose as the laws of nature. He allowed the dictum of no one to determine what his duty was in any case. He used his own lights and his own judgment in ascertaining what should be the measure and kind of his religious duty and when he had made the line of his conduct plain to himself, no man ever acted more promptly or more cheerfully. He was a man of remarkable candor and courage. The writer was his pastor for a number of years. And he preached a sermon one Sunday which Bro. Allen and some others thought ought not to have been preached. The first time he had a chance to mention the subject before the church and the pastor together, he arose, and in the firmest and most respectful manner, declared his conviction that the pastor had done wrong in preaching that sermon. The pastor explained to all present that the position he had taken in the sermon was necessitated by his views of the truth, and could not be modified. The pastor expected that Bro. Allen would be likely to get out of sympathy with him and with his work in consequence of this difference of opinion. But not so. Neither his devotion to his church nor his cordial and affectionate treatment of his pastor suffered any diminution; and if he ever mentioned the matter outside of the church meeting, the pastor never heard of it.

Mr. Allen was one of the most enlightened and successful farmers in Franklin county, and in all business matters his word was his bond.

There was one good trait in his character which the writer has never seen in the same perfection in any one else. He never spoke ill of any one. If he could say nothing good of a person he simply said nothing at all. The writer never knew him to be either drawn or betrayed into criticising any one—no, not the meanest person of his acquaintance.

Only those who lived in the same family circle with him knew and valued him at his true worth. Such sterling Christian manhood as his did not seek to display itself abroad. It hovered around its loved ones, and sought to warm the home-nest for all those who looked to it for cherishing and protection.

Mr. Allen leaves behind him a wife and three children to mourn him and cherish the memory of his beautiful devotion to them and to all things pure and lovely.

The bereaved wife is a woman of strong and most beautiful Christian character, whose widowhood will be solaced and comforted by her numerous friends, as well as by those who knew, who loved, and now lament her husband. May it please God to bless and comfort this lonely woman and her fatherless children!

Your daily meals

can do you no good when your stomach and digestion are out of order! The food you eat does not make so much difference as the way it is digested. When in health you can eat almost anything, but when sick the most delicate dishes cause disgust!

Brown's Iron Bitters

is the best remedy for stomach troubles and indigestion you can take. It has been tried and proven for many years. It will surely cure you. Brown's Iron Bitters does not injure the teeth or cause constipation, as all other iron medicines do. If your stomach troubles you, it's Brown's Iron Bitters you need! Do not try it as an experiment merely, for many, many sufferers have told us of dyspepsia cured—health restored—you need not doubt!

The Home Circle.

Beyond

It seems such a little way to me
Across to that strange country, the beyond;
And yet not strange—for it has grown to be
The home of those of whom I am so fond;
They make it seem familiar and most dear,
As journeying friends bring distant countries near.

So close it lies that when my sight is clear,
I think I see the gleaming strand;
I know I feel that those who've gone from here
Come near enough to touch my hand.
I often think, but for our veiled eyes,
We should find heaven right 'round about us lies.

I cannot make it seem a day to dread
When from this dear earth I shall journey out
To that still dearer country of the dead,
And join the lost ones so long dreamed about.
I love this world; yet shall I love to go
And meet the friends who wait for me, I know.

I never stand about a bier and see
The seal of death set on some well loved face,
But that I think, "One more to welcome me
When I shall cross the intervening space
Between this land and that one over there,
One more to make the strange beyond seem fair."

And so to me there is no sting to death,
And so the grave has lost its victory;
It is but crossing with bated breath
And weary, set face, a little strip of sea,
To find the loved ones waiting on the shore,
More beautiful, more precious than before.

—Ella Wheeler, in Christian at Work.

Using the Pieces.

Some years ago there lived and worked in Italy a great artist in mosaics. His skill was wonderful. With bits of glass and stone he could produce the most striking works of art—works that were valued at thousands of pounds.

In his workshop was a poor little boy, whose business it was to clean up the floor and tidy up the room after the day's work was done. He was a quiet little fellow, and always did his work well. That was all the artist knew about him.

One day he came to his master and asked, timidly: "Please, master, may I have for my own the bits of glass you throw upon the floor?"

"Why, yes, boy," said the artist. "The bits are good for nothing. Do as you please with them."

Day after day, then, the child might have been seen studying the broken pieces found on the floor, laying some on one side, and throwing others away. He was a faithful little servant, and so year after year went by and found him still in the workshop.

One day his master entered a store room little used, and in looking around came upon a piece of work carefully hid behind the rubbish. He brought it to the light, and to his surprise found a noble work of art, nearly finished. He gazed at it in speechless amazement.

"What great artist could have hidden his work in my studio?"

At that moment the young servant entered the door. He stopped short on seeing his master, and when he saw the work in his hands a deep flush dyed his face.

"What is this?" cried the artist. "Tell me what great artist has hidden his masterpiece here?"

"Oh! master," faltered the astonished boy, "it is only my poor work. You know you said I might have the broken bits you threw away."

The child with an artist's soul had gathered up the fragments, and patiently, lovingly wrought them into a wonderful work of art.

Do you catch the hint, little people? Gather up the bits of time and opportunity lying about, and patiently work out your life mosaic—a masterpiece, by the grace of God.—Religious Herald.

Care of Horses' Feet.

One of the mistakes often made by farmers is that of keeping their horses shod that do work in the field. Of course this sometimes becomes necessary, remarks the Nebraska Farmer, but in the great majority of cases it is not only uncalled for, but it is actually a hinderance to the best service the horse is capable of giving. Everybody knows that when a horse is once shod, the necessity of keeping shoes on his feet grows upon him. It is also recognized that a horse can do all sorts of farm work just as well without shoes on as with them, and a critical observer of horses soon discovers that farm horses are kept wearing shoes merely from a fancied and mistaken kindness toward them rather than from any sound and logical reason. If people were in the habit of giving a little personal attention to their horses' feet upon frequent occasions, instead of leaving it all to the blacksmith, it would be all the better for the horses.

"A little farm well tilled,
A little cellar well filled,
A little wife well willed."

What could you wish a man better for than that? The last is not the least by any means, but how can a wife be well willed if she be the victim of those distressing maladies that make her life a burden? Let her take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and cure all painful irregularities, uterine disorders, inflammation and ulceration, prolapsus and kindred weaknesses. It is a boon and a blessing to women. Thousands are in the bloom of health through using it, when otherwise they would be under the sod. Are you a sufferer? Use it, or some day we may hear—

"Don'ts" for Young Mothers.

Don't neglect the baby; the little one has the first right to your attention.

Don't do everything for it and with it that you are advised to do; consider well the advice, and then rely most upon your own judgment.

Don't neglect to have the little one's clothing light, warm, loose and free from pins.

Don't wake the baby to exhibit the tints of its eyes to admiring friends; sleep is its most unquestionable right.

Don't spoil the infant by walking or rocking it to sleep, and do not let any one else do so; it will sleep best and most naturally when lying upon a comfortable bed.

Don't strain the baby's eyes by allowing a strong light to shine directly into them, especially when it first wakes.

Don't lay the child down with its ears bent away from his head: the result will be a deformity.

Don't try to prevent a teething child from sucking its thumb; it helps the work of dentition, and if the habit is acquired, it can be easily broken up by the application of some bitter tincture to the thumbs, two or three applications only being necessary.

Don't fail to feel of baby's hands and feet during cold weather, both day and night. If they become cold, rub them gently until warm; if that does not have the desired result, wrap them in warm flannels.

Don't forget that small socks, tight clothing—anything which interferes with the circulation—will produce coldness of the hands and feet.

Don't forget that baby's lungs need plenty of pure, fresh air; but that they are still delicate, and ought not to be exposed to raw winds or sudden changes.

Don't let baby sit on the floor in cold weather; there is where the most dangerous draughts are to be met.

Don't let it sit or lie close to the windows, for a similar reason.

Don't have the room too warm; seventy degrees is about the right temperature, and there should be as little change as possible.

Don't take the baby out in severely cold, in damp or unhealthy weather, with the supposition that it will be the means of "toughening" it; it may do that—it may cost the little life.—Worthington's Magazine

The Boy and His Father.

Many men do not discover the true relation of father and son until it is too late to save the boy. But some who have been neglectful take warning in time, and apply that "love that covereth a multitude of sins"—in the boy. Not long ago a gentleman related his experience to me as follows:

"Once a friend said to me, 'Do you know that your boy is reading bad books?' I said, No, I don't believe any such thing.' My friend said, 'Perhaps you had better investigate.' I was inclined to treat the whole matter with contempt, for I did not think it possible for my boy to be reading bad books without my knowing it. Finally, however, I decided that common sense is better than pride, and I would investigate. So I went to my boy's room, looked over his belongings, and at last, under the mattress, found the books. I put them back where I found them, and hunted up the boy. I said to him, 'My boy what kind of books are those you have been reading lately?' He was taken by surprise, and did not know just what to say. So I said to him: 'I would like to see the books; I've made up my mind to read the same books as you do.' Finally he stammered out, 'Papa, I don't think you would like those books very well.' I said: 'I would like to look at them. I want your opinion of them.'

"That threw him into a very peculiar state of mind, but he went up to the room and he brought out the books. We sat down side by side; I put my arm around him, and, as we turned the pages of the books, I said to him: 'Well, what do you think of that?' as we looked at the pictures and I read here and there a sentence. His only reply was, 'Well, papa, I guess it isn't very good.' Then I said to him, 'Lay the book aside, and this evening let us come up and read together; I have something I want to read to you.'

"My boy was delighted. The evening came, and we went to his room. I placed the lamp beside the bed, and lay down where he had lain to read his book. I read a story from the Youth's Companion. Before I had finished he had crawled up, and was leaning on my side. Then I read him a story with illustrations from Science. When I stopped, he laid his head on my shoulder, put his arms around me, and said: 'Papa, why can't I have such reading as that?' As soon as I could control myself—for he had shown me that I was the sinner—I said: 'My boy, you shall have all you want; let us go down stairs.' I led the way right down to the stock I had laid in, and put out my books and papers before him. He looked at them a moment, then picked them up and fairly hugged them. We soon decided what to do with the bad books; we took them out into the back yard and burned them.

"Then and there the boy and I started out on a new career. When I can, I spend the evening with him; one reads and the other listens. Henceforth my boy and I are going to be confidential friends, even if it takes a little time from business."

That father discovered some very important and valuable secrets. Would that others would set about the same work! Usually, when the Christian teacher approaches the wayward boy or young man, he finds the boy's father—by his neglect or wrong example, or both—standing between him and the boy. Quite frequently the father is a professing Christian, and his influence decides the boy's case against religious influence. The question is often asked, Why does not the Church reach the boys?" and it usually suggests the still more perplexing question, "How can we reach the fathers, and through them the boys?"

The gentleman referred to above, said: "I believe God has forgiven my sinful neglect of my boy; henceforth my service of God will include a loving and watchful care over the precious soul He has committed to me."—Rev. W. S. Phillpot, in Michigan Christian Advocate.

What to Read and How.

A young man found that he could read with interest nothing but sensational stories. The best books were placed in his hands, but they were not interesting. One afternoon, as he was reading a foolish story, he overheard one say: "That boy is a great reader; does he read anything that is worth reading?"

"No," was the reply; "his mind will run out if he keeps on reading after his present fashion. He used to be a sensible boy till he took to reading nonsense and nothing."

The boy sat still for a time; then arose, threw the book into the ditch, went up to the man who said that his mind would run out, and asked him if he would let him have a good book to read.

"Will you read a good book if I will let you have one?"

"Yes, sir."

"It will be hard work for you.'

"I will do it."

"Well, come home with me, and I will lend you a good book."

He went with him, and received a volume of Franklin's works.

"There," said the man, "read that, and come and tell me what you have read."

The lad kept his promise. He found it hard work to read the simple and wise sentences of the philosopher, but he persevered. The more he read, and the more he talked with his friend about what he read, the more interested he became. Ere long he felt no desire to read the feeble and foolish books in which he had formerly delighted. He derived a great deal more pleasure from reading good books than he had ever derived from reading poor ones. Besides, his mind began to grow. He began to be spoken of as an intelligent, promising young man. —Selected.

MRS. SARGENT.

DR. PIERCE: Dear Sir—My wife cannot speak too highly of your "Favorite Prescription," it having completely cured her of a serious womb trouble of long standing. She took five bottles altogether, and she has borne a large, healthy child since. There has been no return of the complaint.

She only wishes every poor, suffering woman should know of the inestimable value your "Favorite Prescription" would be to them, and thanks you, gentlemen, from the bottom of her heart, for the benefit she has received.

Yours very truly,

IF EVERY one who makes a habit of prophesying political events had the gift of prophecy, this would be an inspired generation. As it is, every one has the habit of political prophecy, but no one has the gift. Mental speculation is a pleasure that is denied no one, where there is no law against idleness; and even though there were such a law, men would indulge in political guesswork despite it. And while those who are unblushingly and deliberately idle more frequently assume the prophetic role, and though they who hide their idleness under the cloak of a government office, or wrap it in hopes of one, are also numerous, he is a simple fellow who cannot draw himself up, compress his lips, affect a portentous frown, and deliver political oracles in election times. Young lawyers are almost as adept as loafers in this role; but there is none to compare with him who expects to get appointed to a clerkship for his loyalty on all occasions to certain candidates. If a jot of the responsibility were vested in these fellows that their appearance implies, nothing would be left to Providence. That it is not is one reason for observing next Thanksgiving Day.

God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb. There is no sentence in the English language more beautiful than that; there is none more expressive. It includes all classes and conditions, though its application is usually restricted. We have often thought that people who think too much of themselves, who are steeped in conceit, are in no less pitiable condition than a shorn lamb. They are indeed utterly defenceless. God is kind when he permits the maniac to think he is sane; he is kind when he permits the inebriate to forget a hideous life. Sometimes there is nothing more to be desired than forgetfulness. It were unkind to permit a block head to feel that he is a blockhead. And there can be nothing but pleasure to him in thinking that he is able and brilliant, provided his fellows are sufficiently sensible to perceive that with all his airs he is a block head. If a man must be a miserable underling all his days, why not permit him to think the while that what he knows isn't knowledge? Thus indeed the wind is often tempered when the shorn condition of the lamb is not apparent. Let no one envy them who affect a heavy, serious mien, for the mien is but a kind, deceptive covering of a shorn mind; nor are they to be feared, for their responsibility is not real and their fore-knowledge never becomes fact, except by accident.

AT THIS writing it is fool-hardy to venture a positive opinion as to the result of the election. We have been told that the dominant party in this State will not retain all the State or Federal offices that it now has, and that the opposition in the Legislature will be stronger than usual. Yet there are some who expect it to gain. No one knows what a day may bring forth; and this has to be written a week before election day.

At any rate there's no use bothering after this paper gets to its readers. Many are disappointed; but none should be disgruntled. The victors are not victorious until they have overcome themselves, nor are the defeated vanquished until they become mad. It is supreme folly to lament what cannot now be remedied, especially when opportunity for remedying will be presented again in due season. It shortens life to worry. It drives out all that is good in living to make a burden of what may be lightly borne and easily thrown off before long. It will pay no man to worry about anything, and least of all, politics. It will pay every man to devote himself to honest work and do all he can to forget politics and lessen friction until the wheels of government bring elections round again. One should never forget one's work and duties; but if they are well observed, political principles—not one's particular desires or party expedients—may worthily occupy the meantime.

SEVERAL exchanges have published a letter from a feeble-minded young man who was so deficient of moral sense as to write a letter to a journal published at the North saying that he would not vote for the candidates of a certain political party unless he were given a buggy; and he was so childish as to think that the Northern journal, to which his father subscribed, would give him the desired buggy for the party's sake. The fellow is not alone after all. He is not a freak, or, if he is, his type is not at all rare. There are people who sell their votes, but who make a secret of it, fearing public sentiment and the law; there are men who sell their influence brazenly, the amount paid far greater than the price of a buggy, making them callous to opinion. The price makes them the more despicable, but with the public in general that's another matter. The possession of wealth hides a multitude of sins. There are men who conceal the truth because they fear they will lose their positions if they say what they think; there are men who dare not think, poor mentally-oppressed beings; there are men who join a party for no other reason than that they fear they will lose standing or patronage if they do not; there are others who remain with a party for the same reason; there are others who abandon one party and join another in order to get office; there are others who pay out money in order to bribe men to vote with them: and it does no credit to the young man who desires to sell himself for a buggy, to say that these are no better than he. There are men more despicable than this fellow; and they are men who buy liquor with which to induce poor, accursed drinkers to political speakings, who fill these men with whisky and send them home howling for the party while the mother and children scrape around for a bit of bread. There are men in North Carolina—men who have been honored, if nominations for political offices honor one,—who cannot throw the first stone at the young man whose price is the price of a buggy.

WE DARE not be positive, never having run a farm, but we cannot conceal inclination to agree with Hon. Walter Clark that "cotton in North Carolina is doomed, sooner or later, to disappear as a market crop."

Texas, India, Egypt and Brazil are better adapted to its production than this section. They have been prevented from competing with this section heretofore by lack of facilities for transportation. If the negroes were slaves, five cent cotton might be remunerative; but this is precisely the difficulty: Labor in this part of the country cannot be secured at a price that will enable the producer to sell as cheaply as the producer in other sections. The very fact that labor cannot be secured here so cheaply as elsewhere argues that labor here is worth more in other industries than in cotton producing. The price of labor depends upon supply and demand, except under abnormal conditions. Let us look about for reasons why labor—most dependent of economic forces—is able to demand more in North Carolina cotton patches than in Texas.

There are factories in North Carolina that have been operating profitably and paying good wages a score of years. There are more now than ever. Their employees get a great deal more money than farm employees. There are small local industries in growing towns and embryo cities, here and there; and every white family that makes a fair living in a city in this State unconsciously makes room for a large negro family to come from the country, to do cooking, serving, washing, etc. There is much building going on, and of course it creates demand for labor. Thus the farmer finds himself hemmed in with competitors—Texas, Mexico, India and Brazil on the one hand, the factory owner, the builder, in fact, all employers of ordinary labor, on the other.

With his chief product selling at cost and threatening to sell still lower, the farmer may wisely cast about for means of making both ends meet; and while he is as able as any one to take care of himself, he ought to appreciate the interest that prompts his friends to suggest helps, though we would not urge him to heed them all. If some one would only invent a cotton-picker matters would be relieved for a time; but other sections would still have the advantage of this, in abundance of land, surety of crops and cost of producing. Judge Clark states that in Mexico a cotton plant lives eight years producing twice a year!

Judge Clark believes in diversification of products. Peas, he says, any kind of peas, will be profitable, if some one will invent a sheller. Peanuts, too, will pay well when a good thresher has been made. Grass is also commended. To these corn, tobacco, stock-raising, dairying, trucking, and especially fruit growing and canning, ought to be added. And it is not at all impertinent to add that better schools and better roads will help make the diversification successful as nothing else can.

President Taylor's Fallacies.

"The people have the right to the privilege of education, and it is the duty of the State to guard and maintain that right."—CONSTITUTION OF NORTH CAROLINA, Art. 1, Sec. 27.

It is not specially to defend the State's higher institutions of learning that I point out some of the fallacies recently propagated by Rev. Chas. E. Taylor, President of Wake Forest College, in a series of articles, since published in a pamphlet, entitled "How Far Should a State Undertake to Educate?" These articles, whatever be the purpose of their author, are really an attack upon the principle of State education, for they contain arguments and propositions, which, if accepted and carried to their logical sequence, will necessarily destroy the whole system of public schools in North Carolina. It is well, therefore, that the friends of popular education have their attention called to the dangers that threaten from this quarter, dangers that are all the greater because accompanied with words of friendship.

True, these articles were originally directed by their author against the State University and the State Normal and Industrial School for women, he having specially excepted, without giving reasons therefor, the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Raleigh, which is largely supported by appropriations from the State, and also furnishes "higher education." But President Taylor's assault on these two institutions has already so far inflamed others less discreet, notably the President of the Board of Trustees of his College, that they are with great zeal and energy attacking not only the University and the Normal School, but also the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Raleigh, the same at Greensboro for the colored people, the six colored Normal Schools, the school for the Croatan Indians, the Cullowhee Normal School and even the State Geological Survey. There is no reason to think that, if the present campaign is successful, the war will stop here. Others more violent still, are waiting to attack our City Graded Schools; and those opposed to any public education may easily take up the torch which President Taylor has lighted and President Durham is blowing, and start a conflagration that will destroy what is most essential to our civilization.

President Taylor seeks to establish the following propositions:

1st. The State has no right to support higher education. 2nd. It is not expedient for the State to support higher education. 3rd. If it were right and expedient for the State, i. e., North Carolina, to support higher education at all, it is not possible for it to furnish this education under Christian influence, without violating the State Constitution, and as education without a religious (i. e. Christian) element is not desirable, therefore it is either impossible or undesirable for the State to support higher institutions of learning.

Let us consider these propositions in order. 1st. Has the State a right to support higher education? If the State of North Carolina has not this right in its organic law, it would be difficult to say what right it has.

In the first Constitution adopted by North Carolina was a provision for a State University. That Constitution was four times amended, and in 1868 a new Constitution was adopted, which also has since been greatly amended, but the provision for a State University has always been retained in every Constitution of North Carolina. The Constitution under which we now live, and which we are sworn to support, declares (Art. IX, Sec. 7), "The General Assembly shall provide that the benefits of the University, as far as practicable, be extended to the youth of the State free of expense of tuition." This right, therefore, is not only expressly granted in the Constitution, but it has been actually employed for one hundred years.

It is strange that any one should attempt to prove that the support of higher education by North Carolina is hostile to the American idea of government. Every State in the Union does it. The Federal government does it in establishing and supporting the Agricultural and Mechanical Colleges. There is no principle of government more universally recognized and acted upon. Thos. Jefferson had a fair idea of the nature and duties of our government; and next to being the author of the Declaration of Independence, he took pride in being the father of the University of Virginia. President Taylor has discovered that Thos. Jefferson was a paternalist! "The giving of higher education by a State," says President Taylor, "can be justified only on the principle of paternalism in State policy."

But President Taylor admits the right against which he is contending, when he admits the right of the State to furnish "lower education." He says, "It is both the right and duty of the State to maintain common schools for all classes of children." But if the State has the right to educate at all, it has the right to say how far, and in what manner it will educate. For if the State cannot determine this, who can?

No one can draw a line between "higher education" and "lower education." What is higher education for one generation is lower education for another. The college of forty years ago was scarcely equal to the public high school of to-day. President Taylor's whole treatment of the subject shows that he has not the true conception of what education is, and does not comprehend the real object of schools. He speaks of "common school instruction" and "the higher education" as if they were two things separate and distinct and of "the point" where one should end and the other begin. He looks upon education as an industry like farming or merchandizing, in which the State should not engage in competition with its citizens. He thinks the State should grant to churches a monopoly of such branches of this industry as they may choose to pursue. He demands protection to church schools as certain manufacturing interests demand protection from the government. He does not, however, name "the point where common instruction should end and the higher education begin," for there is no such point. Education does not mean knowledge or the acquisition of knowledge. Education is not something to be given children, which they are to take like a capsule, but it is a training, a growth, a development. It is one continuous process, and not a thing to be divided into sections, with a different label on each.

It is the right of every child born into this world to have his God given faculties grow to their completest development. The State does not forbid any one to furnish the means for this development, but it is the duty of the State to see that they are furnished to every boy and girl within its borders. This is the rational basis for State education.

President Taylor defends the right of the State to educate for its own protection. But his idea of protection excludes the public high schools and indeed all the grades in our public schools above the third or fourth. He virtually denies the State the right to give any real education; for learning the "three R's" is neither education of the individual nor protection for the State. Indeed, such a smattering of education will and does produce many evils which are most dangerous to popular government. The protection of the State demands that the people be taught the great principles of government, of liberty, of finance, of political economy, of public and private hygiene and manufacturing, the wise lessons of history and the eternal truths of moral philosophy as well as how to spell and cipher.

What then is President Taylor's position? Does he regard higher education as unnecessary, as a luxury? It appears not. "Higher education there must be," says he, "else there will presently be an end of all efficient elementary education." The conclusion is this, the State must be content with inefficient teachers in the elementary schools, or else trust to some church college to supply efficient teachers. After this attempt to make church colleges and academies parts of a State system of education, President Taylor, later on, under another head, where another point is to be made, pleads for the entire separation of Church and State.

"While all the people are taxed for the support of State universities, colleges and academies, only a few, in the nature of the case, can avail themselves of the privileges thus offered." This is no special argument against the State support of higher education. If it is anything, it is an argument against education by general taxation and against any tax whatever.

Only about one-half of the children of legal school age in North Carolina attend the public school. According to this argument, it is unjust to tax for public schools the fathers of those children that have to stay at home. No. All taxes are for the benefit of communities. It is inevitable that every tax will benefit some persons more than others. But are the comparatively few that attend colleges the only ones that reap benefit thereby? President Taylor says: "There is unquestionably need for teachers and for educated men and women as leaders in every community." If, then, whole communities are benefited by these educated persons, if higher education is absolutely necessary, by what strange process of reasoning can any one, that admits the justice of any taxation, arrive at the conclusion that communities have no right to tax themselves for this particular good?

Another objection is that the State has no right to compete with the church colleges—another evidence of President Taylor's industrial idea of education. For the same reason, the proprietors of a private insane asylum, or of a school for the deaf, dumb and blind, may hereafter say to North Carolina, "Close your institutions, they are hurting our business." And according to this argument, the State would have to close them, for such institutions are pure charities, which President Taylor insists a State may not maintain. But such institutions and primary schools as do not conflict with his branch of the industry, President Taylor does not object to. He permits the State to compete with its citizens in the primary schools where the competition is much greater; thus surrendering his principle. This competition argument is only another blow at the whole principle of State education.

If further argument in favor of this right were wanted, we have it from the highest Baptist authority in the State. In the BIBLICAL RECORDER of Jan. 18, 1893, President Taylor himself, in a letter addressed to Hon. W. H. Kitchin, dated Jan. 11, 1893, says: "A university in North Carolina is a necessity." After suggesting the kind of work he would like for our State University to do, he adds: "For such a university, but not for free education, the General Assembly should make such appropriations as may be necessary for present support and future development."

About the same time President Taylor advocated an increase of the present appropriation to the University, if need be, provided its courses of instruction should be made so high as to exclude from its halls all undergraduate students, an arrangement that would have taxed the people to support a university whose benefits would be shut off from every boy in the State until he had been graduated from some church college. Failing in this plan, which granted not only the right but also the expediency of maintaining a university by public taxation, provided the church college became a part of the system, President Taylor changes front entirely and denies both the right and the expediency of the State's maintaining any university. The friends of public education may well wonder what position he will take next.

The second point in the argument is: "Is it expedient for the State to support higher education"? From the Auditor's report I find that the following annual appropriations are made for higher education in North Carolina:

University	$ 20,000
Normal and Industrial School at Greensboro	12,500
A. and M. College at Raleigh	10,000
Normal department Cullowhee High School	1,500
A. and M. College for Negroes at Greensboro	2,500
Six Normal Schools for Negroes	8,000
Croatan Indian Normal School	500
Total annual appropriations	$55,000

Is this tax a hardship on any one? Who pays it? It does not come from the common school fund, nor is one cent of it raised by poll tax. These appropriations are raised entirely by a property tax. The total valuation of the property of the State is $260,000,000, so that a tax rate of about two cents on the $100 will yield this $55,000. Thus a man assessed for $100 (and tax assessments are usually about half what a man is really worth), pays about two cents a year for higher education; one assessed $1,000 pays twenty one cents. No one pays as much as a dollar for higher education unless his taxable property is listed at $4,722. About nine-tenths of the taxpayers of North Carolina, being listed at less than $1,000, pay less than twenty-one cents a year for all the institutions of higher education for all races.

The above figures are given not in proof of the right of the State to make these appropriations, but to show that the tax is very small and therefore expedient. If the principle were wrong, the State should not give even one dollar to the support of any institution of higher learning, and would have no right to exempt the property of Wake Forest College from taxation, thus aiding that College to the extent of about $2,000 every year at the expense of the taxpayers. But the question of expediency and cost has been raised, and President Taylor says: "If, after a thorough discussion of the whole question from various points of view, the people * * * decide that they wish the State to furnish higher education for all, and that they are willing to pay the expense of supplying it, then the expression of their wish ought to be accepted by all as a decision of the question."

Another favorite argument on the score of expediency is, that North Carolina should have six months' public school term in every district and that we need the money going to higher institutions for this purpose. If President Taylor will direct his efforts to lengthening the term of the common schools, without at the same time endeavoring to abolish those institutions that furnish the life of the public school system, he will find all public school teachers supporting him.

The $55,000 that go to the annual support of higher institutions would be but a drop in the bucket towards a six months' school term. Even in their present unsatisfactory condition, it costs $12,368.93 a day to run the public schools. (See report of State Supt. Public Instruction for 1891–'92). Close the University, the Normal and Industrial School, the A. and M. Colleges, and all the others, and give their appropriations to the common schools, and we should add less than four and a half days to their annual session. And the loss to North Carolina by closing these institutions, who can calculate! Surely, a penny-wise and pound-foolish policy. As the Charlotte Observer remarks, "It would be about as wise economy to abolish the Supreme Court and distribute the money among the justices of the peace."

The Normal Schools exist for the special purpose of supplying the common schools with better teachers. The public school system in North Carolina is indebted for its existence to the State University. Dr. Chas. Lee Smith, a graduate of Wake Forest College, in his "History of Education in North Carolina," says (page 164): "The University * * * was doubtless instrumental in educating public sentiment to the importance of a State system of public schools. * * * In that year (1816) Gov. Miller (Univ. N. C. class 1802) in his message to the General Assembly called attention to the need of public schools."

"All honor," exclaims President Taylor, "to the names of Judge Murphy, Bartlett Yancey, R. W. Cherry and C. E. Wiley," for inaugurating a public school system in North Carolina. All honor, then, to our University, the mother, not only of Murphey, Yancey and Wiley, but of nearly all that have worked for popular education in North Carolina.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

WHEN Christ, seeing Cæsar's likeness upon the tribute money, said, "Render unto Cæsar," did he not argue that man who is made in the image of the Creator must be rendered—must surrender—unto God?

IF THE brethren will talk missions and work for missions from now until Convention as they have talked politics and worked politics since the party conventions, they will have set the sisters a good example for once.

"WHO is not for me is against me" has probably never been heard of by the brother who seeks to be called "conservative," for taking middle ground. There is no better, no easier method of being a stumbling-block than by pretending to occupy "middle ground."

TO THOSE who have urged us to continue ardent in the cause of Christian and Popular Education until the Legislature has adjourned, we are glad to say that the work will be unrelentingly kept up. Present appearances are more auspicious than we hoped a month ago.

IT IS pertinent to remind those who voted for uncommitted candidates that now is the time to start those petitions against appropriations. Meanwhile we are still of the opinion that a bird in hand is worth two in the bush, though we are not at all averse to efforts to capture the latter!

MANY distrusted Sunday-schools at first because it seemed that they might lead the children apart from active church relations. But by close adherence to wise policy, Sunday-schools have won confidence everywhere. If there was objection to Sunday-schools on this ground, how much more should there be to State and national organization of young people.

NO GOOD can come from alienating the sympathy and chilling the loyalty of our young people by setting them off to themselves in a State organization. It is not only unwise and useless, but, what is more, unscriptural. There are more dangers than one in dividing forces.

Encourage young workers; but let them not be alienated.

DETERMINED efforts will be made this winter to establish more wholesome laws against liquor selling in this State. Any honorable means of curtailing the evil deserves the cordial backing of all good men. Let those who have been holding the opinion that after-election work is more desirable than straight-out refusal to support liquor men, make a thorough test of that policy this year. They have good occasion.

OF COURSE there is precious little probability of the N. C. Advocate and the RECORDER assuming identical positions in the matter, but we cannot refrain from expressing surprise that our friend still discredits biblical authorities and good, honest Baptists, preferring to think that infant sprinkling was actually practiced by the apostles!

Why, brother, that idea has long since been driven back to its place in Rome's fostering lap. The Advocate gets back to the up to date argument when it charges us with extreme ritualism and all that, though, indeed, the Advocate ought to know that strict observance of an ordinance cannot be justly termed 'ritualism.' But, for the sake of your position as an exponent of intelligence, brother, pray do not try to hold on to the lorn pretence that baptize as used by Christ can be interpreted to sprinkle.

NEED the churches be reminded that less than a month is between them and the Convention report? What we do, let us do quickly. It has been confidently hoped that a decisive gain in contributions will mark this year the beginning of a new era in North Carolina Baptist work, a liver, larger, godlier denominational life.

Numbers have been increased wonderfully. Revivals and baptisms have been unusually frequent. The best mark of a Christian is his desire to give the gospel to others; and consequently, it is much to be desired that reports will show a decided increase in more respects than one.

When the old State mission debt was met last spring after an exhausting struggle, there was much rejoicing. In all reason we ought not begin a new debt this year or any year; and before God the mission points ought to be maintained. There is but one way out: Raise the money in the next three weeks and send Bro. Durham to Charlotte with glad tidings of a year of wonderful effort and abundant fruit.

TOO MANY PREACHERS!

As a general rule every vocation or avocation which one seriously contemplates seems overcrowded. A young pastor, less than five years out of college, observed the other day that there were too many preachers; that the noblest calling to which human beings may aspire was being degraded, and was suffering injury by the friction of that competition which is most common in the marts of trade.

Evidently there is a plethora of preachers of a certain kind; for there is a great abundance of preachers who aspire to big pulpits, but who cannot attain their desire. There are God-called men who have to teach school for a living and preach when they can; there are some who farm, there are others who sell books and act as agents generally. There are also others who travel about, hither and thither, evangelizing, aiding, supplying, but never becoming pastors. There are also millions of creatures, some in Christendom, others in heathendom, who have never heard the gospel.

There is extensive unrest among preachers. The frequency of resignations in an adjoining State was so pronounced that a cotemporary mentioned it as an epidemic of resignations. Dissatisfaction of pastors with their congregations, dissatisfaction of congregations with their pastors; large, uneducated preachers' families and poor congregations, are doubtless some of the causes of the frequency of resignations. But they are not all the causes—not by any means.

It is not to be feared that God will call more workers than the work demands. It is plain, indeed, that the harvest is plenteous and the laborers are few. But it may be that many whom God has called are not doing their share, or are doing the wrong work, or are leading their congregations the wrong way. It is also possible, yes, probable that some are preaching under call of themselves or circumstances of childhood or native talent. They, no doubt, if there are such, desire well-paying pastorates, and make complaint if they do not get them. They also seek to become pastors of certain well paying churches. They are not willing to leave the calling to God. Such as these are likely to be found living a life of ease,—popular preachers to wealthy hearers. Their success in concentrating the wealthy into a single flock, that will pay a handsome salary, withdraws just that much from the support of some poor preachers. If the wealthy congregations would divide up, so that the financial strength of a single church might be diffused into poor churches and mission points, the demand for preachers would be greater than the supply, and the desert places would blossom as the rose.

It is not always the concern, however, of the richly paid city pastor how the weak stations are making out. Too many, indeed, seem to think that they are called, not to preach the gospel to every creature, but to a chosen few. Too many confine their ministrations to those who pay. A city pastor said recently, rebuking his self-contained fellow-pastors, "I have ceased to regard my church as my field; it is my force." That is the right idea, precisely. Church-members who have to be perpetually watched, nursed, prodded, and worked on, instead of working for the unsaved, are serious hinderances to progress. Church members who employ a pastor to entertain them while there are hundreds seeking salvation, and preachers ready to point the way unable to tell them the way for want of money, are worse than stumbling blocks. Entertaining preachers may get large salaries, but that is all they do get, if they preach to entertain.

A great cause of the apparent superabundance of preachers is to be found in concentration of Christian forces. Several wealthy persons get together and maintain a great church in magnificent style, while a God-called preacher lives in poverty and raises an uneducated family because he has to preach to a congregation in which the poorer classes are concentrated. God calls missionaries to China and Africa and India, where there are millions of heathen, where one preacher can be the instrumentality for saving more souls, himself living upon $500 a year, in a few months, than the $6,000 city pastor is used to save in a life time. The latter may give to missions, he may preach missions, but he absorbs a great deal of the strength of missions—more, we fear, than he gives back. This state of affairs is not without parallel in home missions. There are men who entertain large congregations at $3,000 a year, while destitution intensifies not a day's journey away that could be relieved with a thousand dollars.

It is time congregations were giving their bounty and their strength to weak points, and sending their pastor to work. The idea that it is necessary for one man to devote his entire energies to keeping a congregation "straight," speaks poorly for the latter's religion. It is the duty of all Christians to follow Christ in work and self-sacrifice; and it is a poor Christian who has to be worked on all the time, who has to be ding donged a month before he will pay his mission or pastor's salary pledge, who never learns to stand alone long enough for his pastor to help the destitute.

Let it not be said that there are too many preachers. There may be too many strength-absorbing entertainers; but God doesn't call them. There are, indeed, more men covetous of high salaries and easy livings than there are high salaries and easy livings; there are men who say they are called of God, but who get themselves called to pastorates, who seek to cut under and undermine those who are called of God: and their efforts to get pastorates create competition and friction and make it appear that there are more workers than there is work; and when one of these men gets a pastorate he absorbs the strength that ought to sustain God called men. But there will never be more of the latter than there is need for, never more of them than it is the duty of Christians to support.

....Rev. C. A. G. Thomas' work in Bro. Brown's Winston church is being abundantly blessed.

....Have you made an effort on our special offer? If not, you yet have a chance to grasp a good thing.

....Seven new members have been received at Elkin as a result of a meeting by pastor J. E. Greene.

....Rev. J. T. Jenkins begins assisting Rev. Blakely H. Matthews in a meeting at Plymouth the second Sunday.

....Nineteen conversions were reported from the meeting at Pastor Dill's church, Richmond, by Rev. H. W. Battle.

....The total membership of the Raleigh Baptist Tabernacle is 585. The Sunday-school has 884 on its rolls.—Record.

....Col. W. F. Kornegay, President of the North Carolina Railway, who fell dead at Goldsboro last week, was a Wake Forest man.

....Dr. H. L. Wayland of the late National Baptist has been named to succeed Bro. Vedder as editor-in chief of the Examiner.

....Rev. C. E. Gower will please accept thanks for favors in the shape of new subscribers last week; and also Rev. C. J. F. Anderson.

....Rev. L. Johnson will please be assured of the RECORDER'S appreciation of his efforts as its representative at the Pee Dee Association.

....We suggest that any one who reads Prof. Howell's article in this issue send immediately for Dr. Taylor's pamphlet, if he has not read it.

....Rev. C. E. Gower expects to surrender his present work along the W. N. C. road, says our Hickory contemporary, for a more accessible field.

....Our subscribers are hereby urged to forward back dues and renewals to this office as soon as the amounts can be spared. See the date on the label.

....Now is a good time to be getting up a club to gladden our heart at the Convention. Ask your people to renew now. And a new subscriber is never untimely.

....Rev. A. J. Bordeaux has changed his address from Kelly to Colly, N. C. We sympathize with Bro. Bordeaux in the bereavement he sustains in the recent death of his wife.

....The RECORDER'S special offer will not be urged much longer. One brother has sent us twenty new subscribers since it was announced. Many have sent more than ten. We hope to hear from many more this month.

....Dr. Taylor stopped over in Raleigh on his way to the Raleigh Association last week. He seems to have enjoyed his trip North and is but little the worse for his labors. He informed us that 207 students have been enrolled at the College.

....Received from a friend for endowment of Wake Forest College, five hundred dollars.—Thos. H. Briggs, Treas. Would there were a thousand such friends who would and could take such means of showing their friendship to the College. By the way, we hear that a canvass for endowment for the College is to be made in North Carolina before many months.

....We are informed that sons of doctors get free tuition in the medical department of the State University, and that such a one is there now whose father is rated at $50,000. Yes, yes; helping poor boys.

....John Wingate, a Baptist in Worth county, began studying the alphabet at seventy years of age, and has since that time read the New Testament through three times.—Christian Index, Georgia.

....Read Prof. Howell's exposure of Dr. Taylor's Fallacies. Read it again; then think real hard, and we warrant you cannot point out a single fallacy in "How Far Should a State Educate?" So much for a name.

....The day meetings by Rev. A. C. Dixon and others in New York City last year were so successful that he has perfected plans for holding them again, preaching Thursday afternoons in Broome St. Tabernacle, near Broadway, New York City.

....Here is Bro. Lafferty's bright Christian Advocate (Richmond) in new shape and outfit. A good paper always, in its new dress it looks better than ever; and we cannot expect Bro. Lafferty to improve his terse, pungent, fearless style.

....We have received the minutes of the first annual session of the Piedmont Baptist Association, which we will reproduce next week. We are also under obligations to Bro. F. P. Tucker for a copy of the minutes of the Beulah Association.

....Dr. N. B. Cobb contributes a valuable article and letter to the current N. C. University Magazine. In addition to this there is an essay by James K. Polk, an article by a native of Japan, other articles, and some notable book and magazine reviews.

....Rev. O. T. Edwards has our thanks for a minute of the Sandy Creek Association. Bro. Edwards assures us that the RECORDER will be the last paper that he will do without. He has been pastor of Love's Chapel thirteen years, but his congregation still loves him.

....Died at her home at Chapel Hill, the 27th ult., Mrs. J. W. Watson, wife of Rev. J. W. Watson. She was a member of the Baptist church many years, and did much service as a Sunday school teacher. Her family and friends have the sympathy of many in her death.

....Brethren Adams, Johnson, Kesler and Boyd have undertaken the publication of a monthly Association paper—The Pee Dee Baptist. It is designed to relieve the need of some medium of communication between pastors and churches of the Pee Dee Association. We welcome it to our table.

....The High Point church has increased the salary of its pastor, Bro. R. W. Weaver, from $300 to $650. The growth of this church under Bro. Weaver's ministry has not been paralleled in this State in recent years. One thousand dollars will be expended upon it in the coming months, says the N. C. Baptist.

....Rev. Dr. A. B. Earle, the noted evangelist, is seriously ill at his home, Newton, Mass. It was he, we believe, who said, while holding a meeting in Raleigh several years ago, that he had not consciously committed a sin in more than ten years. Bro. Mills, at that time editor of the RECORDER, successfully disputed Dr. Earle's claim.

....Alabama is waking up on the educational question. A report in the last Alabama Baptist states that public money is appropriated to sectarian education in that State. There are more Baptists than Methodists, Episcopalians or Presbyterians in Alabama, but they have a very narrow representation in State education. They ought to be glad.

...."The people have the right to the privilege of education, and it is the duty of the State to guard and maintain that right," is the text Prof. Howell chooses. Does it not seem to the reader that the text is suggestive of the duty of the State to give its children public schools rather than offer the privileges of higher education to a few young men and women?

....Rev. J. F. Tuttle has moved from Roberdel to Whiteville, having taken charge of the Whiteville field, Bro. Wright taking the Richmond field. Elder Bird recently baptized thirteen converts for Bro. Tuttle, and recently at Whiteville Bro. Cobb baptized several. Bro. Tuttle enters on his new work with good courage.

....A brother who is honored all over this State for carefulness of statement said last week that, though he had often heard the great Virginia speakers of the late and the present generations, as well as North Carolina's foremost orators, he had never known any one to fire his hearers with enthusiasm as Dr. Durham does in his speeches against State-aid.

....Rev. Thos. Dixon, Sr., writes from Shelby that the Lord has been with him in power at his four churches. At Rosses Grove he was assisted by Bro. Hufham in a seven days meeting, after which five joined the church. They then went to Concord church, Rutherford county, and received five members after several days preaching. At Elizabeth church a meeting brought out fourteen new members, and at New Prospect twenty were added—"joined the Lord," Bro. Dixon fitly says.

....It is a pleasure to note that Bro. J. D. Boushall, deacon of our Raleigh First church, and the very efficient Treasurer of the Baptist State Convention, has succeeded Bro. F. S. Biggs as General Agent of the Ætna Insurance Company, with headquarters at Raleigh. Of the younger generation of North Carolina Baptists and business men Bro. Boushall is easily one of the foremost. He has a multitude of friends in the Chowan section, where he was raised and where he got his good Baptist grounding, and in the Raleigh section, where he got his education, his success and his wife.

....Brown University, the oldest institution of the kind connected with the Baptist denomination, has 709 students, and 73 teachers. It supports three college papers, a daily, a weekly and a monthly. It was the first institution to begin organized University Extension work in America. The institution is situated at Providence, R. I., and was founded in 1764.

....Mercer University, Georgia, will open a Preacher's Training School next January. When Wake Forest shall have been sufficiently endowed, a chair of Bible study is a certainty. Such departments do not interfere with our Seminary; and if they did, the probability that so many more will reap the benefit of them overbalances whatever disadvantage there may be to the seminaries.

....If it were true that the words die, destroyed, perish, consumed, burned up, etc., etc., as used in the Scriptures mean annihilation, it is evident that the worst of sinners, of whom these words are frequently written, would suffer no punishment at all. They would come to an end and be nothing. To say this is to deny the law and the prophets and repudiate the condemnations of Jesus Christ.

....The RECORDER presents its readers this week with the only pretense of a reply to Dr. Taylor that it has been able to secure. We really thought State-aid did have a better cause than now appears, but it ought to be said in justice to Prof. Howell, that any other man in his fix would have done as he has. There was nothing else to be done. Prof. Howell's noble spirit of self-sacrifice is worthy of a son of the mother of our public school system.

....Rev. R. Van Deventer was in Raleigh one day last week, and we were glad to have a word with him. Bro. Van Deventer's resignation at Henderson was received with general regret, for he had greatly endeared himself to the people in his long and able pastorate. We wish to say here that North Carolina cannot afford to let Bro. Van Deventer go out of the State; for he is really more valuable as a general worker than in any local relation.

....Rev. Dr. Pritchard held services nightly in Concord last week. He came away feeling a little discouraged. Not that there was lack of interest or small congregations, for the church was filled at each service, but few came out boldly for Christ and his cause. Yesterday the Doctor received a letter from the pastor in Concord telling him of a number of additions to the church Sunday, of many reclamations, and of a general spiritual awakening.—Charlotte Observer, Nov. 2.

....The old reliable is here again, reminding us in the most consolatory way possible that 1894 is about to become the "Old Year." Of course we refer to Turner's North Carolina Almanac with "For the Year of Our Lord 1895" boldly printed across its face. It is complete, at least, to our thinking. It really seems larger and better than ever. It is brimful of handy information and good reading, and worth many times the selling price.

....It is a fact that some of the girl students at the State Normal and Industrial School take music at the Greensboro Female College. Does this explain anything to you? Prof. McIver told us in a conversation not long ago that his school offered everything that the young women of North Carolina needed in education except music, art and sectarian, i. e., well defined, religion. If the State offers all but these, how can the private schools exist? People cannot afford to pay their childrens' way to school to learn music and art alone. But that is what Prest. McIver seems to think. Its about time for him to write another explanatory letter that doesn't explain.

....A brother requests us to say something of the sacredness of an oath. There is no human act more sacred, and that were enough to say, were it not evident that many who swear to uphold the Constitution and the laws, do so in ignorance of what they are doing, ignorant of the Constitution and the law. Justices often commit sacrilege by running through an oath lightly, taking God's name vainly. Men often are not impressed with such proceedings, and in consequence they do not observe their oaths. An officer of the law seldom looks upon his oath as binding him to duty, but rather to public sentiment. The truth is, public sentiment is nothing and an oath is everything.

....Dr. Carradine, a Methodist minister from Missouri, who is conducting a series of vigorous meetings in the Central Methodist church at Raleigh, is quite well known as an exponent of John Wesley's doctrine of sanctification. Many Methodists—mostly preachers—have come from other localities to hear him expound this particular doctrine; some few of them have professed sanctification under his exhortations. They speak of it as an experience as distinct as regeneration; and, they say, they who get it, become sinless. We do dot recall having read any Scripture that enjoins the holding of sanctification meetings, or that authorizes one to sanctify another. But all sorts of folks make the world.

....If eternal death means end of existence, then eternal life, its opposite, would mean mere continuance of existence. Christian, is the latter all you hope for? That is the hope the Adventist gives one. "Eternal death," says Rev. J. D. Pope, "is final separation of soul and body from God and holiness, consigned to perpetual sinning and its consequences." "If a man keep my sayings, he shall never see death," Christ promises. Is it not apparent that the Lord meant, such a one shall never "experience separation from God or lose the blessedness of divine fellowship," instead of merely escaping annihilation? "Let the dead bury their dead," in the Adventist Bibles ought to be let the annihilated bury the annihilated, i. e., that nothing bury nothing. Did Christ mean that? No; he meant let the spiritually dead, the unregenerated, bury their dead, "but go thou and preach the gospel."

Prof. Howell's Article.

Dr. Taylor's articles are a logical chain. A fallacy in a logical composition is not an incorrect statement, but it is an incorrect conclusion arrived at by defective reasoning. Prof. Howell speaks of "Fallacies," but in his entire article he does not point out a single defective logical process in Dr. Taylor's articles! He does deny propositions and conclusions by wholesale, but denying propositions and conclusions is not pointing out fallacies; and Prof. Howell does not even attempt to prove his denials. He merely denies and stops—or probably is stopped by insuperable logic. He says many statements are incorrect, but he adduces no proof. His word may be good; but that is out of the question.

One would suspect that a reply to logical arguments would be logical,—and when that reply is introduced by its author as an exposure of "Fallacies"—a term of Logic—one has the right to demand that its author confine himself to logical argument. Prof. Howell paints pictures, exclaims, employs the words "hence," "therefore," appeals to prejudice, makes many denials and incorrect statements, but there is a gaping dearth of even so much as an attempt at logical reasoning or statement of proofs. He merely denies this or avers that, in hopes that the reader is simple enough to believe.

We have not space to mention all of Prof. Howell's pictures, exclamations, pretences at reasoning, appeals to prejudice, etc., etc.; but it is necessary to point out a few of them. If Dr. Taylor thinks it necessary, he will review the others.

Prof. Howell's first sentence is an apology to his conscience. No one but his Conscience has accused him of defending "the State's higher institutions of learning." But the reader must confess that Prof. Howell's entire effort is to defend two institutions. Then he states that "certain arguments and propositions" of Dr. Taylor "will destroy the whole system of public schools in North Carolina." But Prof. Howell submits nothing to prove this; and his statement is of itself worth nothing. He states that the opponents of State aid have attacked this, that and the other institution "with great zeal and energy." Is it an attack to ascertain and publish the incomes of certain public institutions? Is it an attack to argue that these appropriations are wrong or unwise? "Others are waiting to attack our City Graded Schools." These "others" are new discoveries,—inventions, we are tempted to term them. They belong to Prof. Howell; and he may trot them around the ring as much as he pleases in order to create prejudice, but we are of the opinion that he will have difficulty in persuading the public that Dr. Taylor's arguments were concerned with Graded Schools. If any are so persuaded, we will send them Dr. Taylor's articles free. Prof. Howell merely makes the statement. He offers no evidence. That "conflagration that will destroy what is most essential to our civilization" is a figment of Prof. Howell's overstrained mental powers. It would be a grave charge, were its utter emptiness not so ridiculous. There is no attempt to prove it. It is a picture that any school boy might have drawn.

Prof. Howell needs to be reminded that the fact that a thing is mentioned in our Constitution has no bearing upon the fundamental question of right. He seems to think that Constitutional Conventions and State Legislatures can do no wrong. And Prof. Howell ought to know that Mr. Jefferson made many mistakes. Prof. Howell quotes the Constitution to prove the right of the University to give free tuition. But the trouble is, that, though the Constitution were eloquently expressive and violently mandatory, the young men of North Carolina cannot get to the University to enjoy its advantages The Constitution is permissive only.

"No one can draw a line between 'higher education' and 'lower education.'" Prof. Howell cannot; but that's no reason why it is impossible. Does the reader know the difference between "common school instruction" and "higher education"? Prof. Howell does not; and Prof. Howell, sir, Prof. Howell says Dr. Taylor "has not the true conception of what education is, and does not comprehend the real object of schools"! Prof. Howell doubtless has a copyright on the "true conception" and a patent on the comprehension of the "real object." And that quiet citizen named Taylor has been living and working all these years for nothing. That's what Prof. Howell, overweening soul, thinks.

"He demands protection to church schools." Dr. Taylor demands nothing of the kind, and Prof. Howell has no evidence that he does. Dr. Taylor argues right invincibly for untrammelled voluntarily supported institutions of higher education. He doesn't want protection. Prof. Howell actually speaks of the "rational basis"; but he himself is not rational in a single paragraph, not if rational means reasoning. But, brethren, on what a volcano we are contentedly living! Prof. Howell says "such a smattering of education" as reading, writing and arithmetic "will and does produce many evils which are most dangerous to popular government." Reading, writing and arithmetic are all that nine-tenths of our citizens get a knowledge of. Prof. Howell thinks that "great principles of government, of liberty, of finance, of political economy, of public and private hygiene and manufacturing (we are not certain that we grasp that), the wise lessons of history and the eternal truths of moral philosophy as well as how to spell and cipher," ought to be taught the people—all the people—by means of our public and "City Graded" schools, he appears to argue. And, you know, Prof. Howell has the copyright on the "true conception" and the patent on the comprehension of the "real object," Prof. Howell, sir, of the Goldsboro Graded Schools, sir.

Prof. Howell is clearly appealing to prejudice when he says "The State must be content with inefficient teachers in the elementary schools, or else trust to some "church college" to supply them. All not State institutions are church colleges, Prof. Howell pretends to think. He knows better. But we are candid enough to assure Prof. Howell that even church colleges would supply our public schools and other elementary schools more efficiently than the University does by wire-pulling for its graduates. The number of University men in the good paying places in public schools signifies nothing more clearly than the disposition of men who have been given public money to seek more. No one on earth believes that President Taylor attempts "to make church colleges and academies parts of a State system of education;" and Prof. Howell adduces nothing in support of the statement, That belongs in the bottle with his Graded School destroyers and general conflagrations.

If we admit that all taxes are for the benefit of communities, as Prof. Howell states, the Professor has still the impossible task of showing that the University or any of the State-aided higher institutions do more than benefit the individual. Perhaps Prof. Howell had the village of Chapel Hill in mind when speaking of communities.

The Professor appeals to prejudice or displays his patent ignorance of Logic when he brings up the Asylum plea. Asylums for the deaf and dumb, the blind, or insane, do not belong to the same class as institutions of learning; and it is is puerile to try to embrace them in a category that will serve Prof. Howell and bear on this question. Asylums are pretty good things to work up sympathy with, however.

When Prof. Howell recalls Dr. Taylor's letter of nearly two years ago, he confesses himself unequal to the task he has inflicted upon himself. This not the first time that he begs the question. What a pitiable thing! But it's a pretty good way to put Dr. Taylor in a false position, even if it has nothing to do with the question at issue.

Our remarks are necessarily condensed. We omit the errors that are so glaring, not in charity nor in blindness, but because any one can see them at a glance.

Prof. Howell thinks the public so stupid that it cannot devise a better way of disposing of $55,000 a year than by expending it for something that is offered for nothing! This is his expediency apology. Any man who pays taxes will tell him of a better way of using the price of four pounds of cotton than sending it to Chapel Hill or Greensboro to educate people, whom church or voluntary institutions will educate at no cost to the farmer and at less cost to the student than the State institutions make necessary. Really we do not know any one who has expressed a willingness to throw away money, not even in small amounts.

And what evidence is there that the University is the proud mother of our puny public schools? One man hath said it, that is all; but it is sufficient for Prof. Howell. And why did that one man say it? Because Gov. Miller, who happened to have graduated from the University, "in his message to the General Assembly called attention to the need of public schools." Do you hear! He called attention! Proud mother!! That is all. But that is sufficient for Prof. Howell, for Prof. Howell, sir, is himself a son of the University, and Prof. Howell, sir, has the "true conception" and comprehends the "real object" of education, Prof. Howell does.

Some one ought to have told Prof. Howell, among other things, that to say that Dr. Taylor's arguments apply to the public schools, does not affect their force against State-aid to higher education. To try to apply his arguments to the public schools is a pretty good idea, however, if one is seeking to work up prejudice. Dr. Taylor never urged that the State University be made "entirely irreligious." He did urge that the University and its religion be entirely separated from the State. Does Prof. Howell grasp the idea? Dr. Taylor will not bother about being classed with infidels. The State-supported Episcopalians called our fathers worse than infidels when they protested against establishment; but what did they care for calling names? The Roman Catholics in New York State have been calling Baptist infidels in the present year, because the Baptists are struggling against Rome's determined attempt to throttle freedom of religion by getting control of the public schools. That's the kind of infidels Baptists are. They are infidels to established religion; they oppose Episcopalian politics, and they will keep at it, though Rome and all her imitators howl till doomsday.

Prof. Howell commits a grave and inexcusable error if he refers to Dr. Taylor as a College President "having received his education free of charge at the expense of the State of Virginia." That's the penalty Prof. Howell has to suffer for crediting the insinuations of a cowardly, anonymous communication in a newspaper. Prof. Howell could easily have found out that Dr. Taylor did not get his education free of charge, if he had cared to know; but Prof. Howell was prejudiced. The statement is a pretty good way to turn the reader from the question, if some one isn't present to deny it. By making it, however, the Professor forfeits the right to mercy at our hands. Dr. Taylor left the University of Virginia $1 500 in debt, having paid tuition several terms.

"To prove that the great body of Christians totally disagree with President Taylor in this," i. e., teaching religion in the public schools, Prof. Howell quotes one Methodist Bishop and one Methodist paper. They stand, brethren, as the representatives of the great body of Christians. God forbid.

Prof. Howell says that it abolishes primary education to deprive primary schools of religious color. But he makes no attempt at proving it. A child may go to school well enough and be kept under religious influence at home. It is different with a young man or woman.

Now comes the final answer to the whole business. Dr. Taylor is to be wound up in a jiffy and sent off to learn the "true conception" and the "real object": "For a final answer to this whole attack on higher education, it will be enough to show that its moving cause is fear, and that this fear is groundless." So says Prof. Howell. That is, Dr. Taylor does not know what he is doing—that quiet citizen who was a college president when Prof. Howell was a college freshman, doesn't know what he is talking about when he says that State aid to the University cripples unaided institutions! The reader knows too well how protection fosters the protected and starves the unprotected, to need further argument. Wake Forest would have three hundred students to day, after that unparalled campaign of last summer with the enthusiasm that this question has excited, were it not for the University. With Pres't Kilgo, Trinity would be better off. Elon is the College of the Christians of the South, not of North Carolina; but its patronage is nothing like what it would be, if it were untrammelled. We have private letters that speak for the female colleges. Prof. Howell says: "This increase in the number, attendance and endowment of private schools is undoubtedly due to the activity and progressive influence of the State schools." Better crops and promise of prosperity had nothing to do with it, did they? Prof. Howell would doubtless take the activity of a man in a fire as evidence of superabundant vitality.

Prof. Howell reaches a fit climax in the quotation of an unknown man's eulogy of the University. It is also devoid of fact or reason. It is pretty good eulogy. The man asks with all the guileless innocence of one who would be surprised to learn that he is living, "Why this feeling of uneasiness among us?" And we imagine his eyes open wider and his mouth likewise as he absently repeats while the uneasiness increases and the income decreases, "Why, Oh why?"

The last sentence is an epitome of the RECORDER'S sentiments: "Let it (the University) develop into a Harvard." Yes, let it. Harvard is a voluntarily supported institution. It has no State-aid. Yes, let it develop into a Harvard with all haste.—EDITOR RECORDER.

Pee Dee Association.

This body met in its second annual session with the church at Wadesboro. Fifteen years ago who would have dreamed that the Wadesboro church, then a very feeble band, could so royally entertain so many people. The Baptists themselves entertained them without calling on the other denominations to help, and the only complaint I heard was that nobody had as many to entertain as he wanted. You may call it "Baptist brag" if you will, but I actually heard some talk of their tackling the State Convention at an early day.

The Association was one of the most pleasant meetings I ever attended. Baptist harmony prevailed from beginning to end. Sometimes, you know, a meeting has harmony and nothing else, because there is not life enough to get up a first-class row. Such was not the case here. It was a busy body.

Of the twenty-eight churches, twenty six were represented, and several had more present than the regular delegates. Although this year is considered the hardest, financially, in the history of this generation, there was an increase of contributions to the objects of the Convention.

A little monthly Associational paper is being published, with Bro. Adams of Wadesboro as editor in-chief, and some of the pastors as correspondents. This paper is intended merely as a medium of communication between the pastors and churches, by which we hope to secure a greater interest among the churches in Associational work. It is not to come in conflict with the RECORDER, but is meant to sustain the same relation to the Association that a church paper does to the members of that church. The Pee Dee Association is loyal to the RECORDER, as was shown by the strong speeches made in its behalf by A. Johnson, Tuttle, McMillan and others, and by the goodly number of subscribers I am pleased to send you.

The visitors were brethren Durham, Stringfield, Peterson and Mills. Bro. Durham spoke with his usual fervor on missions, and Friday night made a great speech on general education. Bro. Stringfield plead for the girls as only Stringfield can. To hear him is to be convinced that the woman's college must succeed.

Bro. Peterson spoke on the N. C. Baptist, and told of the work it was doing in its sphere.

Bro. Mills came in at the eleventh hour after the discussion on the Orphanage had closed; but he was heard with deep interest as he spoke of the work at Thomasville.

Bro. Kesler was Moderator, and though a new hand at the business, he presides with ease and dignity.

As we left Wadesboro this morning, we thanked God for such a meeting, and felt inspired with new zeal to enter upon the duties of another Associational year.

LIVINGSTON JOHNSON.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

We have received another account of the Pee Dee Association, written by Bro. J. Q. Adams, from which we extract the following:

"I think all were convinced of two things: first, that State-aid to higher education in North Carolina, sooner or later, will certainly be abolished; second, that 'The Baptist Female University,' to be located at Raleigh, is an assured success.

"Bro. Stringfield made a fine impression. He remained over with us a day after the adjournment of the Association, and the brethren of my church gave him $2,165 for the Female University. If other towns and cities will do as well, he will soon have the two hundred thousand dollars that he is asking for. If the money is to be had, Bro. Stringfield is the man to get it."

The Haynes suit against the Raleigh Gas Company for $10,000 damages, Mr. Haynes' son having been killed by a negligently put up electric wire, has terminated favorably to the plaintiff, $1,800 damages being awarded.

State Missions.

From the date of this paper to Dec. 1st, State Missions should be the one object before the churches.

THE PASTORS

can make the year's work in this department a great success, and they are most earnestly requested to help us with this object this month.

THE CHURCHES

will, I think, gladly aid this work just at this time if it is presented to them.

THE TREASURER

of each church and each Association, having funds in hand for missions, will please forward the same to Treasurer Boushall, Raleigh, at once.

SOME INDIVIDUALS

have special amounts. Cannot one thousand individuals aid this work with some amount at once? If you can do so, please send the same to Bro. J. D. Boushall, Raleigh.

C. DURHAM.

Raleigh, Nov. 6, 1894.

A Methodist Baptising.

Dear Recorder:—I must write you of a church action, or a church mockery, that came under the observation of myself and several brethren and sisters.

On Saturday night, Oct. 13th, 1894, I was at a Methodist meeting that had been in progress for a week. It is about three miles from Mt. Lebanon Baptist church. Several of the Methodist members became dissatisfied with their sprinkling for baptism. They talked of leaving the Methodist church (or some of them did) and coming to our (Mt. Pleasant) church. This reached their preacher's ears. He took several of these persons partly in secret to one of his brother sprinkler's fields, stuck the dissatisfied ones under the water. He first made them get down on their knees; then taking them by the back of the collar, he pulled them back in the water!

The Saturday night I was there, in a sermon the preacher undertook to prove that God was so feeble that his elect could fall away from him and then come again and be reclaimed. The preacher made a failure, and all others who attempt to maintain such a doctrine by the Bible will fail.

On the same night five persons claimed to profess faith in Christ, and the preacher opened the doors of his so called church, and five came forward to join. We sang. I being near, stopped singing to hear what he said to the candidates. Three asked to be sprinkled. They were small children. He took a pitcher of water and poured out a glass. One of his brethren asked him if he had enough water. He replied, "Yes." He looked around to me, and with a smile said, "Children, come to me, and I will baptize you." The mockery went on. Two asked to be put under water. He got up in the pulpit and said, "Brethren and sisters, I understand some of you older ones are dissatisfied with sprinkling. Now you that truly believe in this and want to follow your Saviour in baptism, meet me at the riverside, in a certain brother's field, to morrow morning at nine o'clock, and I will baptize every one of you again." He also said if any were not well, he would insure them from injury.

On Sunday morning following, a number met him at the designated place to be baptized, and he did it in the manner before mentioned. All these had been sprinkled.

Brethren, let us resolve to do more than ever for the blessed Lord. Let us hold fast to the faith once delivered to the saints.

Yours in Christ,

J. G. PARKS.

Lassiter, Oct. 27, 1894.

Revival at Mt. Lebanon.

Dear Recorder:—The Lord manifested his power in a series of meetings just held at our new church at Mt. Lebanon. Elder M. J. Leach, pastor, was aided by Elder John A. Summey, who did most of the preaching, and did it in the demonstration of the power of God's Spirit.

The meeting commenced on the first Sunday in September and lasted one week. Sinners were made to cry out "What shall we do to be saved?" Congregations daily grew larger, and the interest deepened until the close of the meeting.

Fifteen professed faith in Christ, and thirteen were baptized in the waters of Little River.

The church was greatly revived and brought closer to God; and we are looking for still greater blessings.

Bro. Summey was taken sick during the meeting, and was compelled to leave on Saturday morning. We hear that he is well again. He and Pastor Leach labored faithfully.

May the Lord bless and prosper the labors of his servants everywhere until every nook and corner in the whole world shall have a good Baptist church.

Your brother in Christ,

JAMES G. PARKS.

The Uncalled-of-God Preacher.

Dear Recorder.—Permit me space in your columns to say a word or two concerning a certain class of so-called preachers.

Some pretended young ministers start out to preach, and just go from one field to another, staying a few months in a place; then when they find themselves out of work, they write to some churches, asking the deacons to call them, unbeknown to their present pastor.

If a man be called of God to preach the gospel, he will sustain him without his asking for calls before he is called. Go preach, and leave the result with God Almighty. Don't try to undermine other young men, by asking for their pastorates.

Fraternally, PASTOR OF G. AND C.

To Those Who will Attend the Convention.

All who expect to attend the Convention in Charlotte, Dec. 6th, will please forward their names to the undersigned.

Homes will be provided for the delegates, and cheap rates of board secured at the hotels for visitors.

Let us hear from you at an early day.

T. H. PRITCHARD,
L. R. PRUETT,
Committee.

Charlotte, N. C.

Another Word About the Convention.

Dear Recorder:—We are hoping for a large attendance on the Convention, and propose to entertain all the delegates to the Young People's Convention, the Women's Missionary Society and the State Convention. There are a few things we wish especially to be remembered. First, send us at an early day your names; don't say, I expect to come and two others; give us your names. If you find that you cannot come, after your names have been forwarded, notify us at once. And also let us know by what route you will come, and when you expect to reach Charlotte, if convenient.

For the benefit of those, delegates or otherwise, who may wish to pay their own way, we give the rates at which the hotels will entertain. There are no better hotels in North Carolina than those in Charlotte, and their rates are very reasonable. The Central will charge all guests, delegates or visitors, two dollars a day. The Buford will charge delegates one dollar and a half a day, and visitors two dollars. The Arlington will charge all guests one dollar and a quarter per day, and the Charlotte and Queen City hotels will entertain at one dollar per day.

The committee will take pleasure in engaging rooms for any who may wish to be the guests of either of these hotels.

T. H. PRITCHARD.
L. R. PRUITT.

RAILROAD RATES TO THE CONVENTION.

The Southern Railway will sell round-trip tickets to Charlotte on account of the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina at greatly reduced rates, from points named. Rates will be as follows:

From Goldsboro, $9 00; Selma, 8 20; Raleigh, 7.30; Henderson, 7.00; Durham, 6.50; Greensboro, 4 45; Winston-Salem, 5 65.

Two through trains daily between Raleigh and Charlotte, leaving Raleigh, 5.45 a. m. and 4.10 p. m.; arrive at Charlotte, 12.00 noon and 10 40 p. m.

Tickets will be sold Dec. 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th,—good to return until Dec. 15th.

For rates from any other points and further information, write to Chas. L. Hopkins, Trav. Pass. Agent So. Railway, Charlotte, N. C. W. A. TURK, G. P. A., Washington, D. C.

The Object of the Y. P. Meeting in Charlotte.

Many want information. Pastors write me, "I am desirous of knowing more about the Y. P. work." Another pastor says, "I want to learn at the meeting."

The Baptist Young People are engaged in undenominational work, and it is time that steps be taken towards their unification. The Young People and the old should work through denominational organizations. We hope the meeting in Charlotte will be a step towards the accomplishment of that end. Too many of our Young People are not engaged in the work of the church at all. We believe the meeting in Charlotte and similar meetings will stimulate them in Christian service.

Let the pastors attend the meeting and bring with them their young people. Let the churches see that they (every one) are represented, whether they have Young People's Societies or not.

Send your name to Dr. T. H. Pritchard.

Bro. W. C. Dowd will deliver the address of welcome in behalf of the Young People of Charlotte. Let a large number be present to accept the welcome extended.

Yours for the Young People,

R. VAN DEVENTER.

would show conclusively that the public schools do rely and must largely rely on the higher State schools for their teachers. Indeed, two of the most prominent church colleges in the State have found it necessary to choose Presidents who were educated in a State University, one of them, although now opposed to State aid, having received his education free of charge at the expense of the State of Virginia.

President Taylor's third proposition is as follows: "Desirable education must contain religious elements. The State is debarred by its fundamental law from furnishing these religious elements. Hence the State is debarred by its fundamental law from supplying the desirable education."

There is no pretence that this argument applies only to higher institutions of learning. After proving to his own satisfaction that for these reasons North Carolina should not support the University and the Normal and Industrial School, he adds, "These principles are equally applicable to all education undertaken by the State, to public schools as well as colleges and universities." He is willing, however, for the present to continue the public schools without any recognition of God or religion of any sort. He is aiming now at the University, but the same weapon with which he strikes at this institution, he offers to any one that would stab the other schools of the State. Indeed, he goes out of his way to brandish this dart, and points it with rash indiscretion at our public schools: "Whenever the issue shall be made, as it surely will be sooner or later, neither prayer nor the reading of the Bible can be allowed in any school supported by general taxation."

Incredible as it sounds, illogical as it is, the first recorded utterance against our State University, on the ground of its religious teaching, on account of the Christian influence at Chapel Hill, the first recorded protest in North Carolina against reading the Bible and prayer in the public schools, come not from an atheist, or an infidel, or a Hebrew, or a Roman Catholic, but from a teacher and a minister of the gospel, from the President of a College devoted to the propagation of religious truth and the conversion of unbelievers to the blessings of Christianity.

President Taylor's zeal for his own institution is carrying him too far when it leads him to strike out of his way the University, which he admits is doing good service to the State, by making it entirely irreligious with whatever consequences to the young men there, and even, if need be, to carry out his purpose, to forbid the little children in the public schools to repeat the Lord's prayer, or to hear the Ten Commandments or the Sermon on the Mount.

I have no idea that the Baptists of North Carolina, however much they may love Wake Forest College, which surely they have cause to love and be proud of, will ever sustain its over-zealous President in such an extreme revolutionary and unchristian position.

To prove that the great body of Christians totally disagree with President Taylor in in this, and regard his position as unchristian, it will be enough to consult almost any of the religious papers. It was on account of this attack by President Taylor, the first ever known in the State, that Bishop W. N. Duncan of the M. E. Church, South, said on August 21st, at the State Sunday-school Convention in Durham, and with the entire approval of the Convention, "We had better wipe out ever college, and every school, and especially State institutions and free schools, * * * if they lack the religion of Jesus Christ. * * * We must have the Bible in the free school."—Raleigh News and Observer, Aug. 23.

It was in reference to the utterances of President Taylor that the N. C. Christian Advocate of Aug. 29th said editorially: "In every school in the land the Bible should be read and prayers offered daily. * * * We do not for one moment admit the necessity of godless schools, because, forsooth, they receive State support and patronage. * * * If the divided and sectarian condition of Christianity makes it necessary, we should put on sackcloth and sit in ashes. If there is such denominational rivalry that we would rather have no religion than the peculiar form advocated by another denomination, then we are little more than pretenders.

"All admit that State education is a necessity. Then it becomes the duty of good citizens and all the churches to see to it that our schools are invested with the air of religion.

* * * * *

"The same thing is true of the University and Normal School. We have these schools, and they are likely to stay with us. The Christian element of the State cannot afford to withdraw Christian influence from them. We should in every possible way encourage them and help them to be religious."

President Taylor should not expect others to accept his argument, since he renounces it himself. Notwithstanding he has (according to his idea) logically made all State education irreligious and has hence abolished it, he and his associates now appear as champions of "the lower public schools." If this crusade, despite its wrong-directed main purpose, shall succeed in permanently enlisting these men in the cause of popular education, even in a limited degree, it will not have been waged in vain. But, it is proper to ask, what public utterance did they make in behalf of public schools before this recent attack upon the University and Normal School? Why are these gentlemen now so active in behalf of the public schools? Will they persuade the public school teachers, along with the Hebrews, Roman Catholics and the weaker Protestant churches, that the University and Normal School are hostile to them?—the University whose influence created the public school system and whose alumni now active to keep it alive? the Normal School, the child of the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly, whose mission is the elevation of the North Carolina public school teachers! President Taylor even impeaches the sincerity of public school men that venture to offer suggestions towards the advancement of church colleges. He would deny Saul a place among the prophets, and demands to see his credentials. With more reason may not public school teachers, when gentlemen come holding out six months' school term in one hand, and armed in the other with arguments destructive of all State education, and already striking at the head of our public school system, exclaim, "Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes!"

For a final answer to this whole attack on higher education by the State, it will be enough to show that its moving cause is fear, and that this fear is entirely groundless. Its author incorrectly fancies that the recent increased activity and enrolment at the State University mean injury to the other colleges, particularly to the one he has most at heart.

President Taylor failed to name one institution that had been killed or even crippled by the University. There are to day, besides the State University and the A. and M. College, sixteen colleges for males in North Carolina (including co-educational colleges) to-wit: Davidson, Wake Forest, Trinity, Guilford, Catawba, Yadkin, Rutherford, Weaverville, Concordia, Fair View, Lenoir, Judson, Elon, North Carolina and Carolina Christian.

Nine of these colleges have been chartered since the re-opening of the University in 1845. Elon College, only four years old, is flourishing within thirty miles of Chapel Hill. Trinity College has just moved into its new house with a splendid equipment of site and buildings within view of the University. Wake Forest has doubled its enrolment and tripled its endowment since the re opening of the University. Davidson had last year the largest enrolment of its existence. Are these some of the warnings of the approach of that time prophesied by President Taylor "when a melancholy silence will reign in halls of learning, which have been devoted to higher education under Christian influence"?

To deal with facts, what evidence is there that the Normal and Industrial School is going to destroy all the women's colleges in North Carolina? Besides this one established by the State, there are fourteen other higher institutions of learning for women in North Carolina, exclusive of the co-educational colleges named above, to-wit: Salem Female Academy, St. Mary's School, Greensboro Female College, Chowan Baptist Female Institute, Peace Institute, Oxford Female Seminary, Asheville Female College, Davenport Female College, Littleton Female College, Kinsey Seminary, Wilkinson Female Institute, Charlotte Seminary, Henderson College and Asheville Normal and Collegiate Institute. The three last named have been established since the act creating the Normal and Industrial School was passed. All of them it appears are in good condition.

This increase in the number, attendance and endowment of private schools is undoubtedly due to the activity and the progressive influence of the State schools. The majority of the private and denominational schoolmen recognize this fact. It was made evident during the last session of the Legislature that they do not believe President Taylor's dismal prophecies. Indeed, his articles and the subsequent discussion in the RECORDER called forth from Dr. J. U. Newman of the Faculty of Elon College, almost the youngest college in North Carolina, and belonging to one of the numerically weakest denominations in the State, a letter that appeared in the Raleigh News and Observer, July 31, 1894, the spirit and wisdom of which I commend to all that imagine that tearing down the University means building up their own college:

"New life at the University will infuse new life and growth into every college in the State. A State University is a prototype. Consciously or unconsciously the colleges imitate it. * * * Why this feeling of uneasiness among us? Is it not because the University is developing faster than we? Before we decide it is money, let us consider whether it is not the broad, liberal thought and scholarship behind that money doing so much with so little. The influence of this wide-awake policy is already felt by our colleges. We denominational men never did so much hard thinking and effective work to make our colleges command patronage as in the last few years. * * * Many youth, now reached by no college, will augment our patronage. * * * I hail as an omen of good whatever causes the church to unearth its hidden napkins—use its dormant powers. * * * Instead of destroying us, the University will force colleges to be better prepared for work and for giving to our churches larger and grander men.

"If the University causes those deeply concerned in the future of their church colleges to empty some of their pocket books into the college treasury, I say, God bless the University. Give it more money. Let it develop into a Harvard."

John Kendrick Bangs' quaint humor is to enliven the pages of The Ladies' Home Journal with a series of twelve articles depicting the club talk of four men about women's affairs. Mr. Bangs calls this club "The Paradise Club,"—"paradise," he says, "because no woman nor serpent ever entered into it."

"How a Law is Made," is the title of an article in the November number of the North American Review by Senator John L. Mitchell of Wisconsin, who describes the course of a bill through Congress in the most interesting and instructive manner.

He that will often place this world and the next before him, and look steadfastly at both, will find the latter constantly growing greater, and the former less to his view.

Ten years of age, but who declines to give his name to the public, makes this authorized, confidential statement to us:

"When I was one year old, my mamma died of consumption. The doctor said that I, too, would soon die, and all our neighbors thought that even if I did not die, I would never be able to walk, because I was so weak and puny. A gathering formed and broke under my arm. I hurt my finger and it gathered and threw out pieces of bone. If I hurt myself so as to break the skin, it was sure to become a running sore. I had to take lots of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has made me well and strong."—T. D. M., Norcatur, Kans.

Meeting at French's Creek.

Dear Recorder:—Bro. Brunt, our pastor, and Rev. D. J. Clark, our special friend, held a week's meeting at French's Creek church, Bladen county, the first of October. We had a very good meeting. There were several mourners, but no additions. The freshet began to rise so we could not get to the church, consequently we had to close the meeting.

Bro. Brunt is a man after my own heart in one respect: he will not break down the whole side of the church to get members to join. He simply, on the close of the meeting, opens the door of the church for the reception of such as are truly converted, telling them at the same time that they ought to be certain that they were converted, for it would be the worst mistake of a man's life to take conviction for conversion and come into the church unconverted.

I think that is the proper way to open the door of a church for the reception of members; and not do like one good old brother did once at a church of which I was a member. He called for mourners, and I think there must have been at least twenty-five that came forward to be prayed for. And when the prayer was over he asked them to be seated on the seats where they were. He then walked in front of the penitents and asked each one of them if he could trust Jesus. They all answered they could. He then said to the church that a motion was in order to receive them into the church.

One of the deacons of the church was sitting near and said to me, "I don't think, Bro. Bordeaux, it would be right to open the doors of the church for the reception of members on that confession, for it would be hard to find a man wicked enough to say he would not trust Jesus."

I told him I thought he was right. He then got up and objected to the motion, and asked the minister to postpone opening the doors of the church for the reception of members until the next day, which he did. On the next day they were all there, and the minister opened the doors of the church for the reception of members, stating at the same time that he only wanted those to come forward to unite with the church that could truthfully say that they had the witness in their heart that God for Christ had pardoned their sins. And the consequence was that only a very few of the number that were penitents the day before, and would have been received into the church, came forward to unite with the church.

A short time after the meeting I was talking to one of my neighbors who was a mourner on that occasion, but was a very wicked man, and he said he knew he was a great sinner, but he would not tell a lie to the minister by saying he would not trust Jesus.

I do believe that ministers sometimes in their great desire to get members into the church make it too easy for sinners to get into the church. And I do believe that is one of the great causes of so many unconverted people belonging to the churches; and I do pray that God may, by the influence of his Spirit, cause every one of his ministering servants to feel his responsibility to God and man on this line of Christian work. A. J. BORDEAUX.

P. S.—Brethren, remember that the Bladen Association convenes November 8th at Galeed church, near Bladenborough, on the C. C. R. R., and don't forget to bring fifty cents to pay for the RECORDER nineteen weeks. A. J. B. and good food in plenty, tend to make children healthy. If children suffer, however, from Scrofulous, Skin or Scalp Diseases—if their blood is impure and pimples or boils appear, they should be given the right medicine. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery brings about the best bodily condition. It purifies the blood and renders the liver active as well as builds up health and strength. Puny, pale, weak children get a lasting benefit and "a good start" from the use of the "Discovery." It puts on wholesome flesh, and does not nauseate and offend the stomach like the various preparations of Cod liver oil. It's guaranteed to cure you, or your money is returned.

What My Churches are Doing.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I give a statement of what my churches are doing. I have held a meeting at each of my four churches.

We had only one convert at Harris' Chapel, but the church was greatly revived.

Elm Grove in Nash county had two additions. I have resigned this church. In leaving, I pray that the Master will guide and keep it as he sees best. I have served it to the best of my ability for twelve years.

The work at Mt. Hebron is more promising than it has been for years. There were thirty conversions, and twenty-four additions to the church. The community around Mt. Hebron has never before experienced such a revival of religion in all its history.

Wake Cross Roads has been declining for years, but I went there and began work, trusting implicitly to the Saviour for the result, and he gave us souls for our hire. There were a number who gave evidence of their redemption, and thirty joined the church by experience, and two were restored.

It is a very prominent feature in the ministerial work of late to count conversions. Of course it gives us some consolation to see the fruits of our work, but we should refrain from trusting too much in numbers. Wherever God sees fit to put us he will in his own good time make the tree, which now seems barren, be in full bloom, if we do our duty. Therefore we should never be discouraged when one of our churches fails to equal another in the number of its converts.

My work for the coming year is not determined. As yet I have a vacant Sunday. Where the Saviour leads I will follow.

May the blessings of God rest upon you and your work.

Yours in Christ,

M. R. PERNELL.

Roman Catholic News.

It is a curious fact that the Pope himself has been compelled to make a move in the new church in Rome, which was designed as a jubilee gift to the Holy Father, and was to have been completed within the jubilee year. In accepting the church the Pope has been obliged to assume the heavy debt yet remaining, and in order to defray the obligations, he appeals to the generosity of the faithful.

As regards the Papacy, there are three distinct tendencies in Italy—those who wish the Pope and the King, those who wish the Pope King, and those who wish neither Pope nor King.

A letter from New York laments that many reports from Italy, concerning Italian affairs, are sent from Papal sources, with a view to impairing the credit of Italy before the American public, and bringing it into disrepute.

Sudden and miraculous cures are of not uncommon report even in Nineteenth-Century Italy, but the general public is somewhat skeptical in regard to their genuineness, while the government police looks askance upon the consequent excitement among the credulous lower classes. A miracle was announced on April 19th in Modena, calling forth the approving comments of the clerical journals of that city. A crippled woman was brought to the church by her husband, but after crawling three times under the famous Holy Arch of the cathedral she threw away her crutches and walked off cured of her lameness!

During the month of March last four hundred books, mostly Italian works, were placed upon the 'Index Expurgatorious' by the "Sacred Congregation" of the Roman Propaganda. However, the once dreaded 'Index' has become a mere farce in Italy. Most Italians read what they like, but for those who have conscientious scruples, and even for the priests themselves, there is an easy way out of the difficulty. Any one paying three dollars can obtain a special dispensation, which for a certain number of years, allows him to read any and everything proscribed by the 'Index.' A new Italian opera—"The Medici"—which was given without question in Italy, was prohibited in Vienna theatres because it contained allusions that were considered offensive to the Papacy.

It is said that Leo XIII. is much impressed by the spirit of anarchy abroad, and has great fears that the Vatican may be blown up by dynamite some day. In organiz the recent pilgrimage from Spain, which numbered 14,000 workmen, great precaution was taken in the registration office lest some reckless anarchist take this means of gaining admittance to the Holy Father.

Leo XIII's persistent meddling with European politics is very objectionable to a certain portion of his party, who claim that his extreme course will so weaken the position of the Papacy as to make it necessary for the Pope to return to the ancient platform of the neutrality of the Church.—Olive May Eager, in Foreign Mission Journal.

Italy.

A DESERVING COUNTRY.

First of all, we wish to say that Italty is a country which deserves universal attention and interest. No other country has occupied a more important place in the history of the world and in the development of the civilization in which we are rejoicing to day. For many centuries Italy was the centre of a world wide empire.

While it does not now hold the place it once did in human affairs, it is still a goodly land. About thirty millions of people acknowledge Humbert as their king. The land is in most sections still fertile and the scenery is superb. There are numerous large cities filled with their treasures of art and sacred with memories of the past. The noblest products of human genius and industry are to be found within its borders. Its very ruins are inspiring. There is no land in which the studious traveler can find more to interest and instruct him. Every step he takes brings to recollection some great character or event.

THE PEOPLE.

We are not to judge the Italian people by the majority of those who come to this country. These people are, for the most part, the scum of the great cities or the Sicilian peasants who have been sent to America by emigration companies. Very few of the upper or middle classes of Italy leave their own for foreign lands. Indeed, many of those who do go elsewhere to make money return to their native land with the modest fortune they have won to spend their last days at home.

OUR OBLIGATIONS.

It was the literature of Italy which for centuries formed the staple of instruction and quickened the intellect and taste of men. Her histories and philosophies and poetry are still studied in our schools. It is the old Roman law which lies at the base of our modern jurisprudence. We should not forget, too, that it was an Italian who, in the person of Galileo, began our modern scientific studies; an Italian who, in the person of Galvini, opened to us the door of the electrical world; an Italian who, in the person of Columbus, first discovered this continent; and another Italian who, in the person of Amerigo Vespucci, gave us our name. In a general way, therefore, we are under the deepest obligations to Italy.—Rev. A. J. Rowland.

A poor woman brought five dollars to her pastor as a gift to the mission cause, saying, "Here is my thank-offering. The Lord has given me strength to labor and support myself and children, and I have saved this much during the past three months, and I wish it to help give the gospel to others." What has the Lord done for us? What has he spared us? Are we thankful? How can we best show our gratitude? John D. Rockefeller gave last winter one million dollars to a university in Chicago as a thank-offering for recovery from a severe illness. If the thank-offerings should be sent in, in proportion to ability and to what should be our gratitude, our treasury would be overflowing.

If the whole church came up to the standard of these Christianized heathen in sacrifice and service there would be little want of means or laborers. Those who are just emerging from the darkness say, "Send us more light, and send it faster." The Lord of all says, "Woe to them that are at ease in Zion. Thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground."—Christian Steward.

There are two mission fields, the outfield and the infield. The outfield becomes more and more exclusively the field of battle; the infield more and more the field of equipment. The outfield is the field of missionary aggressiveness; the infield of missionary giving, preparing and organizing. On the outfield the church is at the one conspicuous business of "preaching the gospel to every creature;" on the infield the church is praying and planning and studying how this business may best be done, and marshaling resources for its world-wide prosecution.—Dr. Herrick Johnson.

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs.

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON, RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its massing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

The Terrors of Paralysis

OVERCOME AT LAST BY THE ADVANCE OF MEDICAL SCIENCE.

THE TESTIMONY OF A MAN WHO WAS HALF DEAD FOR FOUR YEARS—TO DAY AS WELL AND STRONG AS EVER.

(From the Oswego N. Y. Palladium)

No citizen of this village is better known or more highly respected than Theodore J. Wheeler, who has lived here for nearly half a century. Five years ago he was stricken with paralysis and was in its worst form. The physicians said that he would surely die. But Mr. Wheeler did not die, and it is to tell the readers of the Palladium about his almost miraculous recovery that a reporter called upon him.

Despite his sixty-five years of age, and the intense mental and bodily afflictions, he has been obliged to endure for nearly five years, Mr. Wheeler is still a fine looking man. He answered the reporter's ring at the door bell in person, and invited him into his cosy sitting room, where he told the following story:

"It was on the morning of Nov. 27, 1888, that I was stricken down. I attempted to get up in the morning as usual, when I found that I could not use my limbs or feet. At first I thought they were asleep and rubbed them briskly with my hands for several minutes, but without result. Finally I got back into bed and sent for Dr. S. M. Bennett of this village. He informed me that I had suffered what is commonly called a 'stroke of paralysis.' I could not believe it at first, but the numbness continued to spread, accompanied by a pricking sensation, until the entire lower half of my body, as well as my legs, was affected. My bowels and kidneys refused to perform their functions, and I was only relieved by mechanical process. I was not satisfied with Dr. Bennett's diagnosis, and sent for Dr. Low, of Pulaski. He only confirmed Dr. Bennett's statement and advised me to get ready to die. For six months I lay in bed at the home of my neice, Mrs G. A. Penfield, unable to turn over in bed, hardly, and requiring constant attention and care. Finally I grew used to my helplessness and would crawl out of bed, and getting partially dressed would drag my body about the house, using my hands like an infant when creeping, but unable to help myself in the least with my lower limbs. There was not the slightest feeling in the lower part of my body and a needle thrust into my afflicted parts would not produce the slightest pain. One day I read in the Palladium of a Canadian gentleman who suffered from paralysis and who had found relief in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In the symptoms described by the sufferer I read an almost exact counterpart of my own afflictions, and I determined to give the medicine a trial. Before I could hardly hope for results I began to feel a marked improvement in my condition. First my kidneys and then my bowels, began again, after a lapse of over four years, to perform their natural functions. The numbness left my body and the sense of feeling returned. This continued until the numbness had left my limbs entirely. Now I can go up to the village with one cane and in the house I go around without any. It is with the greatest pleasure that I recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to the public. I know what they have done for me and I believe they will help others similarly afflicted."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are prepared by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company of Schenectady, N. Y., and Brockville Ontario. They contain in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexion, and the tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature.

Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose forms, by the dozen or hundred, and the public is cautioned against numerous imitations sold in this shape) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2 50, and may be had of all druggists or directly by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company from either address.

Last Sunday the Roman Catholics in many congregations began systematic work against the saloon with sermons and prayer especially designed. Since the liquor-sellers have not only defied but even reviled the Pope's American spokesman, it seems quite time Rome were struggling for independence.

There is no unusual news of the Japan-China hostilities. The fact is, since the Czar of Russia and the situation in New York as well as in other States, anent the election, became interesting, the world's mind has turned so far from the Orient that it will be difficult to make an Eastern war "scoop" for a good while.

Alexander III, Czar of Russia, died Nov. 1st, after a severe protracted illness. His son, Nicholas II, was proclaimed Czar the day following. The English and French appear to lament the late ruler's demise. Alexander III was forty nine years of age, and had been Czar since 1881. He was considered remarkably peaceful for one reared as he had been.

Ronda and Elkin.

We commenced a meeting at Ronda on Sunday night, Oct. 14, 1894, and continued five days. As a result, I baptized two men. Our meeting was held in the chapel of the Academy, as we have no church house yet. Our church is very weak, only twenty members—commenced in September with only twelve. We hope to be able to build a church here in the future. Rev. J. W. Burchette gave valuable assistance in the meeting just passed.

We commenced a meeting at Elkin on the third Sunday in October, and continued one week. While there were not many conversions so far as we know, the older brethren say they never saw such a powerful meeting in some respects. The influence of the Spirit was present in great power, and reached from the pulpit to the outskirts of the congregation with more effect than I have ever seen in any meeting. The house was crowded every night, as most of our services were held at night on account of the Factory hands. On last Sunday morning I baptized five in the Yadkin river. The Lord is blessing us all the time—eleven additions to the church during the past two meetings. All praise to God. J. E. GREENE.

About Rheumatism.

A distinguished English traveler, when asked his impression of the Americans as a nation, answered that "outside of rheumatism they were the happiest people on earth."

In this declaration, with its implied assertion of the almost universal prevalence of this dire disease, there is much of truth; for if in this wide world there is a country whose population is, as a class, more generally afflicted with rheumatism than in our own America with its ever-changing climate, medical statistics fail to show it.

Rheumatism, the dread alike of physician and patient is "essentially an inflammation of the fiorous tissue—sometimes, however, involving, as the disease extends, other tissues—and most commonly seizes the fibrous parts which lie around the joints—the larger joints particularly—although the inflammation frequently commences in the head, neck, chest or arms, and extends to other parts of the body." So long as it is confined to extremities, though the pains may be intense and deformity may ensue, but little danger to life is apprehended, but its constant liability to change from one part of the system to another, and even to attack some vital organ, has heretofore rendered it an alarming affection under any known treatment.

To rheumatism belongs two specific forms, classed under the heads, acute and chronic. The former is a febrile disorder and is attended by pains very variable in their character, sharp and lancinating, dull and throbbing, aching, gnawing, boring sensations, heat, redness and swelling of the diseased parts, and not unfrequently causing great constitutional disturbance. The suffering of its martyrs are varied and practically indescribable in their intensity, while ignorant treatment is apt to bring about complications with the heart, which are most dangerous.

Chronic rheumatism differs from this in its freedom from swelling and fever, its effect upon the general health and the severity of the pain; however, the sufferer from this type is more to be pitied, for although less acute, these pains will often foretell, with the accuracy of a barometer, the approach of storms and damp weather and keep their miserable victim always on the watch for an attack.

As unlike as are these two forms of rheumatism, their causes are the same and various. Sometimes it is transmitted—an unhappy legacy from parent to child, and then it appears in its most formidable aspect; it may also arise from the suppression of some eruptive disease; or discharge resulting from disease; but more frequently exposure to wet, cold, damp, or changeable temperature, or the sudden check of perspiration, are the prominent causes.

But the disease is so familiar that our explanation cannot make it as impressive as that which you have witnessed, or perhaps yourself endured.

The most important consideration is how, having become a victim to it, can one rid himself of its shackles. By the experience of others you know that change of climate will not cure rheumatism. Through the same medium you have learned that medicine can afford no permanent relief, and that liniments, lotions and salves are equally ineffective, and in many cases positively dangerous, too often diverting them to the heart, or some other vital organ.

To sum up the whole matter, you are face to face with a disease which is practically incurable by the old methods. If you think this statement too broad, look around upon those sufferers who have exhausted the skill of specialists and the humbuggery of quacks, and whose condition has been made worse rather than better. No wonder you give way to despondency.

Do not despair. We invite your attention to our new method of healing, far in advance of medical science, and destined through its common sense principles to become the most popular, as it is now the greatest, curative agent of the age.

We speak of that wonderful instrument, the Electropoise, and ask your careful examination into the cures it has wrought, a few testimonials of which are appended.

Our book of eighty pages, which is sent free to any applicant, gives full information regarding the treatment. Call or write for one.

RHEUMATISM TWENTY YEARS.

HOLLAND PATENT, N. Y., Oct. 8th, 1894.

Gentlemen: Some time ago you asked me to allow you to use my letter as a testimonial; at that time I was not willing as I wished to test the matter still farther. Nearly four months ago I rented an Electropoise of you. I had so little faith in it that I kept it a profound secret. I used it faithfully, following directions closely. I now wish to say that I have been benefited more than I deemed possible in my most extravagant dreams. My disease was rheumatism of over twenty years' standing, commencing gradually and growing worse from year to year. During the last year it had advanced very rapidly; my joints were stiff and sore; my hands were numb; it became difficult to raise my feet from the floor; I was never free from pain; a good night's sleep was "the exception and not the rule." To-day I can go up and down stairs as easily as I could thirty years ago; can walk with ease; the numbness and soreness has gone from my hands and I sleep well. To be sure I sometimes feel twinges of pain and realize that my old enemy is not entirely routed, but I am reasonably sure that I shall be cured in time. If this letter can be of any use to you, I cheerfully place it at your disposal.

Yours truly, MRS. HELEN M. POTTER.

CONSTITUTIONAL RHEUMATISM.

Dr. W. H. Morgan, an eminent dentist of Nashville, who is dean of the dental department of Vanderbilt University, and formerly president of the National Dental Association, replied when asked about the Electropoise:

"I can only tell you about my own case. I have constitutional rheumatism, and have suffered more or less all my life. My right leg was dwarfed a little from suffering with it in my boyhood. From 1860 to 1890 I was never in any conscious moment free from pain except during a severe illness. For several years I have been so I had to use a crutch and stick in order to walk at all. I had been so badly afflicted with rheumatism that I could not, with my crutch and stick, walk more than fifty yards.

"Mr. DuBois called on me, and asked me to try the Electropoise. I promised, because I had failed to get any substantial relief from the treatment prescribed for me by the most eminent physicians. I commenced the Electropoise with no faith in it. In two weeks I was better and almost free from pain. I have been using the Electropoise ten months, and though I am 73 years old and have suffered all my life, I can now walk a little without either crutch or stick; I can, with a crutch and stick, walk half a mile. My digestion has become good, and a heart trouble, incident to my rheumatism, which manifested itself in the loss of a beat occasionally, and a pulse always as high as 90 and sometimes 100 per minute, has given away and has given me no more trouble. My pulse has come down to within the seventies per minute and my health has in every respect greatly improved."

CONTINUES TO IMPROVE.

June 13th, 1894, Dr. Morgan says he "is now much improved and does not use a crutch at all, his digestion is almost perfect, and he can recommend the Electropoise with the greatest confidence to any sufferer from rheumatism."

Western N. C. Baptist Convention.

The following account of the W. N. C. Baptist Convention is condensed from the Western N. C. Baptist:

The thirty-eighth session of the Western North Carolina Baptist Convention met last Wednesday morning (Oct. 24th) with Pleasant Hill Baptist church, and remained in session until Saturday, 12:30 o'clock.

Convention called to order at 11 o'clock on the first day. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. F. M. Jordan.

Officers were elected as follows: J. H. Tucker, President; D. A. Glenn, First Vice-President; M. A. Jenkins, Second Vice-President; R. H. Sentell, Secretary; Boardman Stradley, Treasurer, and J. D. Brevard, Auditor.

Corresponding messengers and visiting ministers were recognized and invited to a seat with the body.

Committees on preaching, nominations of Boards, Periodicals, Deceased Ministers, Foreign Missions, etc., were appointed.

The report of the Board of Missions and Sunday schools was read by J. L. White, President of the Board. The following figures will give some idea of the work done: Sermons and addresses, 898; religious visits, 581; prayer-meetings held, 207; professions of faith, 222; baptisms, 99; Bibles and Testaments furnished, 764; collected on field, books sold, $267; on salaries, $922 39; other objects, $841.74. Collected, Conventional Missions, $732 04; Foreign Missions, $201; Ministerial Education, $22 36; Orphanage, $87.23; church buildings, $28 01. We are glad to note increased interest. The sum actually expended on our work for the past year is $2,828 54. Of this amount our churches gave $1,761 64, the remaining $1,066 90 being donations from other Boards. Good work done by S. C. Owen, Sunday-school missionary, was reported.

The work of the Woman's Central Committee showed some good work done. Total amount of contributions, $339 63.

In the afternoon, Manager J. H. Mills of the Orphanage addressed the Convention. After the address pledges for the Orphanage were taken, amounting to $135 35.

At night, Rev. J. L. White preached with great power the annual sermon from 1 Cor. 9: 22.

On the morning of the second day, devotional exercises were conducted by A. E. Brown.

The committee on Time, Place and Preacher reported. Time—Oct. 24–28, 1895. Place to be decided by Mission Board. Preacher of the introductory sermon—Rev. J. W. Lawing.

Eleven o'clock being the hour for the special order—Sunday schools—the report was again read. Dr. T. P. Bell, Secretary of the Sunday school Board, addressed the Convention.

S. C. Owen, Sunday-school missionary, who has had much experience in this work, took the floor and gave us a great deal of his experience.

After a few remarks by J. G. Pulliam, G. U. Cowan and others, the report was adopted. Recess.

In the afternoon, the report on Periodicals was read. The report was discussed by E. J. Morgan, J. W. Lawing and others, and after some changes adopted. The Baptist was represented by the editor.

Report on Temperance was read and discussed by F. M. Jordan, S. C. Owen and D. A. Glenn. Bro. Jordan, as usual, made a rousing speech on Temperance. He spoke of how we resolve against and cry down intemperance, and let all our efforts consist only in resolutions. He reminded us of this truth, which he thus expressed: "The loudest preaching is consistent living." Brother Glenn in his remarks said: "Some would have us leave out the report on Temperance in our Associations and Convention, but we should talk it till the judgment day." Report adopted.

GILBERT—WRENN—On Oct. 30th, 1894, at the residence of W. P. Wrenn, Matthew's township, Chatham county, N. C., by Rev. R. R. Moore, Mr. W. Ralph Gilbert and Miss Daisy D. Wrenn.

BAILEY—NIPPER—On Oct. 3d, 1894, at the residence of the bride's mother, in Barton's Creek Township, Wake county, by Rev. J. H. Hutchinson, Mr. Job S. Bailey and Miss Viola B. Nipper, all of Wake county.

DIED.

BYRUM—At the residence of her father, Sister Mary Byrum departed this life October 20th. She was a consistent member of Green's Cross Roads church, Bertie county. She leaves a father, brother and sister to mourn their loss; but their loss is her eternal gain.

The funeral was preached by the writer Oct. 21st. I saw her at church sometime ago well and hale. I thought not of having to preach her funeral so soon.

GEO. W. WHITE.

LANE—Died at his home near Ashton, N. C., on Oct. 18th, 1894, Mr. Charles Thomas Lane, after an illness of only two weeks. He was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Lane, and was in the very prime of life and vigorous manhood. He grew up in the Sabbath-school, and has been a devoted and consistent member of the Baptist church for many years. He leaves a devoted wife and three children and a loving father and mother to mourn their great loss. May God's comforting grace be with the sorely bereaved family.

C. S. T.

JONES—Bro. Seth Jones was born January 18th, 1851, and died Oct. 2d, 1894. Bro. Jones has been afflicted for several years with that fatal disease, consumption—but he lived to see his wife taken from him on January 13th last. He was a consistent member of the Baptist church. He leaves three sons and two daughters to weep for him. May God bless the orphans and guide them through life, and finally may they meet with their father and mother in that brighter world above, where there will be no more dying and weeping.

HARRISON—Sister Addie Harrison, wife of Mr. Lynn Harrison, and daughter of Bro. D. W. Boon and wife, died Sept. 3d, 1894, aged about twenty-one years. She was a member of Mt. Moriah Baptist church for several years. She lived a Christian life till her Heavenly Father saw fit to call her home. She left a husband and two little children, one of which has since died and gone to meet its mother in heaven.

GOWER—Sister Catharine Young Gower, wife of Bro. P. H. Gower, was born June 10th, 1830, and died Sept. 11th, 1894, aged sixty-four years, three months and one day. She leaves a husband and two sons to mourn their loss, and to rejoice that such a woman has lived, not only to bless those of her own family, but her neighbors and all with whom she met. She will be greatly missed not only in her own home, but in her church and community. God comfort the bereaved ones, and may her godly life be imitated by all who knew her.

SWIFT—Our dear brother J. N. Swift, senior deacon of the Baptist church at Plymouth, N. C., died triumphant in the faith Oct. 20th, 1894, at 7 p. m. Our brother was a devout, conscientious Christian man. He leaves a bright record of integrity and consistency. He was a modest, unassuming Christian, going about doing good as Jesus did; a consistant member of the church, always at his post of duty when it was possible; loved by his family, by his friends and by his church. He will be missed because he was a Christian man.

"We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths; in feelings, not in figures on a dial. He most lives who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best."

We extend sympathy to the family and friends.

"Seraphims called thee from earth away
To dwell in the light of celestial day;
Thy sorrows are o'er, thy spirit doth roam
The blissful shores of thy heavenly home."

CANNADY—Our beloved brother, N. E. Cannady, is no more, for God took him unto himself Oct. 23d, 1894. For some days loved ones stood around his bedside expecting each hour to be his last, but the wonderful vitality gave up step by step, and so gentle was death that it seemed only a passage into a sweet repose.

Bro. Cannady was born in 1812, and professed faith in Christ in 1832. Soon after regeneration of heart he joined Brassfields Baptist church, of which he was a member for sixty-two years. He was one of the members that constituted the church at its organization. Fondly did he cherish this grand old church, and sadly will she miss him. His wise counsel and sage advice will cheer and guide us no more in our deliberations. His life was a grand success, being always faithful to his country, constant to his fellow creatures, and true to his God. The prayer of his heart was, "Let the words of my mouth and the meditations of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my redeemer."

Our brother not only prayed this, but lived it each day. Nobly did he carry out the command of Christ, "Go out into the highways and hedges and compel them to come in." His happiest moments were when engaged in God's work, and sweetly did his heart respond to Ps. 122: 1, "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord."

Courageously did this grand soldier of the cross fight the great battle of life, and in the cool of the evening of life he could have well cried out with Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day."

Bro. Cannady leaves seven children and a dear companion to mourn his departure. In the presence of a large concourse of friends we laid him to rest in the family burying ground, his pastor preaching his funeral from Ps. 19: 14; 2 Samuel 3: 38.

Look up, dear companion and children, to your Heavenly Father, who is able to comfort and keep you. Strive to imitate father's and husband's life, that you may all shake hands with him on the eternal shore. May God's choicest blessings rest upon you is the prayer of your pastor.

Tributes of Respect.

At a called communication of Mt. Pleasant Lodge No 137, held Sept. 11th, 1894, the following resolutions were read and adopted:

Resolved, That in the death of our deceased brother, Wm. M. Jackson, our hearts have been deeply pained by this sad and melancholy event.

Resolved, That we deeply deplore the great loss sustained by his family and the community in which he lived, and Mt. Pleasant Lodge a worthy member.

Resolved, That it becomes us to bow with reverence and humility to this melancholy dispensation of providence, thus reminding us that in the midst of life we are in death.

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family and relatives of our deceased brother our sincere and heartfelt sympathy in their sad bereavement.

Resolved, That the Lodge be draped in mourning for thirty days, and that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the Lodge record, a copy be sent to the family of the deceased, also to the Orphan's Friend at Oxford, N. C. for publication.

Of all Fevers

the worst and most serious is Dengue or break-bone fever. Called "break-bone" because one's bones are not only racked with pain, but feel as if they were tightly held, as by a vice.

At times one feels that the pain is almost unbearable, and many are brought to Death's door by the terrible prostration which follows this grievous complaint.

All persons should know that

Brown's Iron Bitters

is the one medicine which relieves this extreme weakness and brings the patient back to sound health by it's well-known medicinal qualities. From the first bottle the improvement is marked and permanent recovery is but a matter of a short period.

The Home Circle.

Serving.

A Tiny shell,
Upon the white sea sand,
Where great waves tell
Of wrecks along the strand;
No eyes may see
Its use where waters curve,
Yet lowlily,
The Father it doth serve.

The stars of night,
Than it how far more grand!
Yet, in his might
Who holds all in his hand,
That shell has place,
Or else it were not here,
To yield a grace
Within its humble sphere.

A Little child,
Beside the great, vast sea,
Whose billows wild
Reach to eternity,—
What can it do,
So helpless and so weak?
The ways seem few
To give Him service meek.

Oh, greater far
Than ocean in its might,
Or radiant star,
Thy soul, within his sight!
With kindly deed,
And loving thoughts to fill
Some earthly need,
'Tis thine to serve him still!

—George Cooper, in S. S. Times.

A Simple Sermon.

The Syrian sun shown pitilessly down on the parched earth. Far and near there was nothing to be seen but a few gnarled old olive trees, whose sad colored foliage was gray with dust, and our horses stumbled at every step over the loose, rolling stones that bestrewed the ground, as we approached our first encampment at Ramleh, the ancient Aramathea.

Upon arrival, we found our tents pitched in close proximity to a burial-ground, whose neglected appearance was in keeping with the rest of the depressing scene.

In one corner of it crouched what seemed at first sight to be but a bundle of rags, until the sound of a suppressed sob reached the ears. It was the voice of nature that makes us all akin, and my friend, a young American woman, and I, almost unconsciously, drew nearer to the bowed form, drawn by instinctive sympathy.

We saw that it was a woman weeping bitterly over a little grave, for the earth was darker in color for the space of two feet, as though lately overturned.

My friend, warm-hearted and impulsive, took in the situation at a glance. Hailing our dragoman, with a gesture she motioned him to follow us, and threw herself on her knees at the side of the sorrow-stricken woman—speaking to her in gentle, soothing tones as a mother speaks to a sick child.

Though the words were unintelligible, the woman could not but feel the tender sympathy expressed in voice, look and manner. She checked her sobs to listen, staring with great hollow eyes from beneath the blue cloth about her head and the black flimsy veil that hid the lower part of her face.

"I want you to tell this woman just what I say," said my friend to the dragoman. "And I shall know by the expression of her face whether you do or not."

We then learned that it was as we had thought—the woman had lost her baby a few days since.

"Why, your baby is not here!" said the American, as though stating an incontrovertible fact.

"It is up there, above the blue. And it is not dead. It has been made alive again, and is well and happy. We know that."

"How do you know?" inquired the mother, in a harsh tone, as though she almost suspected that she was being trifled with.

"Some one came down here from up there and told us so. Some one who loved little children."

"But my child was a girl," she said, as though she was ashamed as well as hopeless.

"He loved all little children."

"Where is he?" the mother inquired, with growing interest.

"He has gone back again, but he left a letter telling us all about it. You shall go there, too, some day, and see your little baby again, if you will try to be loving and good. The letter I spoke of will help you and tell you how to be good."

"Where is the letter?" the woman asked, eagerly now.

"Almost any one who speaks your language and mine can show it to you; but if you could go to Jaffa, where we came from to-day, there are kind people there who could tell you all about it, if they speak English. They are called missionaries."

The American spoke with the deepest conviction, the expression of her animated face, emphasizing every word, which was the more necessary, as the dragoman translated as though he were a machine. The native woman looked dazed, then interested and eager. Next her face took on a look of intelligence and grew earnest, and finally, with an expression of rapture, she threw herself on the ground and kissed my friend's feet. Rising slowly, she then turned away, and we followed her with our prayers.—Mrs. Burton Kingsland, in New York Observer.

Christian Men and Women in Demand.

"There are always good openings for live, energetic men and women of good character in every line of business, to devote all or part of their time to the work." That is what B. F. Johnson of the firm of B. F. Johnson & Co., Richmond, Va., says in reference to their advertisement.

Cream or Milk.

"What am I going to do this vacation?" said Tom, laying his books down on the old porch, and turning to look at his cousin. "Why, I'm going to find something to do that will help mother—that's what!"

"Well, I'd like to help mine, too, if I could get a chance," said Cleve. "There is need enough, now that father is laid up with his broken arm."

"'Chance?'" repeated Tom, catching up the word in his brisk fashion; "there's got to be a chance for me, I tell you. I'm going to spin around this old town like a top till I find it."

"That sounds very fine," said Cleve, with a doleful shake of his head, "but places are not so easy to get. I've tried a little already, mornings and evenings. I've asked at several of the big stores and offices, and nobody wants any help."

"'Big stores and offices!'" Tom fell back on repetition once more. "I might go to the bank and ask Money-bags to let me be president for a little while; I hadn't thought of that. No, sir; that's not the kind of looking I'm going to do. Mother says this world is like a great panful of milk, with only a little cream on top. If you are willing to take milk, you may get your share; but if you must have cream, you are likely to wait long and fare slim."

Cleve did not see his cousin again for several days. He made his own weary round, trying here and there for the things he thought he should like to do—the pleasant places that paid the best; but the world seemed uncomfortably crowded. It occurred to him that, since Tom also was in search of work, it was strange that he did not run across him somewhere; but, when he inquired, he found that Tom had already found work. It was very strange, Cleve thought, chagrined and somewhat envious, that Tom should have been the more successful of the two. Cleve was older, taller and, so he flattered himself, more prepossessing in appearance and address than round-faced, blunt, merry Tom. But one evening he went around to the old porch again; the matter was explained. Tom had just come home from the woollen mill.

"At such dirty work as that!" exclaimed Cleve, in surprise.

"Well, it earns clean money, and that is more than can be said for all easy work," laughed Tom, pouring a fresh supply of water into the great bowl before him and preparing for another plunge. "As for my face and hands, they'll wash; no danger that soap or water will hurt them. Besides, I couldn't afford to spend my whole vacation in looking up something. I took what I could get; and this is steady work, too."

He worked steadily at it, and Cleve tramped pretty steadily, asking here and there—asking somebody to see somebody else and inquire whether a third somebody could not make an opening for him. These embassies necessitated a good deal of waiting, and there were other days when poor Cleve was too discouraged to even try. He did get some odd bits of employment now and then—copying a few letters, taking the place of a clerk who was absent for a week, and occasionally staying in a doctor's office when that busy man of pills and powders was called into the country. But these occupations were too transient to afford much profit.

He saw little of his cousin until, with the crisp, bright autumn days, school reopened. Then Tom appeared, looking remarkably well in a comfortable new suit of clothes, buoyant, and ready for the winter's study.

Cleve glanced down at his own coat, where his pale faced, anxious mother had put in a bit of dainty darning that morning, and over which she had sighed out a fear that the garment could "not be made to last much longer."

"Did you really earn those yourself?" he asked of Tom.

"Yes, sir, besides helping mother, though she says providing these helps her as much as anything," answered Tom, triumphantly. "Why, it was steady work, you see, and that counts up pretty fast. I say, Cleve, that 'milk' mother is always telling about isn't so bad. If you dip in and take your share, that will raise a little cream of its own."—Visitor.

The Charm of Good Manners.

No one who has any appreciation of grace and beauty in nature or in art can fail to recognize the charm of fine manners in an individual. We rejoice in them as we do in a lovely sunset view, or a beautiful piece of architecture, or a fascinating poem, for their own sake and for what they express; but even beyond this they have another attraction in the magnetic power they exert upon all beholders in setting them at ease, in sweeping away shyness, awkwardness, and restraint, and in stimulating them to the expression of whatever is best worth cherishing within them. It is undoubtedly true that the presence of fine manners, whether it be in the home or the social circle, in the workshop or the counting-room, in the visit of charity or the halls of legislation, has an immediate effect in reproducing itself, in diffusing happiness, in developing the faculties, and in eliciting the best that is in everybody.—Selected.

The two most absent-minded men on record are the fellow who thought he had left his watch at home, and then took it out to see if he had time to go back and get it, and the man who put on his office door a card saying: "Out; will be back soon," and on his return sat down on the door step to wait for himself."—Detroit Free Press.

The Sabbath to be Kept.

One morning a gentleman was going to church. He was a happy, cheerful Christian, who had a great respect for the Sabbath. He was a singular man, and would sometimes do and say what children are apt to call "funny things." As he was going along, he met a stranger driving a heavily-loaded wagon through the town. When this gentleman got right right opposite the wagoner, he stopped, turned around, and, lifting up both hands as if in horror, exclaimed, as he gazed under the wagon: "There, there, you are going over it! There, you have gone right over it!"

The driver was frightened. He drew up his reins in an instant, crying: "Whoa! whoa!" and brought his horses to a stand.

Then he looked under the wheels, expecting to see the mangled remains of some innocent child, or, at least, some poor pig that had been crushed to death. But he saw nothing. So, after gazing about, he looked up at the gentleman who had so strangely arrested his attention, and anxiously asked: "Pray, sir, what have I gone over?"

"The fourth commandment," was the quiet reply—"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."—Selected.

THE HEART

is liable to great functional disturbance through sympathy. Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, often causes it to palpitate in a distressing way. Nervous Prostration, Debility and Impoverished Blood, also cause its too rapid pulsations. Many times, Spinal Affections, cause it to labor unduly. Sufferers from such Nervous Affections often imagine themselves the victims of organic heart disease.

ALL NERVOUS DISEASES, as Paralysis, Locomotor Ataxia, Epilepsy, or Fits, St. Vitus's Dance, Sleeplessness, Nervous Prostration, Nervous Debility, Neuralgia, Melancholia and Kindred Ailments, are treated as a specialty, with great success, by the Staff of the Invalids' Hotel. THE two rulers whose power was more absolute than that of any others in late years have been compelled by the nature of their positions to live so guardedly that they have frequently been referred to as prisoners—Pope Leo XIII. and the late Alexander III. of Russia. Leo sought his position; Alexander thought it a cruel fate to have to leave unresponsible private life and become Czar of more than a hundred millions of people.

The late Czar did the world a good deal of service in a disguised and probably unintentional way. Whenever any one predicted war in Europe—where the war cloud is never dispelled—it was a custom to reply, "But you do not take the Czar into account." The Czar was born not directly in the line of succession and was therefore not prepared for imperial life. He was taught not to aspire to command, and when it became necessary, by the awful assassination of his brother, he was not slow to make it known that he preferred peace to conquests. And in order that peace might be maintained without making concessions, he fostered one of the most powerful of modern armies. War could not occur in Europe without involving Russia; and it was a certainty that in event of war Russia had a weight that would determine it favorably to whichever side its force was directed. Thus Alexander had to be taken into account; and thus, no doubt, in the effort to maintain peace for his own sake he exerted a wholesome influence for all the world.

When Alexander came to die the hearts of many that had been hardened against him by the horrible accounts of the cruelty inflicted upon Siberian exiles and the scarcely less inhuman spoliation and persecution of the Jews, were softened by the dreadfulness of his life—which was drawn out in constant apprehension of violent death,—by the sadness that necessarily attaches to early death and by accounts of the agony that he was undergoing. It is said that he lived long enough to learn that the world had decided that he was a good and able man instead of an intolerant and unfeeling tyrant. Hearts have a habit of softening toward those against whom fate has hardened; and it is not a bad habit. But the Siberian horrors as described by Kenan and others, the unabashed injustice that marked the expulsion of the Jews and, not least, the treatment of the conquered Poles, compels one to think that Alexander sought peace only with those who were able to do him harm in war, that he was just only to the powerful.

Deaths do not affect royalty much. Alexander's was followed by the proclamation of the succession of his son Nicholas, who immediately proclaimed the Princess Alix his bride and had a feast before his father's remains were interred. They say there was a tinge of sadness about the affair.

Rulers, even such absolute rulers as Czars, place so many of their functions in the hands of others that some time elapses before their deaths affect matters. The Russian government is directed by four councils, though the Czar's will is law. And Russia will go on as usual until Nicholas grows bold enough to manifest his individuality, and then the world will have an idea of whether it gained or lost when Alexander died. Nicholas is not praised much; no one thinks he is a man of considerable prowess; and it is probable that he will be glad to let well enough alone, being ruler as he is of one-seventh of the land in the world and 120,000,000 people.

IT IS a fact of considerable importance that the cotton crop in the South this year, worth $300 000,000 in the farmers' hands, is sold for $900,000,000 when manufactured. The farmer furnishes the land, cultivates, watches and worries over the growing plant through four months, picks and gins, but all that he does makes but a third of the product's final value. The manufacturer samples, buys, dyes, spins, weaves, sells and ships, and he adds another third, or a little more, maybe. The merchant, who buys, put on his shelves and sells on time, does the rest.

If the South manufactured all the cotton that it raised, instead of depending on England and New England for buyers and prices, the situation would be more hopeful.

If the South could get out of debt, thereby throwing off the power of the buyer, who himself depends on buyers in other lands, it would be impossible for crops to be so poor or sell so low that any farmer would suffer privations. When that independence is gained the farmer will be in a position to produce other than money crops. The farmers who are in trouble are those who are in debt; the others may lay in their supplies, store up their money-crops and wait for prices. And the farmer desires free silver because it will enable him to pay his debts at something like the rate at which they were contracted, while the moneylenders advocate the gold standard because they, shylock like, seek to get the most in return for their investment regardless of consequences.

A FARMER never accumulates a great fortune farming, an author never makes much more than a living by writing, inventors are seldom able to live in splendor, professional men who stick to their professions are usually poor men, in fact, makers of things do not reap the profits. Manufacturers grow wealthy, but merchants who sell the manufactured article build up magnificent fortunes. The publisher becomes the millionaire while the author or the editor is glad of a competence; the real estate man comes along with a boom and gets more out of a ten-acre lot on a spring day than the farmer makes in a year. House builders wax fat while school teachers—mind-builders—barely get along. The ability to do—to create—is more highly prized than the ability to buy and sell at a profit, but the latter is paid a better price, if money is the measure. It requires brains of finer culture to create a distinctive work, but the man who has the speculative bent, the capital to exercise it, and the nerve to take risks with confidence, gets the reward. And this is why so many highly educated men have died poor while those who had but little schooling, having began life as errand boys, instead of college graduates have become merchant princes. It is also the reason why people say education is useless, measuring it by the amount of money it brings back.

A DISTINGUISHED psychological authority has warned his friends to guard themselves with extreme caution against "small vices," as they are called. The reader is probably more or less acquainted with them in one form or another—some one else's, of course. They are small because they seem not to be of consequence, because they do not seem to injure any one and are not usually disapproved, and because they really are small, one at a time. The psychologist, however, speaks of the average representative of the human species as a "bundle of habits" that are small at the beginning; and upon consideration any one will agree with him.

When "small vices" have become a thread in such a bundle they are likely to find their way through and through it, finally entangling and twisting out of shape an entire life. Habit is the bother in almost everything. It does not make an inebriate of a man to drink a glass of wine; but to take the first drink, thereby exposing oneself to the habit of indulging one's appetite for stimulants, "in a 'small' or 'social' way, you know," is how all the miserable drunkards began. Indulgence in a small degree of exaggeration just once is nothing in itself, if it were not the beginning of a long thread of mendacity with many twisting strands. To beat a carman out of a five-cent fare, because "it's none of my business to collect overlooked fares" may not seem to injure one, but just such manifestations of will overcoming moral sense have marked youths who as men were implicated in colossal frauds. One's conscience will serve one well, if it is not ridden to death or made ashamed to assert itself by indulgence in small vices, which singly seem inoffensive, but which, once admitted, do not wait for an invitation the next time; and after awhile they bring along all their family, to take entire possession of him who was once master of himself.

IF THERE is doubt that the world is growing better, the announcement that "Yale College has adopted a new graduation plan, which does away with amatuer orators, no public speaking being had," ought to help dispel it. Graduation speakers were probably originally set forth to display the good work that their diplomas stood for; but there is no college president now who will stake the reputation of his institution upon his students' ability to orate. The oratory of the collegian is following that of Patrick Henry and Regulus to the Shades. The day of cut and dried rant is nearly done. The man who can keep his head and stand an incessant fire of questions, all the while maintaining his line of argument, he is the all-sufficient orator now. And it is a much greater accomplishment than mere spouting of memorized lines.

Worldliness.

A SERMON BY REV. R. VAN DEVENTER.

Rom. 2: 2—"But we are sure that the judgment of God is according to truth against them which commit such things."

Many people feel that it is a difficult thing to draw the line at the right place, and settle the question of worldliness. They feel that they cannot afford to make thoughtless and sweeping statements which they cannot maintain. They are not disposed either to make any compromise with the world. It will not do to appeal to the worldly Christian, his creed is too broad. People would object to the views of the Puritan because they are narrow. We are informed that religious thought has been woven into the habits and customs of life till it is difficult to draw the line. The Lord urged, through his servant, that the Christian pattern his life not after the world. Many were doing it, and the exhortation was pertinent. Many are doing it now, and this talk will not be inappropriate.

I. WHAT IS WORLDLINESS?

(1) It does not consist in making up a list of sins, and labeling them worldliness. The profane men, the impure men, the covetous men, the intemperate men are worldly; but not all worldly men are profane, impure, covetous or intemperate. Any Christian can see the evil of these, but may not be conscious of the baneful effects of worldliness.

(2) Worldliness does not consist in drawing a line, and saying all on this side is right and all on the other side is wrong. It has not been so very long since a Christian sect prohibited members wearing trimmed bonnets and ornaments on their persons. Just a few months since an assembly North declared it sinful to dress the hair in the prevailing fashion. There are other sects of Christians that do not think it sinful to wear flowers on their hats, jewelry on their persons, and even to follow the custom of curling their hair. They believe style essential to good social order and morals. It is fashion in heaven to wear white robes, to live in a city with walls of jasper, gates of pearl and streets of gold, and to make music on harps of gold.

A pious and useful minister said, "If I had time, I would play 'draughts' for the intellectual pleasure." A Christian woman as pious, I suppose, as the preacher, said, "I play 'whist' for the intellectual pleasure." Where shall we draw the line? Shall we say it is right for the preacher to play "draughts," and worldly and wrong for the sister to play "whist"?

(3) Worldliness does not consist in following commercial, literary or artistic pursuits. A man should not be called worldly because he makes money. He is not covetous, he is not a mammon-worshiper, he is using the gifts God gave him, and serving God in the use of them. Some of the best men of the world have been men of affairs—men who honored God in their money-making. A man or woman is not worldly because he writes a symphony, or plays a sonata, not worldly because he paints a landscape, or grows enthusiastic over a study. Even these things may be done for the glory of God and in Jesus' name.

II. WHAT WORLDLINESS IS.

It is a principle, a spirit, a temper, which taints thought and deed, even the whole life. I ask why that ship does not put out to sea. She gracefully rests at anchor in the quiet waters. Her rigging is in order, she is kept newly painted, she looks like she could do good service. I am told she is not safe, she could not stand the storm and waves, she has "dry rot." Now I am sure that "worldliness" will render the life of any Christian unfit for service. He will not be able to resist the temptations that will come down upon him on the voyage of life. A boat on the water, with full sail and fair wind, is a useful and beautiful thing, but a boat with the water in it is at the mercy of the storm, a most useless thing. The Christian in the world can be a power for good, under God, but a Christian with the world in him can do but little service for God and humanity. The Christian that will say unkind things about his neighbor to do him harm, insinuating things about his pastor, and do a sneaking thing when it will bring him success, is a worldly man or woman. I saw a group in a historic uniform composed of General Schofield and staff. As inspiring as they looked, as life-like as they appeared, there was no life in them, they were only stuffed figures. The form, but no power. I remember we have a warning in the Book about having the "form of godliness without the power." I think worldliness will destroy the power.

Any principle the maintenance and practice of which will injure my religious life is worldly and wrong. It must be a question for the individual guided by the Word of God, which will judge him. Does dancing have a bad effect in your life, does it injure your Christian influence? The almost universal testimony of those who have studied the question honestly, is that the dance, as now practiced, is injurious to the Christian's life. Does it hurt you, is the question for you to decide. The facts prove that the dancing Christian is not an active Christian in his church. He is not one of the prayer-meeting workers. He is not useful in the Sunday school. Does the frivolity affect your influence and your usefulness in these lines of work? Facts prove that the dancing church member is not a spiritual power in his church. Are you an exception to the rule? Is your life so given to this or any other frivolity that you have no time and disposition for religious duty and service for the Master? At heart you are worldly. A young man was called to see fine specimens a professor had under a glass. He laughed a contemptuous giggle and passed by saying he had no time for such. The teacher knew no one who had more vacant space in his head, and greater need for knowledge than he. All this sort is indicative of worldliness.

I think we can put card-playing on the same list. Does playing the game of any kind injure you as a Christian? Does the habit lead to gambling? "There is pleasure in the gaming, but for every face that smiles in winning, a thousand more lie rotting in their graves." The young Christian asks, "Am I to have no pleasure?" The question shows how poor his knowledge, and how limited his acquaintance with Jesus' religion. Any religion that has "joy unspeakable and full of glory" cannot be called pleasureless. A religion that has "ways of pleasantness," "paths of peace," rejoicings and fellowship, cannot be called gloomy.

The Christian has entered another life, lives under other laws and in other environments, and should look for the "sacred sweets the hill of Zion yields," and not to the fleshpots of Egypt and to the beggarly elements of this world. The young convert has a very sensitive conscience, he is very quick to detect evil. Let him in the morning of his new life make a list of the things he can approve and of the things he condemns, and adhere to that schedule. He may be called peculiar, he may be regarded a crank, but he would hardly be called worldly.

"Be not conformed to this world."

Blasphemy Against the Holy Spirit.

BY REV. J. J. LANSDELL.

This subject is in the Sunday lessons for November, 1894, and in the Baptist Teacher for that month, Am. Bap. Pub. Society, is a treatise on the subject by Prof. Gaheeba Anderson, D. D., of the Chicago University. Exactly what this sin is, as stated by the learned doctor, is rather difficult to see, but what it is not, in his view, is very plainly stated. He says: "The view that this sin consisted in declaring that Jesus cast out a demon through the power of Beelzebub is clearly untenable." For my own part, I would know nothing of the sin of blasphemy against the Holy Spirit but what Christ said about it as recorded by Matthew, Mark and Luke. From the emphasis which Christ gives it, it stands prominently to itself. To the same record I go for an explanation of what it is. Let us see: Mark 3: 28, 29, 30—"Verily, I say unto you, all sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies wherewith soever they shall blaspheme; but he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation; because they said, He hath an unclean spirit." If we turn back to verse 22 we read: "And the scribes which came down from Jerusalem said, He hath Beelzebub, and by the prince of the devils casteth he out devils." According to Mark's account of what Christ said, it seems to me that he makes this dreadful sin consist in the very thing that our learned doctor says it did not consist in. The scribes had said that Christ cast out devils by Beelzebub, that is, by the aid of Beelzebub, and in this connection he uttered his fearful malediction against the sin against the Holy Ghost, "because they said he hath an unclean spirit." He had performed many miracles, and notably had just healed a man who was both blind and dumb and acknowledged to be possessed with a devil (Matt. 12: 22). The miracles were so plain that, as matters of fact, they could not be denied, but his enemies, in their wicked and persistent opposition to him, as a last resort, charged him with being in league with the devil for power to perform miracles. It was in this connection that he gave name to the particular sin of which they were guilty, and uttered the doom of those who were guilty of that sin.

The views here expressed of this particular sin I have entertained a long time, perhaps forty years. They were made up at a time when there was more preaching about it than I have heard of late years, which led me to as careful an investigation of the subject as I was capable of, and after a careful reading of Dr. Anderson's treatise and a re examination of the Scripture statements, I am more firmly confirmed in the opinion that what is usually called "the sin against the Holy Ghost," consisted in the days of the Son of Man in ascribing the power by which he wrought miracles to satanic influence or aid. I can get nothing else out of the facts as stated by the evangelists. As to whether people commit that sin now that is a question in my mind. Our surroundings are different from those who were brought in immediate contact with the person of Christ. They saw him and heard him speak and were eye-witnesses to the miracles which he wrought. They saw that he was a man, and they as plainly saw that through him a power was manifested that belonged to God alone; and in spite of what they saw and heard they said he hath a devil and casts out devils by Beelzebub. Our surroundings are different. We do not see him in person or hear his voice; we are not eye-witnesses to his miracles. Our position is that of faith; we accept or reject the record which God has given for our instruction and guidance. Under the circumstances, it may be that the sin against the Holy Spirit which has no forgiveness was confined to those who came in personal contact with Christ, saw him, heard him speak and were eye-witnesses of his miracles. But as to whether this particular sin can be committed now, I still think that people may continue in a state of opposition to God and rejection of mercy until all divine influences for their salvation are withdrawn and they are left to "work out their destruction with greediness;" and they are in just as hopeless a condition as were those who committed the sin against the Holy Spirit in the days of Christ's personal ministry.

New Testament Studies—No. 11.

BY RIGHT G. MOORE.

EPISTLES TO THE CORINTHIANS.

1. Corinth. In the history of both Greece and Rome, Corinth occupies a prominent place. As early as the time of Homer, it was famous for its wealth and power. Situated on the narrow isthmus connecting Peloponnesus and northern Greece and possessing two famous harbors, Cenchrea on the east and Lechæum on the west, it held the land traffic from north to south and received by sea the rich merchandise from the chief ports of Europe and Asia. A conspicuous physical feature of the locality is the Acrocorinthus—a massive citadel of rock rising abruptly two thousand feet above sea-land—which forms one of the strongest natural fortifications in the world. In 146 B. C., Mummius, a Roman general, completely demolished Corinth, and its richest treasures were carried to Rome. It lay in ruins for just a hundred years, when, by order of Julius Cæsar, it was rebuilt and colonized with Roman veterans and freedmen. As the capital of Achaia and the headquarters of the Proconsul, Corinth speedily regained its former size, wealth, beauty, and influence. At the time of Paul, it was renowned for its extensive commerce, sumptuous public edifices, numerous manufacturing interests, elegant arts, and polite learning. It was equally famous for its vices, its dissolute manners, its open profligacy, and its shameful licentiousness, fostered by the worship of Venus established there. Hence, Corinth ultimately became the "most corrupt and effeminate city in Greece."

2. Introduction of Christianity. Here Luke (Acts 18) is our principal informant. On his way from Macedonia to Jerusalem, Paul for the first time visited Corinth where he was joined by Silas and Timothy, and spent a year and a half. He at once began preaching the gospel in this licentious and wanton city. He met with fierce opposition among the Jews and turned to the Greeks. In the midst of fears and discouragements, he was cheered by a special revelation (Acts 18: 9, 10), and so continued his labors with ardor and success. A numerous church was organized consisting of some Jews and many Gentiles. The membership was chiefly drawn from the poorer classes (1 Cor. 1: 26); Crispus, Gaius, and Erastus being exceptions. Paul was succeeded in the work at Corinth by Apollos, an Alexandrian Jew of much influence, an orator of great power, and a scholar well versed in the Scriptures.

3. Schism in the church. Soon after its organization, the Corinthian church was severely disturbed by vicious teachers and false doctrines. At least four factions arose and consumed the usefulness of the body. (1) There was a Pauline party which in its loyalty to the Apostle was severely critical of any possible rival and unmindful of higher duties. (2) The Apollonian faction, bewitched by the oratory of Apollos, depreciated Paul as deficient in the graces of style. (3) The Petrine element, perhaps arriving at Corinth from Jerusalem after the departure of Apollos, was bent on mixing up Jewish ideas with Christianity. (4) Another section, called the Christ party, discarded human instrumentality, opposed Apostolic authority, and antagonized all other existing factions. The natural outcome of these dissensions was a loose discipline, abundant irregularities, and a rapid decline from original purity.

4. Features. (1) These lessons are the most lucid and complete of the Apostles. (2) Here Paul's character appears more illustrious than in any other of his writings. (3) "The two Epistles to the Corinthians have a special interest of their own. They are the historical epistles.... They form the earliest chapter of the history of the Christian church." (Stanley). (4) They cover a wider range of subjects than any other of the Epistles. (5) "They combine in a most striking way the utterances of a liberal, manly spirit with doctrines the most humbling." (Angus). (6) These letters display "a combination of conclusive reasoning, pungent reproof, pathetic entreaty, and authoritative command." (Pendleton). (7) "The brevity and yet completeness with which intricate practical problems are discussed, the unerring firmness with which through all plausible sophistry and dishonest scrapes the radical principle is laid bare, and the sharp finality with which it is expressed, reveal not merely the bright eyes, sensitive and thorough Christian feeling of Paul, but also the [illegible] intellectual vigor." (Dod). (8)

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1894.

Rev. C. T. BAILEY, Editor and Proprietor.
J. C. CADDELL, Agent and Correspondent.

The time is short. If you can help, you will never get a better chance. Let us send Bro. Durham to Charlotte reporting our missionaries all paid and cheerful and no debt on the Board. Association treasurers should render their accounts as soon as possible. They are needed now.

A preacher remarked the other day that converts ought to be weighed rather than counted. The question is not how many people profess to follow the Master, but how many follow him, not how many say they have faith, but how many saying follow it with assuring works, not how many, but how much!

Well done, Wadesboro! More than two thousand dollars for the Female University, and still more promised. Bro. Stringfield gets happier and happier as establishment of the University becomes more and more certain; and we rejoice with him. Every Baptist in the State, and everybody else, for that matter, ought to be proud for the privilege of contributing to such a meritorious enterprise.

The most corrupt municipal regime in the world was overthrown when, last week, Tammany Hall, spurned by good men without respect to party, was overwhelmingly defeated. And preachers—Parkhurst being the most prominent, and Tom Dixon, as bold and vigorous and determined as any—did the work. We know a preacher in North Carolina who prayed hard for the result. These preachers have not gone into politics; they have merely repulsed corruption.

Bro. Van Deventer's sermon outline is heartily commended to the reader as clearing up some doubtful points about "worldliness" and removing several pretexts under which the worldly think they are securely hid, forgetting, of course, as many frequently seem to forget, that one cannot fool God. Bro. Lansdell is generally reliable, and the present instance is no exception. The subject is well worth frequent revival and we are glad to be able to have it set forth this week. Bro. Moore displays evidences of his usual care and thoroughness of research in his study of two of Paul's most interesting letters. One finds in Moore's studies a good measure of valuable information compactly and clearly put together.

The brethren had as well make up their minds about the young people, whether they are to be set off in an organization or trained under church influences. The following from a paper that stands by the Bible with a firmness that compels confidence and admiration, is according to our thinking; and we believe it contains the sentiments of nearly all the pastors in our Convention:

If any church wishes a young people's society let it be established by vote of the church, and let it do only such work as the church directs. Let it have no sort of outside allegiance. Let the young people be trained to feel that the district association is their association, that the State convention or general association is theirs, and that the Southern Baptist Convention is theirs. They will thus be trained along denominational lines. Whereas if the young people's society belongs to a body separate from these, the young will look upon that body as theirs, while these other bodies will be regarded as belonging to the old people, and thus the young will be trained away from established denominational lines, and the regular bodies will perish.—Western Recorder.

This year's Convention is well located. There is no point in the State more accessible than Charlotte. There are no pastors more popular than our Charlotte pastors. The attendance ought to be greater than at any previous meeting.

The Convention is always interesting. It will probably be more interesting than ever this year. There are grave questions to be discussed; there is to be the initiation of the young people's movement in well-modified form. The Baptist Female University is coming more and more to demand interest. The question of education in almost any aspect is calculated to interest any one. And then there is a pleasantness connected with Conventions that is always happily recalled. Be sure Charlotte will make it the more pleasant this year.

It is a duty that pastors owe to themselves and the Convention to take part in the annual meetings; and we hope the reader will pardon us for hinting that it makes a pastor better than ever for his churches to help him on the way to the Convention.

Let there be a full attendance of pastors, delegates and visitors.

THE REMEDY OVERLOOKED.

It would be somewhat rash to state it unqualifiedly, but it seems that the world in general is more restless, more dissatisfied with itself than it ever was. Scientists say that the earth underwent many transformations before it became habitable. It was molten and almost like a fluid once, they say. And the theory is that it became cooler and cooler and steadier and denser and denser until it became as it is. However that may be, it is evident that almost all things pass through a period of fluidity, so to speak. If it were not for older heads, every "rising generation" would destroy itself with wild notions taken up in the fluid period of its development. Human beings have their formative stages; and it usually requires a good many hard knocks to properly shape a man. And if they are not delivered in time, they need not be at all.

The present time may be a formative or a settling period. Men are more deeply concerned with themselves and the world than ever. Everybody, nearly, is looking for causes; and everybody, nearly, is enunciating theories and remedies. The fact that there is so much investigation is good evidence that something is wrong and that it will be righted.

In the sphere of politics the situation is but little less than chaotic; in the social sphere there are more problems and more problem-makers than ever; and in religion, while there is a minimum of chaos, there is enough confusion and no little dissatisfaction with the progress of religious influence.

There are other spheres of human activity than political, social and religious, but these three embrace more people and occasion more effort, speculation and difference of opinion than any other. They are also more closely related in that they are all three involved in the life of the average man.

It may be that the problems in these relations, the fierce agitation that at times shakes them all, are preludes to a final settling into even balanced existence—maybe. It is certain that there is enough investigation and effort to relieve and reform to bring about something.

New ideas are as quick of growth and, generally, as early of death as mushrooms. They have followings, though, while they live that attest the widespread desire of new things that is born of sweeping dissatisfaction.

In the religious world many of the workers are disputing about the Old Testament instead of preaching the gospel to every creature. Some are trying to disprove what is in the Bible; others would prove too much: neither class is contributing to the glory of God or the good of man. If the critics were right, the gospel would not be any better or worse for it, for their disputes do not touch the gospel. They are splitting hairs for scholarship's sake. If they are wrong, it is the worse for them that their energies have not been devoted to the spread of the gospel, and it is the worse, too, for those who are without the gospel, but to whom the energy expended in vain critical book- and article writing, disputing and debating, would have carried it long since. These men are making problems for their own exaltation, and they are not concerned with saving souls.

Another class is organizing the world into shape—organizing and organizing. No matter what is desired, there must be a society to get it; and the society must never attain its purpose, lest it lose excuse for existing. Instead of working for souls the effort is to get members for the society, and instead of making the society a power in the land the effort is to get to be at its head and run things, and get renown. These workers have the energy, and many of them have the zeal; but their energy and zeal are wrongly directed. If they will come back to the simple methods of Jesus Christ and set out to save sinners, one at a time, when two are not to be found, they will help matters mightily. If they will work for their church as vigorously as they work for their society, the church will be found to be the best organization of them all.

If social economists will stop making problems and experimenting with theories long enough to join in with Christians who are not splitting theological hairs or organizing their usefulness to death, the two together can solve every problem of this and future times by living the gospel of the Son of God, and teaching others to incorporate its principles into their lives. There is dissatisfaction because Jehovah is not reigning. People are following after falsely-led leaders into more and more complicated circumstances instead of resorting to the plain and undisputed gospel for relief from their burdens. They put the Bible aside as something for dying people, when it is the guide for daily life. Many think it an offense for a Christian to conform his politics to his religion. That is why the people are desirous of new things, why they are turned by every change of wind. They are not grounded; they look for new things overlooking the old; they hang on to men, when they ought to follow Almighty God, who made the world and who knows the way.

The new president of Brazil, Dr. Moraes, takes his seat the 15th inst. He is well-disposed to the missionaries, and his ascendancy is hailed with delight by our brethren in that priest-ridden land.

The anti mission Baptists used to try to bolster their let alone doctrine by saying, "God will send the heathen the gospel when he wants it sent." They overlooked the fact that God doesn't send the gospel to the unsaved here at home, except a messenger carry it; and if messengers are called to preach in America, they may be called to preach in Africa. God gives his children the privilege, which given becomes a duty, to carry the gospel to them without it.

To profess religion is to put yourself under the marching orders of the Great Chieftain.

The secretaries of the Convention have secured the usual Convention rates from the Associated Railways of Virginia and the Carolinas—which include the Atlantic Coast Line, Piedmont Air Line (Southern Railway) and Seaboard Air Line, from Atlantic and North Carolina railroad and the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley.

The General Passenger Agent of the Norfolk and Southern writes that returning delegates will be required to pay only one half the usual fare from Norfolk upon presentation of certificate signed by Convention Secretary.

Inquire at your depot for reduced rates to the Convention, get you a ticket, and be there.

SOUTH FORK ASSOCIATION.

This body met with the church at Maiden, a small village on the Chester and Lenoir Railroad. The brethren were in a fine humor.

Bro. C. M. Murchison was again elected Moderator and Bro. McLane Clerk.

I was a little late in getting in, but the brethren had been very kind, keeping over the discussion of my work till I reached the church Friday. It was a real pleasure to meet again the brethren whom I had not seen for the past two years. Bro. Bridges, who stands some six feet, five inches, was about the first man I met, and he told me that the South Fork had never been in better shape than at this meeting.

Bro. Payseur was present, and served to show what a blessing the Education Board could be in fitting a young man to do his work in the ministry and elsewhere.

Gastonia had a fine delegation—brethren Lewis, Hoffman, Moore and Marshall. Bro. Moore for several years has been Treasurer of his Association, is a man of fine business sense, and withal a model Christian. Bro. Marshall read the report on Education, and followed it with a good speech. Bro. E. F. Jones made a strong speech on State Missions.

Brethren Cashwell and Tom Hufham interested the Association in a report recommending that this Association lend its endorsement to the purchasing of some school property, with a view of establishing a high school, under the influence of the Baptist denomination. This is progress on the right line, and we hope these brethren will meet with the encouragement the enterprise deserves.

Bro. T. P. Bridges, late of the Theological Seminary, was present, and spoke in behalf of the work of that institution. Bro. Matheny spoke with his usual vigor on Education and other subjects before the body.

A new Executive Committee was appointed to look after the mission work of the Association.

Bro. Mills made a good speech for the Orphanage and received a good collection.

I feel grateful to the brethren for the nice list of subscribers I received; but am sorry that the book containing new names and renewals was misplaced for a time, and if there is delay in sending out papers, it will be from this cause.

Saturday evening along with a number of brethren, I take my leave to be at the WEST CHOWAN, TUESDAY, OCT. 30.

Monday evening, we, Drs. Durham and Mitchell are at Pendleton, where brethren Scarboro and Brewer have conveyances to carry us to Murfreesboro for the night. It is always pleasant to spend a while here. Bro. Scarboro told me he had more reason than ever to be thankful that, in spite of the low price of cotton, &c., his churches were going to the Association with their pledges all paid, and would do more for the ensuing year than ever before.

Dr. Owen preached a most excellent sermon at the church in Murfreesboro on Monday night.

Tuesday morning Bro. Saunders had conveyances prepared to carry every one who desired to the Association.

The introductory sermon was preached by Bro. A. Cree. The sermon was one that ought to be printed, and we hope Brother Cree will furnish it to the Recorder for publication.

Bro. R. P. Thomas was again elected Moderator, and Bro. Parker, the former Clerk, was also re-elected.

In a few minutes after the organization, the Association was ready for the discussion of the reports from standing committees. I know of no body which has better system and which does its work with so much ease and satisfaction.

Besides, the large representation from the churches, there were quite a number of visitors which were recognized by the Association. Among these we remember Doctors Speight and Owen of the Atlantic Baptist; Dr. R. T. Vann, who was once a member of Mt. Tabor church, where the Association met; Drs. Durham and Mitchell, and Bro. T. G. Wood, whom the brethren delighted to welcome to his old Association.

The discussions were as fine as could be desired. Drs. Durham, Mitchell and Craig on State Missions, and Drs. Vann and Owen on Home Missions, were listened to with an interest which must have been an inspiration to these brethren from first to last.

Our time for leaving came before the discussion on Foreign Missions, the Orphanage and the Institute were reached. These are favorite interests with this Association, and no doubt met with their usual attention and help from the brethren.

NOTES,

It was a real pleasure to spend a night in the home of Bro. J. A. Vann. He has already passed his three score and ten, but is yet vigorous and has lost none of his former interest in all that makes for the promotion of the Lord's kingdom and the good of the country.

Bro. J. M. Corbett of Boykin's, Va., was recently seriously hurt by being thrown from a buggy by a runaway horse. We are glad to state that he is now improving and will soon be himself again. His oldest son who has been practicing law for some years is now at the Theological Seminary preparing for the work of the ministry.

The school at Murfreesboro is altogether as good as could be expected. This section is specially affected by the low prices of former products. Bro. Brewer is hopeful of a large increase in the spring session. The brethren in this section thoroughly appreciate President Brewer's ability for carrying on a successful school, and we predict that this institution will grow larger and stronger as the years go by.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....The President has proclaimed the 29th inst. Thanksgiving Day.

....Rev. F. M. Morgan recently baptized eighteen converts in Clay county.

....Pastors in need of assistance should consider our four months fifty cents offer.

....Remember that Paul says "to be spiritually minded is life and peace." Think about that.

....More than fifty persons professed conversion in the recent Elsom meetings at Fayetteville.

....Have you made an effort on our special offer? If not, you yet have a chance to grasp a good thing.

....Three weeks and then—the Convention. Be there if you can. If not, see to it that your pastor can.

....Dr. Levi Branson of Raleigh has our thanks for a copy of his interesting and unique Almanac for 1895.

....It is announced that the election of an Assistant Secretary of our Home Board will be deferred until next May.

....Pastor-elect J. T. Betts of Virginia, the French Broad church, Asheville, will take charge the third Sunday.

....Rev. Walter M. Gilmore has been called to the pastorate of our East Durham flock, lately resigned by Bro. Blanchard.

....Rev. M. A. Adams of Reidsville is aiding Bro. Simms in a series of meetings at the Raleigh Baptist Tabernacle this week.

....Will the brother from Harrell's Store who wrote us of the work of the churches of the South River Association kindly send us his name.

....The Union Meeting of the Mount Zion Association will meet with the Haw River Baptist church December 28th, 1894.—J. F. MacDuffie, Chairman.

....Will the legislature elect curtail the whiskey traffic, or will it go on record as having represented bar keepers and moon shiners? We shall see.

....Our Home Board no longer supports an English speaking man in Cuba. Diaz is sufficient, humanly speaking, and Rev. Pendleton Jones has resigned.

....Now is a good time to be getting up a club to gladden our heart at the Convention. Ask your people to renew now. And a new subscriber is never untimely.

....Rev. A. J. Taylor sends us three new subscribers, and informs us that all is well in his field. He has resigned Mt. Adar to accept Cane Creek the first of the coming year.

....Bro. Bell seems to have awaited his limit—November 15th—in vain; and we predict that the Convention will find a welcome at Washington, "pay as you go." "Pity 'tis, 'tis true."

....Elder S. B. Barnes, one of the Recorder's ablest and stanchest friends, and a servant of God in whom there is strength and zeal, has been called by Hillside church for the next year.

....Most of the Associations are passed. Many who usually hand in their renewals at the Associations did not do so this year. Will they not let us hear from them immediately?

....The Recorder's special offer will not be urged much longer. One brother has sent us twenty new subscribers since it was announced. Many have sent more than ten. We hope to hear from many more this month.

....The newest of them all is an effort to organize the good impulses of the world. The organizer has been out of college only a few days, but he is running his organ already.

....Pastors should remember that shepherds do more than feed. They watch. The wolf attacks flocks in many forms in these days. God's watchmen, what a privilege and what responsibility is theirs.

....We observe that church members, who get out of sympathy with their pastor because he sees fit to vote "the other way," have a rather meagre conception of the principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

....God's power is manifested in a myriad ways. The prison in which Dr. Judson died in India stood where now stands a Baptist mission school. What a fruition of Judson's faith! What a victory for the Almighty!

....Rev. O. L. Stringfield is delivering his address, "Christian Education for Young Women," in many parts parts of the State with great success. He entertained an appreciative audience at Monroe one night last week.

....There is a special appeal sent out by another denomination for a free will offering. We thank the Lord that Baptists are expected to make no other kind. That Baptist offerings are free will goes without the saying.

....Rev. Dr. T. D. Talmage has resigned the Brooklyn Tabernacle pastorate. Since he took charge of this congregation his hearers have built four churches for him, two of which were destroyed by fire. Dr. Talmage will probably become an evangelist.

....Rev. A. W. Setzer of Carson, whom the Lord is prospering in work at Cleveland and Thessalonica, has been in many good meetings lately, in which, he writes, "the Lord was good and many souls were saved." He will enter Wake Forest in the near future.

....There are 304 missionary societies for the conversion of the heathen to Christianity, employing 5,530 male missionaries, 2,771 unmarried females, 4,285 native preachers and 45,683 native assistants. The number of communicants in charge of these helpers is more than 1,078,398.

....We will esteem it a great favor if our subscribers whose subscriptions have expired will renew immediately. It is very expensive to send out formal notices, and prompt renewal, in whole or in part, right now, will save us just that much. Do not put it off. See the label on this paper, then act forthwith.

....Dr. M. B. Wharton of Norfolk, Va., has been secured to lecture in the First Baptist church at Raleigh one night the first week in December. There is no more brilliant Baptist preacher in the land than Dr. Wharton. We have known him many years, from his school days till now, and we never have heard him except with interest and instruction.

....After remarking that the presumption of the "higher critics" is incomparably higher than their criticisms, Dr. Gambrell adds that the much-talked-of higher criticism that pretends to be real new, is after all only "literary rehash from German cook shops" of thirty years ago. The so-called higher critics hold six hundred different opinions. Fact.

....Dr. Chas. Lee Smith sends the pleasing information that William Jewell College, Mo., is in highly prosperous condition, having the largest attendance since it was founded; 260 students have been enrolled. The architect is now preparing plans for a new gymnasium building, which will cost somewhat less than $10,000.

....The church at Roxobel in conference Saturday, Oct. 27th, voted to refuse Bro. Cree's resignation, and asked him to continue to serve them, but at the close of the morning service on Sunday Bro. Cree intimated that after prayerful consideration he had been led to decide to terminate his ministry amongst them at the close of the year. Jackson church has called Bro. Cree for the next year.

....If William L. Wilson, the great tariff reformer who "could not be saved from the deluge"—as the press reports said—the other day, can be induced to become president of the Columbian University, he will not have been defeated in vain. We would rather see him in that position than in the Executive Chair of the Nation; and we know no one more fit than he for either. He is not only a scholar, but also a hero in politics; and he ought to be kept at Washington as a bright and shining contradiction of the idea that purity and politics are incongruous.

....Prof. Lanneau's suggestive contrast of certain lines of work at Wake Forest shows that Wake Forest is keeping quite up to date. Physical Science and Natural History have become acknowledged essentials in collegiate education; and it ought to be a source of pride to Baptists that Wake Forest's equipment, while by no means complete, is better in these schools than that of any institution in the State. Prof. Lanneau wisely calls attention to the fact that study of Latin and Greek is not being sacrificed, though he will not deny that these branches are in danger of becoming mere training studies—mental punching bags, so to speak, —while English, French, German and the Sciences become more and more requisite. Wake Forest has been well-equipped in Greek and Latin all the while, as is witnessed by the number of Greek and Latin scholars it has sent out; and now there is reassuring evidence that Modern Languages and the Sciences are to receive their share of attention. The Moral Philosophy course is well provided for. But there is need of more Bible-study facilities; and Political Economy and History ought each to have the undivided attention of a competent professor.

....Rev. C. A. Jenkens has prepared an argument in defense of "close communion," the leading features of which he presented at the late session of the Atlantic Association. Those who heard him there thought it so thoroughly covered the ground that they requested it to be published. It will appear in an early number of the RECORDER.

....To the Christian Index: Do all you can to prevent the Georgia legislature from exempting from taxation parsonages and other species of church property, and the RECORDER will do penance for your going that far into politics. Churches ought not to expect concessions or favors from a State—at least Baptist churches ought not.

....All his acquaintances will be glad to know that Rev. Sam. J. Porter has become pastor at Morehead. He will prove an efficient pastor, and from now on we expect to hear of uninterrupted growth at the "Summer Capital." Porter on one side the Sound, Moore on the other, two Wake Forest men of the class of 1893,—why of course they'll make things move.

....Prest. Harper never lets slip an opportunity for "turning an honest penny"—or several million of them for that matter. At the recent funeral of the late Dr. Swing he made an effort to raise $350,000 for a Swing Memorial Chapel on the grounds of the University, whereupon an exchange asks. "Is this an effort to honor the memory of the dead man, or to utilize it?" Well taken.

....Rev. J. E. White of Edenton helped Rev. A. W. Burfoot in meetings at Bethel and Yeopim. There were twelve additions at each meeting. "The Lord has blessed me in my labors with my churches," Bro Burfoot gratefully writes. Bro. Burfoot has resigned Macedonia in Chowan county to take charge of Roper. Dr. Overby, who has been serving Roper, has resigned it to accept charge of Shiloh.

....Rev. Geo. W. White was recently ordained to the full work of the ministry, the ordaining presbytery being composed of Elders Cale, Tynch and Z W. White. Elder Cale preached the sermon and Elder Tynch delivered the charge; Bro. Z W. White was secretary of the presbytery. The examination was thorough and satisfactory. Brother White is pastor of Green's X Roads church, Bertie county, and those who know him have much confidence in his ability and consecration.

....Mr. Chas. L Hopkins, the clever representative of the Southern Railway, was in Raleigh last week making preparations for the transportation of the brethren and sisters to the Charlotte Convention. Good schedules have been arranged, and prices are to be found in another column. Mr. Hopkins will impart desirable information to any one who intends attending the Convention, if he can get the name and address. If you are going, write him a postal. His address is Charlotte, N. C.

....Particular attention is called to the statement from Dr. R. H. Whitehead in this paper. The RECORDER is glad to know that the information, which it received from a trustworthy source, is not information; and it is happy to make the correction. The Medical School at the University is to a large extent Dr. Whitehead's own individual enterprise; the State does not pay it one cent. And it does not admit sons of doctors free; but if it did, being a private enterprise, it were none of our business.

... For making high professions and doing low things Adventists lead the race. They would seem to be the most pious folks on earth. They are forever talking about other peoples' darkness when they themselves feed on error and live in the dark. They say they want the truth, but when you give it to them they call you a liar. No, we do not blame them for hoping to be annihilated, in fact, if to be annihilated is to come to nothing, they are already in that fix, so far as doing any good here or hereafter, is concerned. Churches should be glad to part with members who have become so blind that they take darkness for light, thinking that all who try to enlighten them are liars.

....Rev. Josiah Elliott wishes to say to his brother ministers and all other readers of the RECORDER: "We are building a neat Missionary Baptist church in Hyde county, which will be the first ever erected in that rich and intelligent county. We believe God's children are interested in their Father's work everywhere. Believing this with all our hearts we desire to make this request: On the third Sabbath in November let each minister have special prayer in his congregation and each family have special prayer at night for the success of this work. If the Baptists will do this, the church will soon be ready for dedication, and the little vine just putting forth its tender branches will spread out and bring forth fruit to the glory of God. O for our united prayers."

....In the whole history of North Carolina there have been thirty Supreme Court Judges. Of these twenty have been Episcopalians, six Presbyterians, one Catholic, two Methodists (Merrimon and Clark) and one Baptist (Faircloth). After next January the Supreme Court will have two Baptists (Faircloth and Montgomery), two Methodists (Clark and Furches) and one Presbyterian (Avery). Next January will go down in history as the first time in the State's history that its Supreme Court was not occupied by two or more Episcopalians. It is stated that there has not been a Baptist Superior Court Judge in this State in a quarter of a century. January 1st brethren R. W. Timberlake and W. S. O'B. Robinson rise to that honor. There may be others. The charge that the smallest sect in North Carolina has had so many offices that it was almost as good as established is not at all groundless. There is but one Episcopalian in every three hundred inhabitants of North Carolina; and, accordingly, it seems about every other man runs for office.

....The North Carolina Baptist Almanac for 1895 will contain results of Baptist mission work in Burmah, Assam, Japan, China, Africa, France, Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Russia, Spain, Mexico, Brazil and Cuba, as conducted by both the Northern and Southern Baptists of America. It will also give revised list of North Carolina Baptist preachers (white and colored) and their postoffices; list of Baptist colleges of America, their number of teachers and students and amount of property owned by each; the new State officers just elected, with salary of each; State institutions; time of holding courts, new members of Congress and very valuable North Carolina history showing the struggle between the people and the church establishment prior to the Revolution. Everybody ought to have a copy.

....Bro. L. O. Lougee died at his home in Raleigh the 10th inst., after an illness of two days. His death brought deep grief to many hearts, as he was well known and greatly esteemed. Bro. Lougee was forty seven years of age. At the time of his death he was treasurer of the county of Wake, treasurer of the Raleigh Baptist Association, treasurer and deacon of the Raleigh Baptist Tabernacle, and of other organizations. He was faithful to all the various trusts bestowed upon him. He leaves a wife and four children who mourn not without hope. The funeral was preached by his pastor, Rev. A. M. Simms, in the Raleigh Tabernacle Sunday afternoon, Dr. N. B Cobb assisting. God's providences are not often interpretable at once; but faith finds them out finally. We cannot see why so good and so useful a man as Bro. Lougee should be taken, but we shall see clearly hereafter.

....Rev. H. A. Brown sends us the following goods news from Winston: "Our meeting closed last night. It was a refreshing season to our membership. About thirty persons made profession of faith in Christ and several backsliders were reclaimed. I think nearly all who made profession will join the church. Bro. Thomas did very efficient preaching. He is safe and sound. There is no danger in his method of conducting meetings. His sermons were full of gospel truth, and his earnest manner of delivery did not fail to make a deep impression upon all who heard. The meetings were unusually largely attended throughout. To God be all the glory.——Bro. John A. Wray is succeeding well at Broad Street. His congregations are good and his people are devoted to him. They say he grows 'better and better.' I believe there is a bright future for this young man if his life is spared. Genial, energetic and gifted, he cannot fail to make himself felt as a power for good in any community.——Our young people's meeting is succeeding satisfactorily so far. It is a blessing to the young people along the line of instruction and training. I do not see the need of a State organization, but I am open to conviction."

State Missions.

In this paper, in the Treasurer's report, can be seen the amount received to date on State Missions. Subtract that amount from $15,000, and the remainder is the amount the Treasurer must receive by Dec. 1st to enable the Board to go to the Convention without a debt on State Missions.

SOME ASSOCIATIONS

held weeks ago have not yet reported, and two Associations held last week—Union and Bladen—have not had time to get in their amounts. The Robeson and Columbus Associations are to be held this week. But when all these amounts are in, it now looks like the Board will need from $1,200 to $1,500 more.

Now is the time for

EVERY PASTOR

to take special collections for this work. This can be done and the amount needed can be secured if all will do what they can just at this time.

There are, doubtless, many

who would gladly aid us at this time with from $5 to $25, if the needs were presented to them. Will you not, dear reader, bring it to their attention at once?

Perhaps there are some

that could and would aid this object if brought to their attention. The time is short. The Treasurer's report closes Dec. 1st. Send all funds to him.

C. DURHAM.

Raleigh, Nov. 12, 1894.

Correction—No Free Tuition for Doctors' Sons.

Mr. Editor:—In the RECORDER of Nov. 7th, you write as follows:

"We are informed that sons of doctors get free tuition in the medical department of the State University, and that such a one is there now whose father is rated at fifty thousand dollars," &c.

Please allow me as the head of the medical department, to state in the columns of the RECORDER that your informant is totally mistaken, and that he had no grounds whatever for his statements.

Respectfully, R. H. WHITEHEAD.

Chapel Hill, Nov. 8, 1894.

Trustees of Wake Forest College.

I am authorised by the President of the Board to announce that there will be a meeting of the Trustees of Wake Forest College, during the session of the N. C. Baptist State Convention, in the city of Charlotte, on Friday, Dec. 7, 1894, at 3 p. m.

B. E. ROYALL, Secretary.

Wake Forest, Nov. 10, 1894.

From President Taylor.

DR. SKINNER'S BOOK.

This work is a most valuable contribution to the religious literature of North Carolina. I have spent several hours in reading it, and have been not only greatly interested, but also much profited. Most people will read the Reminiscences first; and few can read them with dry eyes and untouched by tender emotion. The grave, the gay, the lively and severe all have their place, in this opened storehouse of recollections, and one's only regret is that Bro. Skinner did not write many more pages of the same sort.

But, after all, the Sermons and Addresses are the most valuable part of the book. The former are of the old fashioned sort and appeal directly to the consciences of sinners and saints. If the book shall have the wide circulation which it deserves, I believe that it will be used of God for the awakening and conversion of very many. Surely no one can read the series of Revival Sermons without being more or less awakened to a sense of duty. The addresses are an arsenal of facts and arguments as to important matters and will be of special value to young ministers and other speakers and writers.

ANOTHER BOOK,

which I have read with unusual pleasure and profit, is the "History of the N. C. Railroad" by Hon. Rufus Barringer, and published by the N. C. Historical Society of Chapel Hill. Though I have called it a book, it is only a pamphlet of twenty-one pages. But it has more meat in it than many a 400 page book through which I have waded. It is far more than its name indicates, being a condensed history of North Carolina politics for a long series of years. The Historical Society is to be congratulated on securing and thanked for putting into permanent form this admirable paper.

"FALLACIES."

I cannot help thinking that the objections (so far as they are not personal) made by my Goldsboro critic are, for the most part, anticipated in the articles which have called forth his discussion. Readers will, of course judge for themselves. I shall be glad if, before passing a final verdict, they will examine, if they have not done so, the positions actually taken by me and the reasons assigned for them. I am informed that copies of the little pamphlets can still be secured by any party who will send a request to Rev. C. Durham, Raleigh, on a postal card.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES.

I believe in them. For many years, during my boyhood and early youth, I was a member of one, only it was not called by that name. Never shall I cease to be grateful to God for its helpful influence. I reverenced and loved my pastor and enjoyed his preaching. The venerable deacons quite overawed me. Somehow, I could never get very close to them. But the young men's meeting got very close to me and helped me mightily. The social element was as potent as any other and did not exhaust itself in the meetings themselves. Of course, this association of young people was recognized as a part of the work of the church to which I belonged. Where this is the case, I can see no objection to them. Where this is not the case, the germs of danger may exist. It is gratifying to know that our Baptist Young People's Societies rest special emphasis on this important relation. The programme for the meeting in Charlotte is very attractive, and it is to be hoped that great and good results will flow from the discussion.

"MISERY LOVES COMPANY."

So they say, but I don't believe it. At any rate, it has been, not a comfort, but a grief, to one sick and suffering man this week to know that more than a score of his neighbors were also in pain of body. It is thought to be due to ice-cream eaten at a reception early in the week. The worst now seems to be over and nearly all are convalescent.

SPECIAL MEETINGS

will begin to-morrow and be continued nightly all next week. They will be conducted by Pastor Gwaltney with the assistance of Bro. T. J. Taylor of Warrenton. The thoughts of many throughout the State will be turned toward these services, and the prayers of many will ascend for their abounding success.

CHAS E. TAYLOR.

Wake Forest, Nov. 10, 1894.

From Dr. Willingham.

Dear Brethren:—One half of our Conventional year has gone. We ought to have raised in this time at least one half of all that is needed for the work during the year. At the beginning of the year I apportioned out for each State as I had hoped that they would give. Below you will see what was hoped for, and what has been received for the first half of the year up to the present:

	Needed.	Given.
Alabama	$ 6 000 00	$ 2,150 68
Arkansas	1,200 00	601 01
W. Ark. & In. Ter.	300 00	169 80
Dist. Columbia	600 00
Florida
Georgia	9 000 00	5 000 48
Kentucky	9 000 00	6,383 12
Louisiana	1 200 00	275 84
Maryland	6 600 00	3 906 32
Mississippi	3 400 00	1 082 61
Missouri	4 500 00	2,454 67
North Carolina	4 400 00	2736 67
South Carolina	7,500 00	3 794 56
Tennessee	3,000 00	1 495 84
Texas	7,500 00	4 908 73
Virginia	10,500.00	7,014 63
From all other sources		2,682 82
Total		$48,396 58

Now, brethren, I want to ask if you will not change these figures. I am making an appeal to each State. Will you not come up and put your State up the column. I have been attending State Conventions, and have seen some grand work for State Mission Boards in order to close the year out of debt. Take Texas, for instance, and see her giving over $10,000 in one month; but she rejoiced in the glorious news at her Convention that the State Board was out of debt. The Foreign Mission work also is dear to many of your hearts, and I am thankful many have come up so nobly. I appeal to the pastors now to put this matter before your people. Call on all to give something. And you deacons and Sunday-school workers, help us.

Do not throw this appeal aside. Do something for this cause now. Your help is needed to put your State and the cause right. Oh, that our people would arise and carry forward the work. Awake, awake. Put on thy strength, O Zion. Are there not some who would like to close the year by a thank offering of $500 or $1,000? Some can give $100, many $10, and thousands can give $1. I wish I could show you how much it is needed now. The sisters are trying to raise $10,000 for China as a Christmas offering. We can all make an offering and so worship God. Relying on you, we have kept the workers in the fields and have gotten the money and paid them. But we ought not to have to borrow money to carry on this work. If we all will do our duty, it will not be necessary. Will you do yours?

God hears prayer now as surely as ever. Let us all join in earnest prayer to Him for the work and the workers. Let us all join in special petition to Him, Dec. 1st and 2nd, Saturday and Sunday, for His guidance and blessing on the work. He can give us not only the means but loving hearts to give. We should also remember, as we pray, to thank Him for blessings so freely bestowed on us. Many are turning to Christ in heathen lands. The harvests are white. Who will help us to gather sheaves to day?

Fraternally,

W. J. WILLINGHAM, Cor. Sec.

For. Mis. Board, Richmond, Va., Nov. 5, 1894.

From Morehead City.

Dear Recorder:—Yesterday morning, the 4th inst., I preached my first sermon as pastor of Morehead City Baptist church.

Morehead is a beautiful, thriving town with a population of 1,600. The people are kind, hospitable and persevering. Here one can enjoy the pure, fresh air and grand scenery of the ocean, as well as an abundance of fresh fish and oysters.

Our church has a membership of 190, and the Sunday school, under the leadership of our noble hearted brother, A. S. Willis, comes very near being a model school. This is an active, working church, and is alive to the interests of the Lord's kingdom.

Within a few weeks we hope to move into the new parsonage, which is nearing completion and which will be a monument to the energy of our faithful members.

We hear many kind expressions for Bro. Hight C. Moore, whose faithful labors here are still bringing forth abundant fruit. May the Lord bless him in his work at Monroe.

Bro. J. D. Moore is moving forward in the work at Beaufort, and seems greatly encouraged.

Although not permitted to remain in Brazil to do the work which lay so near our hearts, we are ready to do whatever the Lord may put before us to do. With this feeling, we enter upon our work at this place, looking to the Lord for help and looking to him for the blessing.

Yours in His dear Name,

SAMUEL J. PORTER.

Morehead City, Nov. 5, 1894.

Good Work—A Church Organized.

Dear Recorder:—The Board of Missions requested last summer that the churches give their pastors up for one week at least for mission work in destitute fields in the State of their own choosing. Being providentially and otherwise hindered in obeying this request until recently, I thought I would give through the RECORDER the facts as to that work and its results.

My good Bro. J. C. Sorrels had frequently spoken to me about an inviting field in what is known as "North Cove" in this county, right at the foot of the Blue Ridge, to my mind the garden spot of all this country so far as I have seen, the people as a rule intelligent and well to do. Bro. Sorrels had held a meeting here some time before, resulting in six or eight baptisms; so on Friday before the third Sabbath in October, Bro. S. and myself went to this point, and had good congregations every service, and I think the most intense interest I ever witnessed, really hungering for the gospel of Christ. So before we left, we recognized a Missionary Baptist church of eleven members of the true grit I believe, and among the best citizens of the community, who say that by the help of the Lord, it will not be long before they will cease to worship in the schoolhouse when organized, but will have a good church house and it paid for. The fact is, the outlook here is as encouraging and as inviting a field for pure gospel truth as I have ever seen. Really, the people are hungering and thirsting for it.

With a view to this and other fields in our bounds, we at the last session of the Green River Association passed a resolution asking the churches of which Bro. Sorrells is now pastor, to liberate him from his obligations to them, and the Association agreed to pay him $350 as its missionary in this destitution, believing he was the man sent of God for this work.

There never was a time when there was greater reason for, and need of, the Baptists as a denomination to preach the unadulterated gospel truth in all its parts, "the truth as it is in Christ," "which is the power of God unto salvation"—the gospel of the Apostles, the gospel of our fathers.

Now in these times of isms and departures from the truth of all others is the time for Baptists to boldly and fearlessly proclaim and maintain the truth. God help us to do so. Yours in Christ,

M. M. LANDRUM.

Marion, Nov. 1, 1894.

Dr. Pritchard at Concord.

Dear Recorder:—We have just had the best meeting that our church has ever enjoyed. Dr. Pritchard preached for us five days and became discouraged (not having faith enough!). Then I became discouraged when he left. But the brethren insisted that I should continue another week. I did so. And despite the fact of political unrest and excitement, we had a most excellent meeting. On last Sunday I baptized ten as a result. On next Sunday I shall baptize again. We could not seat our congregation Sunday, and many went to other churches to worship, being unable to get in at our church.

Our church more than doubled her pledges last year. If all the churches can go to the Convention with such a record, it will be delightful.

There are many promising indications to encourage me in the work here. My congregations are very flattering. They love me. I love them.

This year of political change may bring forth much good if it shall teach the people of North Carolina better wisdom than is voiced in the article of Prof. Howell—if it shall teach them to foster general and primary education rather than neglecting this and hurting the educational interests of the State by unjust competition. A principle that must be upheld by ridicule and false insinuations and appeals to prejudice is a dangerous principle.

J. C. ALDERMAN.

Concord, Nov. 6, 1894.

Caldwell Notes.

Dear Recorder:—Though a little late, I will report some meetings held with three of my churches.

Beginning fifth Sunday in July, aided by brethren C. C. Pool and W. B. Beach, we had a good meeting of eight days at King's Creek. Six were added to the church by baptism, and were baptized in a nice, new baptistery built on a little stream near the church. With a small expenditure and a little effort, more of our country churches might have like convenience. Others professed to love the Saviour, but were influenced to unite with a "Hardshell" church in an adjoining community. The meeting was helpful to the church. Not long since this church had to withdraw fellowship from from seven members for uniting with a little Adventist church some three miles off, but that is nothing very strange to us. The Adventists have been here for a dozen or more years, and we have gotten used to them. They are making no great progress. As a rule, the members who were excluded for uniting with the Adventists were not, by any means, our best members. The Adventists, when they first came to this county, were joined by some good brethren and sisters. They have preached their doctrines over and over till they have grown stale and lost much of their novelty. If it were not that they manage to import a fresh preacher from a distance once or twice a year, I hardly think they would be able to hold what they have.

The second Sunday in August, aided by brethren J. M. Shaver and W. B. Beach, we had a few days' meeting at Lower Creek, in which three or four persons made a profession of religion, two were baptized, and we hope others will follow soon.

The last of August, assisted by brethren W. R. Beach and J. S. Gwaltney, we had a meeting of days at North Catawba, which resulted in six additions to the church, one by letter and one restored. This is one of the best churches it has ever been my privilege to serve. It is composed of some excellent material. They have a large evergreen Sunday-school, a weekly prayer meeting, and, I think, will have preaching twice a month. Bro. J. S. Gwaltney has moved near the church and will possibly be procured to preach once a month. Bro. Gwaltney is a good preacher, and has been very successful in meetings in Burke county, held in connection with the pastors.

Bro. R. L. Moore is Superintendent of the North Catawba S. S., and his applications of the S. S. lesson are often equal to a short sermon.

Two are awaiting baptism at Lenoir, and we hope to have a meeting of days there yet this year. We have had a prosperous Sunday-school at Lenoir this year, conducted by Bro. Jos. Powell. He has superintended this Sunday-school in the forenoon, and one at Lower Creek in the afternoon. He has been busy, but has done his work well. We are preparing to do what we can for State Missions and the orphans in November. I hope we may not go up to the Convention this year in debt so badly as last.

Brethren C. C. Pool and W. J. Bomgarner have been engaged in a meeting at Yadkin church recently, but I have not learned the success.

We had a most pleasant Association. We had the presence and assistance of a number of good brethren. Bro. Matheny preached two excellent sermons, besides some good speeches. Bro. White of Taylorsville made a good talk on education and preached a good sermon on Sunday. Bro. Mills was heard gladly in the interest of the orphans. The hospitality of King's Creek and community was all that could be desired. We are arranging to do some Associational missional work this year.

The authenticity of these Epistles is universally admitted. The external and internal evidence are conclusive. Besides, "no church would accept without careful scrutiny so public a monument of its degradation." (Beet). (9) The Apostle treats his subjects clearly and satisfactorily, exhibiting the utmost patience and tenderness and yet, speaking with the decision of inspiration." (Pierce). (10) "Not the least instructive part of these Epistles is the light they throw on the motives and spirit of the Apostles."

I.

5. Occasion. The first extant Epistle to the Corinthians was called forth (1) by the oral information received through "those of the household of Chloe" concerning the deplorable state of affairs in the Corinthian church; (2) by written inquiries from certain members of the church with reference to its scandals and strife. The contents of a former epistle (1 Cor. 5: 9) seem not to have been clearly understood and this is written to answer their questions in further detail. [The last Epistle to the Corinthians, received as canonical by the Armenian church, is regarded by scholars as undoubtedly spurious.]

6. Object. (1) To furnish the instructions requested by the Corinthians on marriage, the relation of Christianity to previous circumcision or slavery, meats offered to idols, collections for the poor, exercise of spiritual gifts, and the order to be observed in their religious assemblies. (2) To purge the church of its vices: the fierce strife of its factions, law-suits against each other before heathen judges, abuse of their gifts and liberties, licentious indulgence, and irregularities in the celebration of the Lord's Supper. (3) To assert the Apostolic authority of the writer and to present the historical proofs of the resurrection.

7. Composition. From his own words (15: 32; 16: 8), we learn that Paul wrote his first letter to the Corinthians shortly before leaving Ephesus where he spent two years. This is further confirmed by the salutations (16: 19) of the churches of Asia, and of Aquila and Priscilla who were in Ephesus at that time (Acts 18: 26). The letter was written after Timothy had been despatched to Corinth (1 Cor. 4: 17) by way of Macedonia (Acts 19: 22), and was very probably sent by the three Corinthians (16: 17) who had come to visit Paul. The date of the Epistle is variously estimated as the spring of A. D. 57 (Conybeare and Howson), fall of A. D. 57 (Alford), and the spring of A. D. 59 (Dods).

8. Contents. This Epistle treats of a number of entirely distinct subjects, and it is not hard to discover a clear analysis of its contents. The inscription covers the first three verses of the letter. Then follow the separate discussions which are thus designated by Dr. Broadus (Sermons and Addresses, p. 176):

	Chapters.
1. Divisions among the Corinthians	1, 2, 3, 4
2. Special evils	5, 6
3. Marriage	7
4. Meat offered to idols	8, 9, 10
5. Abuses in public worship	11, 12, 13, 14
6. The resurrection	15
7. Practical information	16

II.

9. Occasion. The second Epistle to the Corinthians was occasioned by the intelligence received concerning the effect on the church of the Apostle's first letter. Paul had sent both Timothy and Titus to Corinth to emphasize his instructions. On leaving Ephesus he passed by Troas into Macedonia where he was relieved by the arrival and report of Titus. He found with joy that his letter of faithful reproof had been well received in the main, and had awakened in many a profound penitence and a practical regard for church discipline. Still there was a factious minority intensely hostile to Paul; and they depreciated his authority, misrepresented his motives, censured his conduct, and declared him contemptible in person and speech. Under the strong and mingled emotions caused by such intelligence, this second letter was written.

10. Object. The design of the Epistle was manifestly (1) to carry forward the work of reformation. (2) To caution against false teachers. (3) To prepare the Corinthians for the intended visit of the writer. (4) To vindicate himself from the vicious onslaughts of his enemies. (5) To solicit help for the poor in Judea. (6) To confirm the Corinthians in righteous principles and correct action. (7) To express his thankfulness to them for their affection (7: 7), their sorrow for having provoked the former letter (7: 8, 9), and their kindness to Titus (7: 15) who was his representative.

11. Compositions. Both letters to the Corinthians were written in the same year, separated from each other by not more than two or three months. Barely escaping from Ephesus with his life, Paul went to Troas, and not hearing from Corinth, he proceeded into Macedonia, where he received through Titus the desired intelligence. And though on the way to Corinth, he at once wrote his second letter before his visit was made.

12. Character. "We have in this letter kindness, love, commendation, and also indignation, rebuke, and even severity." (Pendleton). "Consolation and rebuke, gentleness and severity, earnestness and irony, succeed each other at very short intervals and without notice" (Alford). This Epistle is "a river which sometimes flows in a gentle stream, sometimes rushes down as a torrent bearing all before it, sometimes spreads out like a placid lake, sometimes loses itself, as it were, in the sand, and breaks out in its fulness at some unexpected place." (Erasmus). "Its excitement and interchange of affections, and, probably also the haste, under which Paul wrote this Epistle, certainly render its expressions often obscure and the construction difficult; but serve only to exalt our admiration of the great oratorial intensity, or the power, with which this outpouring of Paul's spirit, especially interesting as a self-defensive apology, flows and streams onward till at length in the sequel its billows completely overflow the opposition of the adversaries." (Meyer).

13 Contents. According to Bengel, the inscription covers the first two verses and the conclusion the last three, while the discussion occupies the entire body of the letter.

Olshausen also divides the Epistle into three parts: the first occupies three chapters and discusses the consolation (1), plan of Paul's journey (1, 2), and the Apostolic office (3). The second embraces six chapters and deals with the conflict (4), the glorification (5), the admonition (6), godly sorrow (7), and the collection (8, 9). Part third covers the remaining four chapters, and relates to false apostles (10), true apostles (11), the vision (12), and the conclusion (13).

Another interesting threefold division has been made: (1) The Apostolic character and mission—seven chapters. (2) Collection for the poor—two chapters. (3) Apostolic authority—four chapters.

An Old Rhyme Reset.

"Affliction sore long time she bore
Physicians were in vain."
At last one day, a friend did say,
You'd soon be well again"

if you would take, as I did, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for that is the cure for all the peculiar ailments of women. It is a safe, simple and sure remedy. It banishes those distressing maladies that make woman's life a burden, curing all painful irregularities, uterine disorders, inflammation and ulceration, prolapsus and kindred weaknesses. As a nervine it cures nervous exhaustion, prostration, debility, relieves mental anxiety and hypochondria and induces refreshing sleep." She took the advice and is well. "Favorite Prescription" is the only remedy for the delicate derangements and weaknesses of females, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee of curing in every case, or money paid for it returned.

The Lee Laboratory—Its Fruitage.

A little analysis of the work done at Wake Forest reveals clearly the great gain to the College in the gift of Lee Laboratory. A brief statement will doubtless be gratifying to all friends, and especially to those who have to any extent contributed of their means for the present equipment of Wake Forest College.

It will be remembered that the appeal for a Laboratory Building was made and the question agitated during the year 1886–87. The response was prompt. The next year the Building was in place, equipped, in use With what effect! A careful examination of the College records covering the last fifteen years will show the effect. Such examination has been made by the writer. The results—used for another purpose—are here substantially repeated.

Set aside the year of the appeal as a transition period, and compare the seven years preceding with the seven years which have followed. Put in contrast the seven years without a Laboratory and the seven years with a Laboratory.

The average number of students interested in physical sciences, annually during the former period, was sixty one; during the latter period, 146—an increase of over 131 per cent! This marked increase was not due to a like increase in the general attendance. For the average number of the general student body annually, during the former period, was 167; during the latter period, 210, an increase of a little over twenty-five per cent. That is, while the student body increased one-fourth, the number in physical science studies more than doubled. Clearly the added facilities were chiefly instrumental in interesting so many in Laboratory work.

But was there a reaction from the study of the languages to the study of the sciences? Did interest in the languages decline? By no means. I select Greek as the test. The average number of students taking Greek annually, during the former period, was 81; during the latter period, 108—an increase of more than thirty three per cent. Thus the entire student body increased something more than twenty-five per cent., a gratifying advance; but the department of Greek increased much more—thirty-three per cent. It not only kept pace with the general advance, but pressed forward.

In a word, the records show a fair general gain, a vast gain in the study of the sciences, and considerable gain also in the study of the languages.

This is indeed good progress. The talents given are yielding other talents. Lee Laboratory has borne fruit from the first. Its yield is ever increasing.

Those who control consecrated wealth may well be encouraged in adding facilities for the work of Christian education.

Saved Her Life.

Mrs. C. J. WOOLDRIDGE, of Wortham, Texas, saved the life of her child by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"One of my children had Croup. The case was attended by our physician, and was supposed to be well under control. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it strangling. It had nearly ceased to breathe. Realizing that the child's alarming condition had become possible in spite of the medicines given, I reasoned that such remedies would be of no avail. Having part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses, at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given, the child's breathing grew easier, and, in a short time, she was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not hesitate to say that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved her life."

Uncle Cris Gives Notice that He Expects to be at the Convention.

Bro. Bailey:—You have no idea how much good it does me to address you as I have above. It revives old feelings, and brings up so vividly to my mind my wanderings a few years ago upon distant shores with my beloved pastor, and the letters which I wrote at that time for the RECORDER.

I write you this note, however, not to indulge in reminiscences of the past, but simply to inform you that I am at the present time making arrangements to attend the North Carolina Baptist State Convention which meets in Charlotte next month. I shall do the best to have my pastor attend the Convention with me. I am sure that all the brethren will be glad to meet us, and that they will give us a royal welcome. It will do us almost as much good to receive and return their greetings—possible more than it did us to go abroad. I am sorry that neither of us has had the pleasure of being at a single session of the Convention since our return from Europe.

We hope to meet you, dear brother, and many other friends who are very dear to our hearts. There are Drs. Carter, Durham, Taylor (T. J.), J. Q. Adams, and President C. E. Taylor, who in his great paper against State aid has won a thousand more honors than a dozen trips abroad could ever bring him, Chas. A. G. Thomas, who is doing such a great work at Greensboro, J. H. Mills of the Orphanage, and others whose names I cannot mention.

Tell Dr. Pritchard we look to him for a good home, and advise Dr. T. J. Taylor that we look to him for a favorable opportunity for appearing before the Convention.

Love to all the saints who have been abroad, and even to those who have not been so fortunate. UNCLE CRIS.

The Course of A Bill Through Congress.

The course of a bill through Congress is most interesting. Take, for instance, a private bill that has had its origin in the Senate (and for the purpose of illustration the Senate will do as well as the House, for in both of these bodies the system is practically the same). A private bill is, as the term indicates, for the relief of some individual, while a general or "public" measure is far-reaching in its effect. In nine cases out of ten the Senator who introduces a private bill is solicited to do so by one of his constituents who wants a pension, or who desires the charge of desertion removed from his military record, or who has a claim against the Government of some kind or the other. The bill may or may not be properly draughted, but, whether it is or not, it is usually introduced by the Senator without careful consideration. Any error in language or intention is left to the committee to correct by amendment. There is a legend printed on the bill that the Senator first asked and obtained consent to introduce the bill; but, in fact, the Senator does nothing of the kind. He rises in his place during the morning hour, when the introduction of bills is in order, and simply reads the title of the bill and asks that it be referred to the proper committee. The title of the bill is then read by the reading clerk, and the reference is made in a perfunctory way by the President of the Senate. This is called the first reading of the bill. It is true that an objection might be raised to the first reading of the bill, but that has not been done for years, if, in fact, it was ever done. However, this is a safeguard against objectionable legislation. The reason, perhaps, why the rule has never been enforced is that no bill is ever considered in the Senate that has not first received consideration by one of the committees.—Senator John L. Mitchell, of Wisconsin, in North American Review for November.

We are much pleased with the Proceedings of the late Annual Session of the North Carolina Press Association. The essays and addresses were unusually practical and thoughtful, and they deserve to be preserved. Bro. Clark's "Mechanical Excellence in Journalism" deserves especial commendation for its timeliness and for the able manner with which the author impresses the reader with the importance of one of the most neglected features of our State press. The President's address is well conceived and to the point; but we cannot resist the temptation to say that we have no reason to share his bad opinion of Messrs. Ayer & Son, the well-known advertising agents; but, on the other hand, after years of business intercourse, we have the testimony of our own experience and that of businesses which are advertised through them, that they are not only "foursquare" but positively clever.

I gave her a rose long years ago
When her hair was golden and our love was new;
A crimson rose, its leaves aglow
With glistening drops of silver dew.

I plucked a rose from her grave to day;
My hair is silver, the grave is old;
And I whispered, "Love is love always,"
As I dropped a tear in its heart of gold.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Sowing and Reaping.

AT TORRE PELLICE.

At Torre Pellice the congregations are larger and prejudice against Baptists is somewhat conciliated, while, at least in theory, Baptist views have gained ground. Bro. Eager was much impressed with this on his visit there in November—a visit warmly appreciated and leaving a fragrant memory. In September I was present at a baptism there, one of the candidates taking the step despite the violent opposition of her husband. At the out station of San-Germano, one of the brethren offers to give the ground for a chapel. We have the same offer at Boscoreals.

AT SAN REMO.

At San Remo, in the beautiful Riviera, various disorders have been healed, a Sunday school has been begun, there are several catechumens, and the little church, meeting now for the first time in a public "locale," is in a way to evangelize as was not before possible. A law suit brought against us at the instigation of the priests was amicably settled at small expense and the trouble overruled for good. The evangelist there is in part supported by an English Baptist lady, who helps us much, and he spends a part of his time in colportage work in the regions around.

AT GRAVINA.

Another place giving much encouragement is Gravina, formerly an out-station of Bari. The work at Gravina was begun and for some time carried on in the midst of hot persecution, and at the peril of life to all concerned. The business of one of the converts was so boycotted and ruined that he was compelled to remove from the place, carrying with him, however, his new hope and rendering a clear testimony in his new home. But a victory has been won, and now there is a peaceable audience of some twenty to forty persons and a Sunday-school. The rent of the hall has been, so far, paid for by the three or four persons who have definitely accepted the gospel and come out on the Lord's side. No doubt fierce opposition is yet to come; but better a thousand times persecution than liberty with cold in difference. Nay, trouble has already begun, as the proprietor of the hall refuses to rent it to them another year, and the absence and injured circumstances of the most well-to-do brother may necessitate help from the mission.

AT FLORENCE.

During 1893 much seed-sowing was done in connection with the Florence Mission, and some fruit has been gathered. What may yet come to maturity the All-seeing Eye can discern. We have had four preaching-services a week, besides a few special meetings and much private work. The meetings have been fairly well attended, and considerable interest has been manifested in the preaching, both in the city and in the mission hall in the suburbs. Seven were baptized, and several have been enrolled as catechumens. Our new baptistery, the only one within a hundred miles of Florence, is a great convenience, and our prayer is that we may have frequent occasion to use it. An immersion is a great curiosity in this city and will always draw a crowd. We have lately formed a woman's Bible class, which, for the present, promises well.

Notes.

Of all funds received in Richmond, and expended by the Foreign Mission Board last year, only about 8.7 per cent. was used for all expenses of the work at home. In other words, over 91 cents in every dollar was sent to the foreign fields. Some of the States charge to collect foreign-mission funds and others do not.

Some complain that "too many missionaries come home; not enough die on the fields." It is a fact that we have lost by death, in a period of less than two months, three of our noble missionaries on the fields. The conditions of living at home and on these foreign fields is very different. Our missionaries need our sympathy and prayers.

Up to 15th September our receipts were 40 per cent. better this year than last. If we will keep this up through the year, next May we will have paid all obligations and be out of debt. We believe our brethren will continue to help. Let us thank God and press forward.

The Foreign Mission Board lets her missionaries draw their salaries on letters of credit. The money in this way is never idle in being transmitted, otherwise it would be idle for a month or two at a time, and the interest be lost; for thousands this amounts to a good deal during the year.

A brother sent to one of our missions $25, through the Foreign Mission Board in Richmond. It was forwarded, and brought in Mexico about $45, but that was due to difference in exchange, and was really only $25 still. It takes next to nothing to send money to the mission fields, but it does take time and labor and money to raise the funds, whether done through a board by the brethren, or otherwise. We think it is cheaper and better for brethren at home to raise the money, and the missionaries on the field to be able to give all their time to preach the gospel.

Four Dollars a Week.

"I cannot afford to take even a car ride," said one working girl, when asked where she intended to spend her holiday. Further inquiries elicited the facts that she was paying rent, feeding and clothing herself and meeting incidental expenses on the magnificent income of four dollars and eight cents a week! There must have been money stringency in that quarter sometimes.

It would be an interesting study to go into the details of such a case, and dwell on the provision for sickness and slack seasons when even such remunerative labor was not to be had. And yet that girl who would not indulge herself by the outlay of even five cents, gave a dollar in charity where the need was greater than her own.

Another girl who had planned and hoarded months ahead for a two weeks' outing, yielded up her little store to a friend out of work, out of money, and further harassed by the possession of a good-for-nothing drunken brother.—Mary L. O'Sullivan, in Donahoe's Magazine.

"The universe is not quite complete without my work well done."

Baptist tobacco costs more than Baptist missions.—The Kingdom.

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON, RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its massing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

Piedmont Baptist Association.

The first annual meeting assembled in Greensboro, N. C., October 17th, 1894.

After reading the 34th Psalm, the Association was called to order by Dr. C. A. Rominger.

Prayer was offered by Bro. Blount.

Bro. C. A. G. Thomas then arose and explained that the object of the meeting was for the purpose of organizing a new Association.

On motion of Bro. G. W. White, Dr. Rominger was elected Moderator.

In his acceptance he urged the importance of the delegates attending the meetings, and especially our Union meetings.

W. L. Kivett was elected Clerk and G. W. White Treasurer.

Churches and delegates were enrolled as follows:

Greensboro—J. Y. Joyner, R. W. Brooks, G. W. White.

Buchanan—Geo. W. Buchanan, Jas. C. West.

Reidsville—D. L. Blackburn, W. B. Beecham, Dr. Rominger.

Liberty—E. A. Griffin, Geo. Patterson, W. L. Kivett.

Summerfield—J. M. Burton, J. L. Lane.

On motion of Bro Thomas, it was carried that the new Association be named "Piedmont Baptist Association."

The following committee was elected to draft a Constitution for the Association, viz: Rev. M. A. Adams, Dr. W. W. Rowe, Rev. C. A. G. Thomas.

The following Executive Committee, one from each church and the Pastors ex-officio, was elected, viz:—

Reidsville—M. A. Allen.

Summerfield—Dr. J. W. Winchester.

Buchanan—Geo. W. Buchanan.

Greensboro—R. W. Brooks.

Liberty—E. A. Griffin.

Brethren E. E. Blount, W. W. White, and Rev. R. W. Weaver were welcomed to our body and shared our fraternal greetings.

On motion, it was carried that the Association arrange for having Union Meetings on Friday, before and including every fifth Sunday.

By invitation the first Union Meeting will be held with Buchanan church, commencing on Friday, Dec. 30th, 1894.

After speeches from Brethren C. A. G. Thomas, M. A. Adams, and Dr. Rominger, in regard to the consolidation of Home, State, and Associational missions, it was then carried that the three funds constitute our Associational missive funds for thoroughly developing the new Association.

Pledges were received from the churches for Associational missions as follows:

Greensboro, $105; Reidsville, $180; Liberty, $35; Buchanan, $10; Summerfield, $20.

On motion, adjourned until 3:30 o'clock, p. m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

After devotional exercise the Association was called to order by the Moderator according to adjournment.

Committee on Constitution made report which was adopted.

On motion, it was carried that the proceedings of the Association be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER and the North Carolina Baptist for publication. Also about two hundred minutes be published for distribution as soon as possible.

It was moved and carried that the annual Association be held on Thursday before the third Sunday in October, 1895, convening with the church at Liberty, N. C.

The following brethren were appointed to draft the programme for the annual meeting, viz—C. A. G. Thomas, M. A. Adams, and J. L. Lane.

Carried, that a column of finance be inserted in our next minutes showing the value of our church property and work of some missions.

Speeches from Bro. Thomas and Dr. Rominger on Sunday school work and the Orphanage were very impressive.

The Association then took pledges from the various churches as follows:

Greensboro, Foreign Missions, $30; Education, $15; Orphanage, $15; Ministerial Relief Fund, $10.

Reidsville, Education, $50; Orphanage, $35; Ministerial Relief $25.

Liberty, Orphanage, $5.

Summerfield, Foreign Missions, $5; Education, $3 50; Ministerial Relief Fund, $1.

Buchanan, not instructed.

Carried, that all funds be sent to the Treasurer for distribution.

Dr. C. A. Rominger was elected a delegate from this Association to the Southern Baptist Convention. Rev. C. A. G. Thomas was elected alternate.

Adjourned to meet at 7:30 p. m.

NIGHT SESSION.

After song and prayer, the Association convened according to adjournment.

Committee on programme for Association made the following report:

Foreign Missions—M. W. Rowe.
Education—C. A. G. Thomas.
Ministerial Relief—M. A. Adams.
Orphanage—J. B. Crutchfield.
Association Missions—J. L. Lane.
Sunday schools—M. A. Adams.

Introductory sermon Thursday at 11 o'clock, a. m. Executive Committee will supply.

Missionary sermon—M. A. Adams, Friday at 11 o'clock, a. m.

Sermon on Saturday by C. A. G. Thomas.

Sermon on the Duty of Baptists to Teach Distinctive Principles.

The committee recommended that devotional exercises be interspersed during the meeting and that the devotional idea be magnified during the session.

C. A. G. THOMAS,
M. A. ADAMS,
J. L. LANE,
Committee.

REPORT OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee it was decided to employ Bro. J. L. Lane as missionary in the Association to preach at Mount Summit, Jamestown, Gibsonville and Piney Grove at a salary of one hundred dollars a year and railroad expenses to and from Gibsonville.

The employment of other missionaries in the Association was left to the Executive Committee to decide later.

The Missionaries Well on Their Way.

Dear Recorder:—We are on our steamer, the children have retired, and we are waiting for our ship to sail. We have had a very pleasant journey so far.

As we travelled day after day across the United States, I was very much impressed with the vastness and greatness of our country. Millions of acres of fertile land already cleared are waiting for man's brain and money to irrigate. Plenty of water is running through the prairies to water them, and in course of time will be used. Irrigation is already being used in many places, and land once barren for lack of water now produces in great abundance.

We arrived in Tacoma Saturday evening. We were surprised and delighted next day by Dr. Wm. H. Pendleton, pastor of the First Baptist church of Tacoma, giving us a cordial welcome and farewell reception. Although the church affiliated with the Northern Board, yet they gave us just as affectionate a farewell as any of our own Southern churches have done. Dr. Pendleton said: "I love all who love Christ, but I am proud that I am a Baptist. Baptists have the most ancient and most significant history in the world. The three greatest books in the world (not to mention the Bible) "Pilgrim's Progress; Paradise Lost and Robinson Crusoe, were all written by Baptists." He spoke, too, of the greatness of our missionary history. I, too, am humbly proud that I am a Baptist. We find our ship not so large as some others, but we are very comfortably located and hope to have a pleasant journey. We are not in a dilemma to night between two horns, but between two homes—United States and China. We weep at the thought of leaving the old home, loved ones and friends, made doubly dear by the many kindnesses received in the last year. But we rejoice at the thought of going to our new home were God has called us to work, made precious by those whom we have led to Christ.

On arriving in Tacoma, we found a beautiful new Rambler Bicycle sent me by some Baptist ladies in Baltimore. It is one of the lightest and best wheels made, a racing wheel. It will help me to run swiftly and patiently the race that is before me. God bless them for the deed, and help me to use the wheel for his glory. It will be a great comfort and help to me in my work in Shanghai.

I shall not say "Good-by," because I believe that the hearts of those who read this will go along with us. We return full of hope because of what we see on both sides of the ocean. When our people are fully informed, then they will give abundantly. Num. 6: 24-26. Sincerely,

R. T. BRYAN.

TALKS WITH MOTHERS.—No. 3.
HAPPY BABYHOOD.

Every mother wants her baby to thrive, because a healthy child is a happy child. The question of how the baby shall be fed is demanding the attention, as never before, not only of the mothers in the land, but of the entire medical profession also, because it is now realized how much the health of a child can be influenced by proper nutrition during the years of babyhood. As the result of the improper feeding of the infant, the vitality of the child is impaired, and he grows up weak and puny. In these days when artificial food is being so generally resorted to for infants, the demand for a substitute for mother's milk has brought out many foods for which great claims are made. Gustav Mellin, an English chemist, was the first to discover and combine the requisite properties necessary for an artificial food, and with his discovery the rational feeding of infants commenced.

Mellin's Food is the only perfect substitute for mother's milk, and it has done more to make babies strong and healthy than anything else that has ever been invented. Mellin's Food possesses all the requisite heat and flesh producing and bone-forming constituents necessary to give a child health, vigor and vitality. Infants are exceedingly fond of it and thrive upon it when nothing else can be retained upon the stomach. If they have been weak, fretful and troublesome they become happy, healthy and active; bright eyes, rosy cheeks, firm muscles and a strong constitution are the inevitable results of using this excellent preparation. Mellin's Food, being highly nutritious and easily digested, is also perfectly adapted to the wants of invalids and convalescents.

Western Baptist Convention.

We condense from the W. N. C. Baptist the remainder of the proceedings of the Western North Carolina Baptist Convention. These proceedings are continued from last week:

The second day evening session was called to order after a song service. Prayer by G. N. Cowan. Foreign Missions being a special order for the evening, the report was made. Dr. R. H. Graves, a missionary who has spent about thirty eight years of his life in China, was present, and at the request of the Convention, took the stand and addressed the body on the great subject. We give some extracts from the address below:

The subject of the address was, "Progress and Prophets of God's Work among the Heathen." After telling of God's blessing on the work of the past, he discussed the work of the past century. He said: "God's blessing on the past encourages us to expect more in the future on the same lines." He then gave the following statistics: "In 1792, there was a Missionary Society with an income of $410; in 1842, fifty years later, there were 27 societies with an income of $5,000; in 1867, seventy-five years later, there were 58 societies, with an income of $5,100 000; and in 1892 there were 280 societies, with an income of $14.588.358." He also stated that during the one hundred years, there have been organized eighty Bible Societies. "In 1800 there were 48 versions of the Bible; now 320 versions, a circulation of three hundred and fifty million copies.

"There are now 3,388 mission stations; 12,433 outstations. Total, 16,820. There are 7,800 churches; 4,500 ordained preachers; 40,032 lay helpers; 7,000 Sunday schools; 1,006,768 scholars. In 1849 there were nine medical missions; in 1894 there are 359. In 1861 there was one woman's society; in 1894 there are 72.

"Natives have contributed $500,000. Native membership—communicants, 1,081,708, with one half million under watch, awaiting full membership."

Report on Foreign Missions adopted. The Convention adopted Miss Fannie Jeffries as its missionary, and pledged her support. Miss Jeffries will sail for China, the Lord willing, some time next year, with Dr. Graves.

The Convention then dispensed with business and Bro. J. L. White preached to a large congregation.

In the afternoon of the third day, the report on Home Missions was read, discussed by brethren S. A. Chambers, J. G. Pulliam and J. M. Earls, and adopted.

Treasurer's report read and adopted.

A motion to appoint agents in the different Associations to collect mission funds was adopted.

At the night session the report on Education was discussed by several brethren. Prof. M M. Lemmond, Asheville, made the opening speech.

Bro. D. A. Glenn was the next speaker. He presented to the Convention Bro. S. B. Yoder, asking for his support in school. The response was quick and hearty.

Bro. D M. Pressley was presented and his support at Wake Forest pledged.

Bro. Jesse R. Starnes represented Judson College. He made quite an enthusiastic speech in her behalf, saying, "She is not dead yet. Her friends are still holding. Hurrah for Judson."

Bro. J. H. Tucker represented Wake Forest College. Among the many good things he said, we quote only the following; "I believe that every Baptist should patronize a Baptist college."

Report adopted.

The morning session of the fourth day was called to order and devotional exercises were conducted by Bro. A. I. Justice. A touching talk was made by Dr. Graves.

The Young People's Union was discussed by several brethren, and a favorable report adopted.

Committee on Judson College was given sixty days to consider Bro. Starnes' offer in reference to the institution with power to act as they think best.

As the body was about to adjourn, Bro. Tucker said: "This has been the best body of Christian people I have ever seen. This has been a year of marked progress. The only thing we lack in this Convention is getting our preachers here." Interesting talks by several brethren. Sang "God be with you till we meet again."

Thus ended the best session of the Western North Carolina Convention.

In Memoriam.

At his home in Oxford, N. C., on the evening of Oct. 26th, 1894, Capt. C. S. Powell passed gently away, and those who knew him best believe to a brighter and higher existence.

Capt. Powell was a very unobtrusive person, mingling little with men, and though "given to hospitality," he went but little into general society.

The public knew him to be diligent and faithful in business, pre-eminently honest and upright in all his transactions; but he reserved his dearest and best traits for his own family circle and a few intimate friends. These and these only can fully appreciate his character. Perhaps we can not do better than quote the words of one of these. "Mother never tires of speaking of his goodness, his kindness, his love for his family, his touching respect for you all, his devotion to his home. Surely these knightly virtues with his own innate worth, rob his death of all fear and dread."

"He who seeth the end from the beginning," "who is too wise to err, too good to be unkind," has laid upon him his chastening hand, and severe bereavements had wrought in him a great change. His nature became wonderfully subdued and softened, and his gentleness to children was especially noticeable.

Severe suffering was borne with the greatest patience and with the least relief came back the bright and cheerful spirit.

He has crossed the dark stream, and we fondly hope that with other loved ones is gazing in the River of Life and resting under the shade of its trees. A.

Dr. W. H. Morgan.

Dr. W. H. Morgan, an eminent dentist of Nashville, who is dean of the dental department of Vanderbilt University, and formerly president of the National Dental Association, replied when asked about the Electropoise:

"I can only tell you about my own case. I have constitutional rheumatism, and have suffered more or less all my life. My right leg was dwarfed a little from suffering with it in my boyhood. From 1860 to 1890 I was never in any conscious moment free from pain except during a severe illness. For several years I have been so I had to use a crutch and stick in order to walk at all. I had been so badly afflicted with rheumatism that I could not, with my crutch and stick, walk more than fifty yards.

"Mr. DuBois called on me, and ask me to try the Electropoise. I promised, because I had failed to get any substantial relief from the treatment prescribed for me by the most eminent physicians. I commenced the Electropoise with no faith in it. In two weeks I was better and almost free from pain. I have been using the Electropoise ten months, and though I am 73 years old and have suffered all my life, I can now walk a little without either crutch or stick; I can, with a crutch and stick, walk half a mile. My digestion has become good, and a heart trouble, incident to my rheumatism, which manifested itself in the loss of a beat occasionally, and a pulse always as high as 90 and sometimes 100 per minute, has given away and has given me no more trouble. My pulse has come down to within the seventies per minute and my health has in every respect greatly improved."

CONTINUES TO IMPROVE.

June 13th, 1894, Dr. Morgan says he "is now much improved and does not use a crutch at all, his digestion is almost perfect, and he can recommend the Electropoise with the greatest confidence to any sufferer from rheumatism."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

John Kure, a 14 year old boy, broke his leg in Wilmington, Nov. 10th, by jumping from a dray while in motion.

Jos. G Brown has been chosen president of the Raleigh national Bank, and H. E. Litchford succeeds him as cashier.

Lee S Overman of Rowan has been chosen president of the North Carolina Railway to succeed president Kornegay, deceased.

More than a hundred well bred horses were sold at Raleigh last week. The total proceeds of the sale amounted to more than $8000.

Judge of the Superior Court, J. F. Graves died at Mt. Airy the ninth inst. His successor is W. N. Mebane, who will serve until Jan. 1st.

The fusion ticket put forward by the Populists and Republicans, and which was composed of Populists, Republicans and Democrats received about twenty-eight thousand more votes than the straight Democratic candidates at the election of Nov. 6. In the counties the fusionists were even more successful, securing twelve more senators than the Democrats and not less than twenty more members of the lower house. The election for county offices went the same way. The real extent of this reversal will be more apparent, if the reader will recall that most of the counties in North Carolina have been giving Democratic majorities. Some of the counties that have chosen fusionists have heretofore been counted on as thoroughly Democratic. The following are the names and the political faith of the successful State candidates: State Treasurer, W. H. Worth, P.; Chief Justice Supreme Court, W. T. Faircloth, R.; Associate Justice Walter Clark, D.; Associate Justice, D. M. Furches, R., Associate Justice, W. A. Montgomery, D.; Judge Superior Court 3rd dist., E. W. Timberlake; Judge Superior Court 4th dist., W. S. O'B. Robinson; Judge Superior Court 8th dist., A. L. Coble; Judge Superior Court 9th dist., H. B. Starbuck; Judge Superior Court 10th dist., L L. Green; Judge Superior Court 12th dist., W. L. Norwood. We do not know the politics of all the newly elected Superior Court Judges; we feel safe in saying, however, that all of them, with possibly one exception, are Populist). Harry Skinner, P., was elected to congress from the 1st dist.; in the second, the election is still in doubt, the chances being in Cheatham's, R.; favor; Woodward will probably contest the seat; in the Third, Shaw, D., seems to be elected, but Thompson, P., will contest with good chances of winning; in the fourth, Stroud, P., defeated Cooke, D., in the Fifth, Settle, R., defeated Graham, D.; in the Sixth, Lockhart, D., defeated Martin, P.; in the Seventh, Shuford, P., defeated Henderson, D.; in the Eighth, Linney, R., defeated Bower, D.; in the Ninth, matters are so doubtful, that either candidate will make contest if the other is declared the winner—Crawford, D., and Pearson, R., are the candidates, and it is generally thought that the latter will get the seat. Fusionist solicitors were chosen along with the fusionist judges, except in the Fourth judicial district, where E. W. Pou, D., defeated Purnell, R. North Carolina elects two U. S. Senators this winter; one will be a Populist, the other a Republican; both will be free silver men. The Populist campaign leader was Marion Butler; the Republican, A. B. Holton; the Democratic, James H. Pou. The overwhelming reversal was a great surprise to each of them and every one else.

General News.

The sentiment against the English House of Lords is reported to be growing.

It is stated that Attorney-General Olney will resign, and W. L. Wilson be chosen to succeed him.

It is said that Northern bankers are preparing to effect another issue of bonds, desiring good investment for their surplus cash.

South Carolina voted Tillman-Democracy a large majority last week. Tillman Democracy is not straight Democracy, nor Populism, nor Republicanism, nor fusion. It is sui generis.

New York voted, Nov. 6th, in favor of the amendment to the Constitution prohibiting gambling. It will eradicate pool-selling, horse-racing, diminish suicides, save honor and elevate the State.

Japan continues to defeat China. Corea has been occupied, and Pekin is threatened. China is petitioning for peace, and England is trying to effect peace for her, in order to get commercial advantage. Missionaries are reported safe.

Nationally the election was all one way—Republican. Colorado and Kansas, Populist strongholds, elected Republican congressmen. Simpson of Kansas, pioneer of Populism; Bland of Missouri, apostle of free silver; Wilson of West Virginia, knight of tariff reform; Hill of New York, hero of Democracy (Northern), all went down before a flood of votes that rolled against the dominant party from Maine to Texas, and across the country to California. The Senate will be Republican; the House will contain about 240 Republicans, less than 100 Democrats, and 20 Populists. Tennessee elected a Republican Governor; Texas elected one Republic Congressman; New York went Republican by 150 000 majority; Illinois and Indiana went Republican, and also the newly admitted State, Utah. The reversal is generally attributed to the failure to enact a good tariff bill, general heedlessness, the hard times, and the habit the people have of turning all at once against a party.

MARRIED.

KEATON—WHEEDBEE—On Oct. 10th, 1894, at the home of the bride in Woodville, Perquimans county, N. C., by Rev. J. B. Ferebee, John Keaton and Mattie Wheedbee.

DIED.

JONES—Mrs. Susan E. Jones, devoted wife of J. B. Jones, died Sept. 11th, 1894, in the fortieth year of her age. She suffered long, but patiently; and when the summons came her soul quietly passed away. She was a consistent member of Pooler Baptist church, a loving wife, dutiful daughter, kind friend and a faithful follower of Christ.

NORMAN—In Hickory, N. C., on the evening of October 21st, 1894, Mrs. Lillie Gertrude Norman, wife of G. A. Norman, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. DeLorme of Dovesville, S. C. Sister Norman professed faith in Christ and united with the church when about fifteen years of age. She moved with her husband to Hickory about twelve months ago. She was then in feeble health, and gradually grew worse, till on the evening of the 21st her sufferings were at an end and she entered into rest. The Lord be gracious to the devoted husband, parents, all the loved ones, and tenderly care for the dear little girl.

"Sister, thou wast mild and lovely, Gentle as the summer breeze."

PASTOR.

TUCKER—Miss Susan Ada Tucker was born January 6th, 1877, and died Oct. 6th, 1894. Ada was considered from infancy a very bright child. She did not have the early Christian training that many children have, but she was always a good and pious child.

On the 20th of last July, during the meeting held by Rev. J. H. Lamberth, at Concord church, Granville county, she gave herself to the Lord and was baptized the Sunday following. From her baptism to her death she was a faithful attendant on preaching and Sunday-school. Just a few days before she was called from this world to glory, at a family prayer meeting, she was made to rejoice in her hope of glory. The church and pastor feel that they have lost a faithful worker for the Lord. M. P. D.

GOODE—Died at Willow Hall, near Windsor, Bertie county, N. C., on Saturday, Nov. 3d, 1893, Mrs. Mollie Bagwell Goode, wife of R. W. Goode, Esq. She was buried on Sunday in the Episcopal churchyard in Windsor.

Mrs. Goode was a member of Cashie Baptist church, and her pastor, Rev. J. B. Boole, conducted the burial rites. She leaves a husband and three children in sorrow. I have known her many years. In all the walks of life she kept to the straight and narrow way that leads to eternal life.

As a wife she was watchful, faithful and true; as a mother she was tender, kind, loving and gentle; as a neighbor and friend she was sincere, charitable, forgiving, just and hospitable; and as a Christian she was prayerful, faithful and God-fearing.

I never knew a better woman. She leaves a rich legacy of good deeds and an unsullied example of pure life to her kindred and friends. W.

FLORA—Sister Antha Flora, the beloved wife of Mr. R. B. Flora of Moyock, Currituck county, N. C., in her fifty-eighth year, Oct. 20th, 1894, after two years of great suffering, she bade farewell to her dear companion, children and friends, when the angels came and took her soul to that home which Christ, her Saviour, had gone to prepare for her. It must have been a happy exchange to her, the most excruciating pain, for sweet rest in her Father's home.

Sister Flora was a member of Shady Grove Baptist church. She professed faith in Christ when she was quite young and lived a consistent Christian life up to her death. In all her afflictions she was never heard to murmur or complain.

She leaves a husband, two daughters, Mrs. J. C. Ives of Hickory, Va., Mrs. Annie Lee of Moyock, N. C., and two boys, Andrew and Richard Flora of Moyock, N. C., to mourn their loss, but her gain.

"For we must, and parting weep;
What else hath earth for us in store?
These farewell pangs, how sharp and deep!
These farewell words, how sad and sore!
Yet we shall meet again in peace
To sing the song of festal joy,
Where none shall bid our gladness cease,
And none our fellowship destroy.

Then hand to hand, firm linked at last,
And heart to heart enfolded all;
We'll smile upon the troubled past,
And wonder why we wept at all."

It can be truthfully said of Sister Flora:

"Life's race well run,
Life's work well done,
Life's crown well won,
Now comes sweet rest."

May grace be given to the companion and dear children. May they strive to meet the dear loved ones at Home.

P. S. C. DAVIS.

ELLIOTT—Little Ruth, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Elliott of Amboy, N. C., died of diphtheria at the home of her parents on the night of Oct. 27th, 1894, aged eighteen months. This precious little babe was confined to her cradle for three weeks from the time it was first taken. Every attention was given to this sweet little rosebud that could be given by a loving mother, who sat by its side both by day and by night and watched every move of its little form during the whole of its sickness. The best medical skill was given to this precious little jewel, but it seemed that all attention of a loving mother and father and a kind physician proved of no avail. For a loving God gave her and an affectionate Father saw that it was best to take this little jewel from earth to heaven, so we humbly submit, though her little body was placed in a beautiful white casket and then committed to the cold earth, that her soul is safe in the arms of Jesus who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." A connecting link between earth and heaven for mamma, papa, little brother and two little sisters has now been formed. So look up loved ones in the face of your God and catch the sympathizing and compassionate look for you. No longer does your little Ruth suffer with pain, but is now at rest, so look up dear parents with the ransomed throng and praise your God. May God who gave and has taken, give the needed consolation to the bereaved parents in the loss of their dear and sweet little baby Ruth.

"As the sweet flow'r that scents the morn,
But withers in the rising day—
Thus lovely seem'd the infant's dawn,
Thus swiftly fled her life away!"

Growing Old.

The fairest lilies droop at eventide,
The sweetest roses fall from off the stem,
The rarest thing on earth cannot abide,
And we are passing, too, away like them,
We're growing old.

We had our dreams—those rosy dreams of youth—
They faded, and 'twas well. This after prime Hath brought us fuller hopes, and yet, forsooth,
We drop a tear now in this latter time
To think we're old.

We smile at those poor fancies of the past—
A saddened smile, almost akin to pain—
Those high desires, those purposes so vast,
Ah, poor hearts; they cannot come again!
We're growing old.

Old? Well, the heavens are old; this earth is, too.
Old wine is best, maturest fruit most sweet.
Much have we lost, more gained, although 'tis true
We tread life's way with most uncertain feet.
We're growing old.

We move along and scatter as we pace
Soft graces, tender hopes on every hand.
At last, with gray-streaked hair and hollow face,
We step across the boundary of the land
Where no one is old.

A Chain of Trouble.

"Oh, bother!"

It is not an elegant exclamation, and is not spoken aloud. Bessie whispered it quite low, but it was overheard by Nora, who was sitting next to her in school.

"What's the matter?" Nora asked.

"I can't possibly get this example right."

"Let me see it."

Bessie passed her slate behind her to Nora.

It was against the rule of the school for the scholars to hold communication with each other during study hour. Both girls knew that they were breaking the rule. Nora excused herself by the fact that she was helping a younger class mate; Bessie, by the fact that she couldn't get on without help.

Before dismissing school in the afternoon, the teacher called upon each scholar to report upon her conduct for the day. Much to Nora's surprise, Bessie reported,, "No communication." Nora herself was honest enough to say that she had whispered in study hour.

"What did you talk about?" asked the teacher.

"I helped one of the other girls with her arithmetic."

"Then you may remain fifteen minutes after school."

Bessie went home when the rest of the class went. Nora alone remained, to be punished for her fault.

Yet, although Bessie said nothing about it, her conscience was pricking and goading her all the time, and it made her just about as cross as a little girl could be. She fairly snapped out replies to the other children when they spoke to her.

At length, Jennie Brown, who had a taste for rhyming, began to sing:

"There's a very cross child,
And her name is Bessie Wilde,
I don't know what's the trouble,
Unless she's burst a bubble."

At this all the other girls laughed heartily, but Bessie grew very angry. The quick flush in her face told the story.

"I think you're a mean thing!"

As Bessie uttered these passionate words she began to cry. Then, ashamed to be seen in tears, she darted off towards home. Rushing into the family sitting room, she found a place of refuge by her mothers side. Throwing her arms about her mother's neck, she sobbed and cried as though quite broken-hearted.

"Why, my child, what is the matter?"

"Ever and ever so much, mamma. I whispered in school—and I got help from Nora—and I told an untruth about it—and I was cross to the girls coming home—and I got angry when they teased me."

"Poor little girl," said her mother, soothingly. "So you've done all those wrong things to day."

"Yes, mamma, and I let Nora stay and be punished, and I ought to have been myself."

Mamma looked perplexed. She scarcely knew what to say.

"Do you think that the teacher is in the school-room yet?"

"Yes, mamma; she had to put exercises on the board for to-morrow."

"Then I advise you to run back at once and tell the truth about your whispering."

"Oh, mamma, I can't."

"Yes, Bessie, you can. It requires courage to confess, when one has done wrong, but it is the only honorable course, and the only way to set your conscience at ease."

After hesitating a few minutes, Bessie decided to follow her mother's advice. She quite surprised the teacher, and also Nora, who had staid longer than required, because she had become interested in what was going on. Her presence made things harder for Bessie, but she mustered sufficient courage to tell all the truth. After listening, the teacher said:

"Then I think that you ought to stay here fifteen minutes with me; don't you, Bessie?"

"Yes, Miss Smith, I do; but that won't make things right."

"No. It is never possible to undo a wrong; but your staying will prove that you are really sorry, since you are willing to take the merited punishment."

"Then I'll stay, Miss Smith. But what shall I do about my getting angry? I'm ashamed of that, too."

"I think that, if I were in your place, I would go home by way of Jennie Brown's house, and tell her that I was sorry."

"Oh, dear! how much confessing I have to do!"

"Yes, my child; it's too bad that you have got yourself into all this trouble, but you are taking the most honorable way."

"That's just what mamma says," replied Bessie.

The fifteen minutes over, she and Nora, who had waited for her, went to see Jennie Brown. At sight of Bessie, she ran up to her, and, kissing her affectionately, said:

"Please forgive me, Bessie, for teasing you. I ought not to have done it."

"And I ought not to have been cross and angry," was the humble reply.

So Bessie "made up" all around, and showed that she was truly sorry for her mistakes of the day. At night, when she kneeled to say her prayers, she asked the Lord Jesus, too, to forgive her and to make her a better girl.

He never refuses either forgiveness or help to those who ask of him sincerely. It is right to confess to others when we have done wrong, but it is necessary, above all, to ask for his pardon and grace.—Mary Joanna Porter, in Christian Intelligencer.

The Value of Good Bread is appreciated by every one, but so few are able to secure uniformly good results. This is often due to the fact that when milk is used the character of it is exceedingly variable; by using Borden's Peerless Brand Evaporated Cream you will overcome this difficulty. Try it.

"I Will Bear You Safely."

A beautiful lesson of trust is found in the following:

On the second trip of the Morning Star, in 1858, Captain Brown took with him his little son Fred, then a boy perhaps six or seven years of age. The little fellow was a restless and lively little climber. While the craft was near the shore he delighted to get into the ship's boat, which hung on the cranes over the water, at the side of the vessel, in readiness to be lowered at once into the water.

We reached Ebon just at evening, and as the daylight was fading in the west our vessel, with all sail set and with a light breeze, came up into smooth water, and was gliding gently by the line of sand beach and the rows of cocoanut and pandanus trees on our right.

Suddenly a splash was heard, and one said: "What is that?"

Another said: "Where is Fred? He was playing in the boat a minute ago."

At this moment Captain Brown appeared on deck; He instantly grasped the situation, and, giving the command, "Put the helm down and lower the boat," he kicked off his slippers, threw off his coat and jumped over the taff-rail into the sea.

In less time than it takes to write these words, he reached the floundering, drowning boy, and, lifting him up, bade him place his hands on father's shoulders.

No time was lost in lowering the boat, while the vessel, with her square sails aback, came to a sudden standstill.

In eight or ten minutes from the moment that the splash was heard, a happy ship's company welcomed the brave captain and dripping son safe on board in the deepening dusk of evening.

Some twelve or fourteen years later in his New England home, this same Fred Brown found his feet entering the cold waters of that Jordan that divides us from the shining shore.

His loving father said to him: "You remember, Fred, how, when you were struggling in the deep ocean, I said to you, 'Just place your hands, Freddie, on my shoulders and I will bear you up;' so now the loving Saviour says to you: 'Just place your hands on my shoulders and I will bear you safely over.' Can you not trust him in this hour as you trusted me then?"

The boy trusted the Saviour and was borne safely over the flood.—Religious Herald.

Bits of Advice to Girls.

WHAT TO AVOID.

A loud, weak, affected, whining, harsh or shrill tone of voice.

Extravagances in conversation—such phrases as "awfully this," "beastly that," "don't you know?" "hate" for "dislike."

Sudden exclamations of annoyance, surprise and joy—such as "bother!" "gracious!" "how jolly!"

Yawning when listening to any one.

Talking on family matters, even to bosom friends.

Attempting any vocal or instrumental piece of music you cannot execute with ease.

Crossing your letters.

Making a short, sharp nod with the head, intended to do duty as a bow.

WHAT TO CULTIVATE.

An unaffected, low, distinct, silver-toned voice.

The art of pleasing those around you, and being pleased with them and all they may do for you.

The charm of making little sacrifices quite naturally, as if of no account to yourself.

The habit of making allowances for the opinions, feelings or prejudices of others.

An erect carriage, a sound body.

A good memory for faces and facts connected with them; thus avoiding giving offence through not recognizing or bowing to people, or saying to them what had best be left unsaid.

The art of listening without impatience to prosy talkers, and smiling at the twice-told tale or joke.—The Christian Observer.

"I am tired of seeing all the flowers at weddings and funerals; we need a few in between. Maybe a few flowers put into the hand when it was warm, instead of when icy cold; might have kept the hands warm a little longer. Anyway, it would have made the heart that has ceased to beat, a little lighter."—Mrs. Bottome.

Love Your Mothers.

Young men, love your mothers. I have often been impressed with what is related of an Indian. He was asked, if he were rowing his wife and mother in the same boat across a dangerous stream, and one had to be lost, which one he would save? "My mother; for," said he, "a man can have another wife, but he never can have but one mother."

Hannah, the mother of the prophet Samuel, not only had a son serving God in his house, but she lived to see that son become one of the most illustrious men, the last and best judge of Israel for twenty years, the most honored of the prophets, and the maker of kings. He became a great author, having composed the Book of Ruth, one of the most charming productions of the ages; and while thousands of earth's population have been honored with his name, and have delighted to wear it, Hannah was also blessed in that she had other sons and daughters to cheer her old age. When at the pinnacle of greatness Samuel never forgot his mother. No truly great man ever does. Many of us know how James A. Garfield made his way from a log-cabin to the White House. In his boyhood he was supported and encouraged by the manual labor of his dear old mother. When inaugurated President of the United States, the dear old mother sat by his side, and after delivering his inaugural address and taking the oath of office, forgetting all else and turning aside from ex presidents, judges of the Supreme Court, senators and the representatives of foreign courts, and for the moment even forgetful of his wife, he, first of all, embraced his mother and imprinted a kiss of affection upon her wrinkled cheek, for he had known the worth of a mother. How many of us would give a world for a glimpse of our mothers as we saw them in our childhood, and, with Elizabeth Akers Allen, exclaim:

"Backward, turn backward, O Time, in your flight;
Make me a child again just for to-night;
Mother, come back from the echoless shore,
Take me again to your heart as of yore;
Kiss from my forehead the furrows of care,
Smooth the few silver threads out of my hair;
Over my slumbers your loving watch keep—
Rock me to sleep, mother; rock me to sleep."

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—In the fall of last year I suffered from rheumatism in my left shoulder and elbow. I tried a great many remedies, recommended to me by friends, but they all failed to afford relief. From the time I began Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, until I felt that I was cured, was a period covering four or five months. While the attack lasted, I suffered a great deal, and could not dress or undress myself. Although I am 73 years old, I now regard my health as splendid. I had spent a great deal of money previously, in various kinds of medicine, but the "Discovery," from the day I commenced until I was well, cost only FOUR DOLLARS.

THE result of the late election, decisive though it seem, cannot be said to signify popular approval of any of the proposed nostrums of this nation's ills. Free silver men are not encouraged, low-tariff men are less hopeful than ever, gold monometallists, while confident of the near future, can see nothing in the late election to encourage them, protectionists confess that McKinleyism will not be tolerated. It can safely be said that there were more people in this country November 6th who thought themselves in need of a change than there had been in several decades. In evidence that principles were not paramount and that personal character was not considered, it is submitted that parties as far apart as the poles co-operated perfectly. The people were evidently out of patience with the regime; they were ready for any means of getting a change.

The result is evidently not a revolution. There's nothing new, except office holders. It may be called a revolt, if you will; but it would be better designated a rebuke—as deserved as it was stinging, in some instances, cruelly unmerited in others. It is a calamity that the bars are again up against tariff reform; it is well that future Congresses have an example to warn them against delay and absenteeism, that future Senates will be more mindful than to hold a nation prostrate in suspense and finally, in disregard of the popular will, yield to the greed of corporate power. It is quite evident that the good will of trusts and railways, which is very good while it lasts, is not as saving as the good will of the individual voters. The next time the Democratic party gets in power, a Gorman will not be permitted to split upon a Wilson's bill; and if the Democrats have a hundred majority in the House, we fancy it will never be necessary for the Sergeant to arm himself with warrants and hunt several hours for a quorum.

There is no doubt but that the flattering victories that the principles of the Democratic party won in 1890 and 1892 (the people voted for principles without regard to men in those years), the large majority in the House, the sweeping vote for Cleveland, the prospect of a good majority in the Senate, turned the head of that party. And the present overwhelming victors should not forget "to fear the sword the myrtle hides." The late experience teaches that the people who give may also take away; that the people are still jealous of their trusts: and they will rebuke them with whom they have reproaked, if they, intoxicated with success, overconfident because of the recent sweeping majorities, insolently disregard the people, or make a record of absenteeism, scandal or concession to corporation influence. The people will reverse the majority of any party, howsoever popular it or its principles, if they have cause to suspect its leading men of faithlessness. And, it is a truth, they will return to principles as soon as they are rid of the men.

It is not to be questioned that the hard times were a considerable force in the election. Any party in control during such a period is liable to be held accountable for all ills. The hard times had begun a year before Cleveland was elected, but we do not choose to lay them at Harrison's or any one's door. The Democrats devoted themselves to trying to prove that the times were not hard, but the people had seen the wolf with their own eyes, and, though prosperity was returning, they still feared him. It would have been to more purpose to try to show (which is quite possible) that the state of affairs is due to external conditions, of which no party has control.

It is true that times seem better now than a year ago. Business is improving, money is easier, industry is quicker; but prices are still low and the people are ill clad and their children have no school-books nor other intellectual food. But if they had, we would not give the credit for it to a political party, though, doubtless, the party would be popular enough.

The times made the people irritable, distrustful and desirous of change. When mishap befalls a ship, men are quick to speak of her as ill starred; and after that they distrust her and her name. Instead of holding the tempest accountable, the ship is called unlucky. One may set out at the wrong time. So also may a political party.

It has been said that the result will not insure free coinage. It is beyond doubt, however, that the majority of the voters believe in free coinage. They have been compelled by the disappointments of sad experience to believe that, with Cleveland president, anything but gold monometalism is improbable, and they voted with him in their mind's eye. Mr. Cleveland would surprise them if he could obtain the much-desired international agreement, which, were it possible, is surer of success than independent free coinage. But the international agreement is probably a subterfuge; it becomes less and less possible. The people have lost confidence in Cleveland. There was a time when he was thought to be incapable of using subterfuges. No president has been more popular than he, and not many have lost so much of popular confidence. The middle and lower classes firmly believe that he has sold himself to "Wall Street." The policy of his first term was as thoroughly in accord with the popular will as that of his second term is regardless of that will. Deep disappointment in Cleveland's second administration (which he may yet redeem) was another determining influence.

Thus a House of Representatives with a record of absenteeism and little or no record of achievement, a Senate in actual disrepute, at odds with the House and the President; a state of business affairs that influenced the people to seek a change; disappointment in a popular idol; failure to secure promised financial measures, issuance of bonds and consequent distrust, were some of the factors in the late reversal. All of them are temporary.

IN ADDITION to the general influences there were others, peculiar to the State, that effected a result in North Carolina which amazed all parties.

The manifest determination to return Senator Ransom, the slur upon his opponent, the reputation for "shrewdness" that Chairman Pou began with, over-confidence, etc., etc., are some of the factors. It is not to be overlooked, either, that the party was divided against itself last spring, and that the division was made the occasion for charging it with being controlled by a machine, which, in turn, it was alleged, was controlled by corporation influence. The charge was common enough by opponents, but when members of the party made it and actually brought out evidence, surely one should not be censured for becoming distrustful.

We firmly adhere to the principle of non-partisan State or county officers. A tariff-reformer in a court house or the Legislature might as well be in a cornfield, so far as promoting tariff reform is concerned. Efficiency and faithfulness are sufficient recommendations. We fear that the late election established about as many partisans as it turned down. At least, they have been partisans. We are free to give the plaudit to any officeholder who adheres to the will of his constituents in preference to that of caucuses and party leaders. And we shall not hesitate to encourage every officeholder to think that he is representing the whole people, not a party, holding the public good above party expediency.

The public may rest assured that if it is true that the Democratic party was "bossed," or influenced by corporations (the charge is familiar to every one), attempts will be made to "boss" the next Legislature; and if corporations were powerful with the old regime, the same corporations will try to become powerful with the new. And if they do, the people shall know. Corporations are for themselves, and any party that they can use is their party. Corporations and money-power are trying to control all parties. Let the newly elected legislators and Congressmen steel their souls against temptation; and let the people watch. Let corruption be dismayed!

THE Democratic party will always have a good following of good people in this State; but if it is to elicit the sympathy and inspire the confidence of the great body of the white people, it must manifest more regard for the people and less solicitude for the welfare of a large number of perennial, parasitical office-hunters; and it must clear its skirts forever of every suggestion of corporation influence.

LET no one anticipate all the good things or all the evil things promised or predicted on the late campaign. The state of affairs may improve, but neither paradise nor the millenium is at hand; matters may become worse, but reconstruction will not be repeated. Meanwhile let all be cheerfully up and doing for God and native land.

Things at Home.

BY REV. G. W. GREENE.

There are so many things in China about which I should like to tell the readers of the RECORDER, and there is so little time to write about these, that I can seldom venture to say a word about what is happening at home. Besides, I am so far away that if I undertake to discuss current events, what I might say is out of date before it can be printed. I often feel moved to put in a word expressing my opinion about these things; but I have confidence in my brethren, and when I came away, I left them to manage home affairs, and do not feel that they need my help.

But I have seen two things in the papers recently about which I feel moved to say a word.

ENDORSING THE BRETHREN.

I see some are trying to get the Southern Baptist Convention into this business. Some want to elect the brethren to office in the Convention to endorse their political course, while others wish to withhold endorsement by electing some one else. I remember a few years ago the Baptist State Convention had the worst attack of this kind I have ever seen. There were four brethren who needed endorsement, and the friends of each wanted to elect their man President of the Convention to endorse him. One wished to receive the nomination of his party for high office at the approaching political convention, and his friends thought to elect him President of the Convention would help him. Another, in the estimation of his friends, had been badly treated in a recent political convention, and so he ought to be elected President of the Convention as a rebuke to those who had treated him so. Another had recently had a warm newspaper discussion, and his friends wished to elect him President to endorse his action in the controversy. The fourth was the President of the preceding year, and as he had only "one term," he ought to be endorsed by a second election. It took four or five ballots to elect. There was nothing more interesting in the whole proceeding than to watch the look of disgust on Dr. Overby's face as he observed these attempts to endorse the brethren. I am glad that the Convention now elects men to office because they are well qualified to discharge the duties of the office, and not because they need endorsement.

VALID BAPTISM.

I find this sentence in a recent paper, "If baptism is invalid unless administered by a regularly ordained minister, there is no man living that knows he is baptized."

I do not see how this strong statement can be justified. I know I have been baptized, because I was baptized "by a regularly ordained minister." Back in the sixties I was baptized by John B. Powell, along with scores of others. I do not remember who baptized him, nor who composed the presbytery that ordained him; but I know that he was ordained by authority of Lower Creek church, and that he had then been pastor of that church for nearly twenty years, and continued to be its pastor for fifteen years more. I know that Lower Creek church was then and is now a regular Baptist church, and such a church is the highest ecclesiastical authority among Baptists. If a man is ordained by authority of a regular Baptist church, he is "regularly ordained." If a man is baptized by authority of a regular Baptist church, that is valid baptism.

When we speak of "valid baptism," we look at it on its purely ceremonial side, as a prerequisite to church membership. No man can be a member of a Baptist church without baptism. The church decides whether or not the ceremony has been properly performed. The church is the final authority as to the validity of baptism, that is, whether the man has been baptized and may therefore be a member of the church. If the candidate for membership has already been baptized, the church votes to receive him into full fellowship, and thus endorses the act already performed as ceremonially valid. If he has not been baptized, the church votes that he shall be a member when he has submitted to this ceremony. He is presumed to be otherwise qualified for membership, and lacks only this ceremonial act. This is an official act, to be performed for a Baptist church, to give the candidate this remaining qualification for membership in this Baptist church. Will it do to say that it makes no difference who performs official acts for a Baptist church? Of course, we remember that baptism has another side besides this ceremonial one, possibly a more important side, which concerns the conscience of the candidate. It is "the answer of a good conscience." It is an act of obedience to the command of the Master. From this point of view, the act might be free from objection, and the man's conscience might be satisfied that he had obeyed the Master's command. But as an official ceremony is necessary to membership in a Baptist church, the act may be defective.

A desire to call attention to this distinction usually overlooked, is my excuse for writing on this much-discussed question. Many think of baptism only as it concerns the conscience of the candidate, and so see no place for the phrase "valid baptism." Others, perhaps, make so much of the ceremonial side as to fail to appreciate the position of their opponents. It is the old story of the two knights looking at opposite sides of the shield.

Every man's conscience ought to be so instructed that he will be satisfied with nothing short of what Christ has commanded. Every church ought to recognize only those official acts which have been performed by authority of that or some other church. And when an official act has been endorsed by a regular Baptist church, it would seem that it ought to be recognized by all Baptists and by all Baptist churches.

Voluntaryism in Higher Education.

A Paper read before the New York Convocation of Teachers in Albany, N. Y., by Martin B. Anderson, LL. D., President of the University of Rochester.*

The early Christians found education imbedded in heathenism. As the State religion was heathen, they were, of necessity, obliged to establish schools for their children, in order to prevent them from being positively instructed in the principles of a false religion. Hence Christian schools, supported by the voluntary contributions of the Christian population, grew up side by side with Christian churches and charitable institutions similarly maintained. When Christianity became the religion of the State, the State assumed the care of schools together with the care and support of churches. Education became a constituent part of the general church establishment. Though funds for the support of churches, hospitals, and schools were very largely contributed by private individuals, these institutions, and especially the schools, were always under the control of the Church established by law. At the Reformation, the school system became a part of the Church establishment, under the control of the authorities of the parish, and the intermediate schools and universities were, in various modes, brought under the control of the State and Church united.

When the North American colonies were settled, the State Church system was adopted as a matter of course. What are now common schools were then substantially parish schools, the minister of the establishment having a predominant influence in their administration. Academies and colleges were organized on a similar principle. They were put under the control of persons connected with the established Church, and became an essential part of its means of influence and control over the public mind. They were supported partly by taxation and partly by voluntary gifts from charitable persons.

When religious equality was introduced and the Church establishment set aside, the educational system was at first but little affected by the change. The academies and colleges, which had been founded by general taxation, were left in the hands of the denomination that had originally formed the established Church, while the State gradually withdrew its fostering care. As new colleges and academies were established from time to time, occasional appropriations for the support of the new institutions were made by the State; but no settled line of policy was marked out, and these appropriations were dependent upon the accidental composition of the legislatures. In the common schools, the teaching of church catechisms was gradually laid aside, and the reading of the Scriptures at the opening of the school, either with or without prayer, was all that survived of the distinctive denominational teaching that originally permeated the instruction.

With the overthrow of Church establishments in the States, after the Revolution, colleges and academies were mainly left to the voluntary support of philanthropic men; while, by common consent, the care and maintenance of the common school was assumed by most of the States as absolutely necessary for the maintenance of the civil order under a system of universal suffrage.

By degrees, objections were made to the religious instruction still retained in the common schools. It was claimed that they were supported by taxation, and that persons of every phase of belief, or disbelief, had equal rights in the control of their administration. The claim is clearly gaining acceptance, and now, for good or for evil—I do not say which—the common school supported by the State tends, like the State, to become secularized so far, at least, as is possible in a country whose institutions, laws, and literature are saturated with Christianity.

THE POSTULATES AND WHAT THEY IMPLY.

Two postulates are now gaining, or have gained, acceptance among the great majority of our people. One is that the common school, supported by taxation, is necessary to the well-being and permanence of the State. The other is that, taxpayers having common rights, these schools should be so administered as to do no injustice to the religious convictions of any citizen. The duty of the State to furnish an intellectual and moral education in the common school is accepted on the ground of self-preservation. As, by common consent, the giving of religious instruction stands outside of the functions of the State, it follows that this duty falls upon the parent, the church, and the Sunday school, under the natural working of the voluntary principle. It being conceded that it is the duty of the State to maintain the common school, the question now arises, What is the limit within which the State may assume to educate? We answer:

1. As the common school is supported by a common tax upon the body of the people, education at the expense of the State should be carried only so far as the great body of the taxpayers can make it available for their children.

2. On the principle of self-preservation also, the State cannot, and should not, provide education at the public expense beyond that which can be made available for the great body of our juvenile population.

3. This principle would justify special appropriations for the training of common school teachers, in academies and normal schools, if it can be shown that the law of supply and demand, acting through institutions supported on the voluntary principle, will not furnish teachers in sufficient number and with sufficient education to meet the necessities of the case.

4. Hence, professional education and high liberal training necessary for the professions, should not be undertaken by the State, because this education is for the benefit of but a very small and special class of the community, and can also be better provided for by the natural action of the law of supply and demand. * * * This principle also renders it illegitimate for the State to provide a general liberal education, at the public expense, for officers of the army and navy. The law of necessity, which justifies the support of schools for strictly professional training, such as those at West Point and Annapolis, does not justify the State in giving to their pupils such general culture as is merely preliminary to the study of the profession of arms. Competitive examinations among the graduates of our colleges and scientific schools, would furnish a superabundance of candidates for the army and navy, who would have sufficient discipline and acquirements to enter at once upon those studies that strictly belong to the military or naval profession. Two years' training of such men thus selected, would give us officers for the army and navy of broader general culture and higher professional attainment than can be secured under the present system.

5. The State—as an organism with powers limited mainly to the protection of life, property, and personal liberty—may not undertake to teach what belongs to the domain of conscience. In so doing, it transcends its legimate sphere. High education cannot be adequately conducted without the discussion, in the way of acceptance or denial, of God, the soul, the objective sanctions of morality, and all the forces which bind a man to God. As this high education, in order to be scientific and thorough, is conversant with the sphere of topics which involve religious and moral principles, it should be referred, like religious beliefs and modes of worship, to the action of the voluntary principle. This would exclude from the charge of the State, except for giving the power to hold corporate property and confer degrees, all collegiate and professional education.

HIGH EDUCATION—HOW IT SHALL BE PROVIDED.

Upon whom, then, does the duty of providing for high education rest? Usage and common sense have, in our own country, answered the question: Upon individual and corporate benevolence, acting under the general laws of the State which define the limits and powers of religious and benevolent organizations generally.

In accordance with the principles thus laid down, it will be seen that the voluntary principle, as applied to the support of religion, includes the exposition and application of the moral and religious bearing of all the great modes in which theists claim that God has revealed himself to man. We believe that God has revealed himself:

1. In the constitution and course of the material universe.

2. In the existence and organization of the human mind and the human conscience.

3. In those special social laws, common to man, which underlie the State, and determine and limit the action of men in providing for the protection of life, liberty, and property in human societies.

4. In those supplemental moral and religious revelations made to man, as a responsible being, to prepare him for a pure and holy life here and hereafter.

Now, no one of these modes in which we assume God to have revealed himself to man can be scientifically discussed without touching vitally the question of the being and nature of God—the existence and laws of the soul—the origin of moral distinctions—the right of the State to punish—the grounds of the rightful authority over men of civil, criminal, constitutional, and international law. This holds true regarding educators who, like Vogt and Buchner, dogmatically deny the existence of God, or who, like Spencer and Comte, deny the possibility, even if a personal God exists, of his revealing himself to man. The ideas of God, the soul and the sanctions of moral law, are too deeply rooted in all forms of human thought to be ignored. The instant we pass from the elements of knowledge, mechanically accepted on authority, to the causes, reasons, and underlying laws of things—from the apprehension of mere isolated facts to the grand domain of science, we must accept God, the soul, and the moral constitution and government of man and the universe or deny them.

These modes of revelation—as we have designated the phenomena of the material and moral universe—are to be connected in the relation of means and ends, cause and effects, phenomena and laws, that they are

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

THINK of this, brethren, one half of the Conventional Year is gone and we have not yet raised but about a third of what is needed for our Foreign Mission Work. The fact that times are hard argues that more of us ought to help. Have you done your duty?

IF THERE has been doubt in any quarter that the voting public of North Carolina recognize the wrong, inexpediency and unwisdom of devoting thousands of dollars annually to the higher education of a favored and thankless few, we think that doubt is now dispelled.

THIS is a good season to ground new church members. A series of doctrinal sermons may save a series of disciplinary actions. A doctrinal sermon is never out of time. In fact we advise every pastor to get a thorough acquaintance with Baptist doctrines and make it tell in every sermon.

CHRIST did not depart from his disciples without warning them. He knew false Christs and false prophets were to come, and he knew they would lead off some from his followers. We are not sure he did not have in mind certain false teachers who have lately come into our State when he told his disciples that no man knows when the world will end, and when he warned them against those who claim to be sinless, discrediting the Bible. In the face of the Scriptures men are going about naming the year of the Judgment, others are professing sinlessness, and others professing to speak with authority above the New Testament. Beware of false teachers. By their fruits you shall know them.

PIOUS frauds are parading their sanctimonious airs in various parts of the State just at this time. They are sowing broadcast literature of the most perverse kind, which uses several truths in order to sneak in a lie. Let the people read their Bibles. The fact that a tract is according to Scripture in the beginning should not be sufficient to recommend it when "seventh day" worship, annihilation and "new dispensations" are introduced.

A man with a too-good-to live air, who feigns humbleness and prates about the truth, can easily be a wolf that cannot get a living except in disguise. Our State has suffered enough from impostors; and it is time all, except a certain ignorant few who are never satisfied except with changes, had learned that the pastors who have grown up among them, or who are known by their fruits, are the safe pastors.

IT IS not surprising that an imposter changes the Scripture to fit circumstances. So good and wise a man as Dr. Jeter was imposed on once by a travelling "evangelist," who on being asked to furnish credentials, aptly turned him aside by quoting the Scripture, "the King's business requires haste," adding that it would take several days to get credentials, and that his pious zeal would not permit him to wait so long while there were sinners liable to die at any moment.

There are men preaching in this State that the gospel once delivered is not sufficient, and that God speaks new notions to his children through modern-day prophets. And then they lengthen their faces a bit, try to look heavenly and piously proclaim themselves prophets, insulting God by counting on signs and saying when the end of the world will occur.

ACTIONS—if they take the form of contributions for State Missions—will speak louder and to more purpose than anything we know of, between now and December 1.

It will be a great pity to end a year, in which an old debt has been so signally overcome, with any debt at all. Some of the brethren advised retrenchment last Convention, but we well remember, one brother rose vigorously to the occasion, and impressed his hearers that this is no time for retrenchmeat in the work of soul-saving. Any one acquainted with the conditions is prepared to maintain this view. So long as there are people in the State without the gospel or under perverse influences, so long as there are destitute sections, so long as there are human beings in the State who need the gospel, but have it not, nor the means of getting it, Baptists cannot afford to retrench. Let us end the year without debt. $4,638 34, that is all; can't you help a little?

THAT OTHER QUESTION.

It will be remembered that Rev. Jno. E. White sent us two questions several weeks ago; that we answered one of them in full, and stated that we could easily answer the other, which is as follows:—

"She further complains that the Board would not pay her the salary due her for the three months prior to the time the Board severed relations between them—though she was at work for the Board during the time. Is this true? If so, on what grounds did the Board do this?"

It is disagreeable to all concerned to open a matter of this kind. One naturally dislikes to assume an attitude of opposition to so good and so esteemed a sister as Sister Knight. And it is our aim to clear away some misunderstandings without assuming such an attitude. A sister lately became angry with the RECORDER "because it wouldn't print Sister Knight's letters." The sister should have known better. We have published writings from Sister Knight since we declined to publish the Chowan letter. We have stated that we declined to publish that letter because publication of it would necessarily reopen a question which it would do no good to reopen. Any one who reads the letter will acknowledge that it not only asks for support, but sets forth arguments in behalf of particular views—arguments that have been answered, and that would have to be answered again. Yet there was a sister in North Carolina who, "having read the RECORDER as closely as any one," was firmly of the opinion that we had refused to publish whatever Sister Knight might send. There was a reason. The sister had heard reports and probably read literature that led her into her opinion. We wish to say once more that letters are welcomed from any of our missionaries. We will publish one from Brother Crocker next week, and one from Sister Knight as soon as it comes. We do not think any one questions our motives in trying to stop discussion that was doing harm to both sides; and it ought to be borne in mind that these columns were not closed to the discussion until the missionaries had opportunity to begin a practical test of their work.

We do not purpose opening the discussion now. But we shall attempt as briefly as possible to remove some reflections that have in various ways been cast upon the Board, and we shall avoid reflecting upon any one else. We have no desire to seem other than a friend of Sister Knight, for we are no less her friend than we were when first she set out for the Master. We print the following facts in order that neither the Board nor the RECORDER may be misunderstood.

Sister Knight wrote to the Richmond Board in January, 1894, giving notice that she expected to join the Gospel Mission and had appealed to the churches of the Chowan Association for support. However, she wished to remain with the Board until she could hear from the churches.

January 31st, after Sister Knight had written, a circular was sent out from the "Gospel Mission workers now in China," and Sister Knight's name was on the list. The Gospel Mission brethren wrote letters saying she was with them. And there was nothing for the Board to do except regretfully give her up. Signing her name with the Gospel Mission, the Board had to consider her relations with itself at an end. Several months later the missionaries of the Board in China wrote to the Board, saying they could not continue to pay her since she had ceased to co-operate with them. The Board was surprised to learn that salary was still claimed, as several months had elapsed since her name was attached to the Gospel Mission circular. The Board argued that one who worked with one organization ought not draw salary from another. But Sister Knight claimed salary on the ground that the Chowan Association, not the Board, had given it for her. The Board, on the other hand, held that she had been appointed by the Board and that the Association contributed the money for their missionary working under the auspices of the Board. The action of the Association sustains this position. We feel safe in saying that the contributions of the Chowan Association for foreign missions have averaged not more than $500 a year since Sister Knight left for China; whereas the Board has expended at least $600 on an average each year for her (including all expenses). And thus if she claims that she is entitled to special contributions, she seems to have gotten much more than all of these. And, moreover, she was paid more than one month's salary ("several months," we are informed), after she had virtually left the Board and signed her name as one of the Gospel Mission workers.

But the Board was willing to let the matter pass, as it esteemed Sister Knight highly as an earnest, consecrated worker in Christ's service, and felt that, if there were mistake on her part, it was of the head rather than the heart. It is strange indeed that any one should look upon the Board's action under the circumstances as other than Christianly generous.

We would not place Sister Knight in a false light for the world. We would not have written thus publicly had it not seemed absolutely necessary in view of the misunderstandings that are extant.

In the last six months the RECORDER has not only published writings of Sister Knight, but also a communication stating through whom money may be sent for her support. We would not stand in the way of her support for the world. We feel that she and her co-workers will return to the usual plan in good season.

IF YOU do not send your name to Brethren Pritchard and Pruitt, Charlotte, N. C., before December 2nd, you cannot expect to be accommodated at the Convention.

THE secretaries of the Convention have secured the usual Convention rates from the Associated Railways of Virginia and the Carolinas—which include the Atlantic Coast Line, Piedmont Air Line (Southern Railway) and Seaboard Air Line, from Atlantic and North Carolina railroad and the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley.

The General Passenger Agent of the Norfolk and Southern writes that returning delegates will be required to pay only one half the usual fare from Norfolk upon presentation of certificate signed by Convention Secretary.

Inquire at your depot for reduced rates to the Convention, get you a ticket, and be there.

HE WHO has to "stop and think" to find out why he should give thanks to God, has a poor conception of himself, his Saviour and his Creator. He who gives thanks only one day in three hundred and sixty five is either ungrateful or unappreciative of God's manifold mercies. He who gives thanks by taking rest on a working day (God knows better than presidents, and God told man to work six days) and eating a great and vindictive dinner, while there are physically and spiritually hungry ones all about, such a one doesn't know how to give thanks!

The best evidence of gratitude to God is sacrifice in his name for his hungry or afflicted children:

* * * "It is blessed to have no pain to bear!"
God keepeth some from sorrow; their's is a brother's share."

Remember the orphans. It is not often appeals are made for them; they seem to get along somehow; and they have some good friends that the Lord appeals to when supplies get low. The one hundred and twenty-five charges in Bro. Mills' hands are charges upon the hands of every Baptist in the State; and the suffering ones who cannot get in his hands, they are witnesses against every non-giving Baptist in the State.

Let the churches give opportunity for thanks-offerings for the orphans; and may God make it the joy of the thousand hearts to contribute to the support, rearing and happiness of the fatherless children of his servants gone before.

REV. G. W. GREENE is very effective in his article on our first page, even if some little time has elapsed since the Southern Baptist Convention, at which, it may be well to recall, a bitter struggle ensued between a faction which desired to defeat Gov. Northen for vice-president of the Convention because he had appointed a Roman Catholic to office, and another which wished to elect him to show that they entertained "liberal" views. Between the two Bro. Northen was elected, many voting for him because he was a good presiding officer, a good and able man, and worthy. Bro. Greene is a familiar writer to many of our readers, and we do hope he will write oftener.——"Voluntaryism in Higher Education," though long, will profit the studious reader. The arrangement is clear, the language chaste, and the logic pure. Its author, who is dead, was considered in point of ability and influence more nearly the successor of Dr. Francis Wayland than any other man. Dr. Taylor's articles were new to most of our readers, yet in this article positions precisely identical with several that he assumed are upheld. And the strange part of it is, this article was printed years ago! If Dr. Taylor had known of Dr. Anderson's article we are sure he would have quoted from it in his admirable discussion.——Bro. Tatum writes a China letter of much interest, sustaining a recent editorial to a degree that is very gratifying to us. It will be followed by another by Bro. Crocker of the Gospel Mission on the "Corean War."

ARE you going to the Convention? Is your pastor? Help swell the throng.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

STANLEY ASSOCIATION.

We were glad of an opportunity of meeting, for the first time, the brethren of this Association. Bro. E. F. Eddins, an old student of Wake Forest, who has spent several years teaching in this county, was moderator of the Association. We had known Bro. Eddins in his school days, and he made just the success in his work, and enjoys the measure of confidence of his people, that we would expect a young man to have who would deny himself much that his fellow-students enjoyed for the sake of remaining at college and getting an education, and at the same time doing what he could to maintain and comfort a widowed mother.

This is a fine section, the soil is good and produces fine crops of all sorts—and in addition to this the earth is full of the richest gold and copper ores. Gold Hill, five miles from where the Association met, has been more extensively worked than any gold mine in the State. The blight and curse, however, is the great number of whiskey stills which you can see in almost any direction you go. The good people in this section are anxiously looking forward to the time when these shall be removed never to appear again. This will come as the churches and school houses multiply, as they now promise to do.

We learned from a number of the brethren of the excellent work done by Bro. J. W. Suttle, who went to Albemarle less than ten months ago. Then the church at Albemarle had only twenty-seven members; now there are forty-four. The church debt will be paid off by January 1st, and besides this, Bro. Suttle is occupying several mission stations at which churches are to be erected in the near future. The decided manner in which all the churches advanced their pledges for next year was really encouraging to the few brethren who have worked so earnestly for this result.

The brethren were delighted to have Bro. Durham talk to them on the subject of missions and education, and then preach for them on Sunday. I have never heard him speak and preach with greater power. The crowd was large, and the close and earnest attention of the people was worthy of the best efforts of any speaker.

Bro. Carter, probably one of the oldest preachers in the State, is yet erect and vigorous for a man of his age, preaching on Sundays and ploughing during the week.

I have other notes I would gladly make of these brethren and their work, but the Associations are coming thick and fast, so we take the shortest cut in order to be at the UNION TUESDAY MORNING.

We need not, however, to have been in such a great hurry, as very few brethren had gotten in when we reached the church. This is the first Association I ever attended where there was barely a quorum of the delegates present on the evening of the first day. This meeting was on the extreme edge of the territory, and hard to reach from many points in the Association. Bro. Bivins, who for several years has been the moderator, asked to be released from this position, and the brethren with reluctance did so, and elected Bro. H. E. Copple in his place.

Bro. Redfearn made a pass to break by, but the brethren closed him in, and he is still the faithful and competent clerk of the Union Association.

The "furiners" and several others spent a night with Bro. J. C. Sikes, father of Prof. Sikes now at Johns Hopkins. Bro. Sikes has a splendid country home, a most excellent wife, an abundance of corn, wheat, hogs and potatoes, and fields broad enough to give all the boys at home plenty of physical culture.

Bro. Mills made the best speech for the Orphanage we have ever heard him make, interspersing with several jokes, which were enjoyed by us all. He received a good collection, and is now on his way to the Bladen County Association, which he will reach just before day in the morning.

The subject of higher education has been more thoroughly discussed here than in any other section of the entire State. Profs. Sikes and Manke had thoroughly worked up this county, and so far as we could learn there was no division among the people on this subject. Five young men have come from the church at which the Association was held to Wake Forest College, and we are glad to know that there are still others who will follow in their footsteps. So often we fail to estimate the extent of influence that the going of one young man to college has on his neighborhood and county.

The next meeting of this body will be held at Meadow Branch Church, probably the strongest organization in the Association. Bro. J. B. Richardson is pastor of this church, and has been for several years. Few men are better prepared to build up and develop the best interests of a church than Bro. Richardson. He is one of the few men possessing his power of intellect and the mental training he has enjoyed, find his choice work among the plain people in country churches.

After discussing Home and State Missions Dr. Durham has to leave, but not without the assurance of a growing interest of the churches for these objects.

Just an hour before day the porter's hand is on my shoulder, asking me to open my eyes and see Bladenboro, for here is where we get off to go to the Bladen County Association.

Bro. Callihan met us; had a good fire and plenty of fine lightwood left. In due time we had a nice breakfast. I thought I never heard such a crowing of chickens as was carried on from the time we stopped till breakfast, but I will prove by Bro. Mills and Dr. Durham that there were some which were silent while others proclaimed the coming day.

The Bladen County Association has lately been formed, and somehow I feared that there would be little interest in the meeting, but in this I was mistaken. The personnel of the body is quite as good as I have seen in any part of the State. There are many large and once valuable farms where numbers of slaves made quantities of corn, cotton and rice.

The people still show their "ante bellum" culture and high social position. Brother Brunt is moderator of the Association. He is an alumnus of Wake Forest and a preacher of ability. Several new churches came into the new organization, and the brethren are stirring for more systematic efforts in all lines of work.

Several new academies have been recently built in this county.

I have never seen so many boys and girls in attendance at any Association. The discussions were fine on all the subjects, and at the earnest solicitation of the brethren, Dr. Durham remained over and preached to a large congregation on Sunday. I found some of the oldest and best friends of the BIBLICAL RECORDER who took great interest in my work and helped me to secure a nice list of new subscribers.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. R. W. Lide has been called to the Darlington, S. C., pastorate.

....Rev. B. W. Spilman preached to the Kinston brethren and sisters last week.

....Pastors in need of assistance should consider our four months fifty cents offer.

....Rev. A. D. Hunter is helping Rev. R. D. Carroll at Antioch church, Pitt county, this week.

....Prof. R. L. Moore has our thanks for a copy of the minutes of the Catawba River Association.

....Rev. A. J. Taylor will please accept thanks for several new subscribers on our extra offer.

....Rev. Hartwell Mosely has been appointed by our Southern Board to labor in New Mexico.

....Revs. J. R. Jones and D. J. Harris are holding meetings at Yanceyville, says the Caswell News.

....Have you made an effort on our special offer? If not, you yet have a chance to grasp a good thing.

....We regret to announce that the beloved wife of our venerable brother, Rev. Jesse Howell, is dead.

....Rev. H. T. Williams is engaged in a meeting with his Roxboro charges, and is being blessed in his labors.

....Our Virginia brethren had their annual meeting at Alexandria, Va., last week. The reports were hopeful.

....Rev. H. M. Croom has removed from Globe to Hartland, and his correspondents will please note the change.

....We regret to hear that Rev. Geo. J. Dowell has offered his resignation as pastor of our Durham Second church.

....Rev. J. M. Mercer has resigned care of the Pendleton St. church, Greenville, S. C., to accept work in Richmond.

....Rev. G. H. Church, of Statesville, and Pastor N. S. Jones are holding a meeting of much promise at Salisbury.

....Good reports come from the meeting at Wake Forest. Rev. T. J. Taylor, of Warrenton, is aiding pastor Gwaltney.

....Rev. C. A. Jenkins, whose modesty has long served to conceal his brilliancy, is holding a meeting with his Goldsboro flock.

....Rev. J. L. White has received a call to the pastorate of the 1st Baptist church, Macon, Ga. He will probably remain at Asheville.

....Revs. J. A. Campbell and J. F. Devenny were kind enough to take subscriptions for the RECORDER at the Little River Association.

....Rev. Henry Sheets has recently baptized nineteen persons since a meeting at Kernersville, in which Rev. J. T. Jenkins assisted him.

....Talk up your religion as you talk up your business, and God will take care of the results. "My father's business" is every Christian's concern.

....Bro. B. F. Hester, of the Flat River Association, Bro. Troy Bancom, of Apex, and Rev. C. W. Blanchard were pleasant visitors to this office last week.

....Dr. McCosh, the great ex-President of Princeton College, died of old age last week. To him is due no small part of the growth and spirit of Princeton.

....Now is a good time to be getting up a club to gladden our heart at the Convention. Ask your people to renew now. And a new subscriber is never untimely.

....Rev. J. M. Hilliard has resigned his work at Ramseur. We understand that there is another pastorless charge near by, and we hope a man may be located on this field.

....Rev. Dr. Thomas Hume is greatly in demand as a lecturer. Our South Carolina contemporary speaks in highest terms of his recent address at the Cooper-Limestone Institute.

....We were glad to have Prof. Collier Cobb, of the State University, in to see us last week. The Professor expects the University enrollment to aggregate 500 or more this session.

....Rev. G. L. Morrell, of Franklinville, has resigned care of Moore's Chapel, and expects to resign his work at other points. We do not know what God has in store for Bro. Morrell, but we do know he will be used well for the Lord wherever he may be called.

....Rev. A. Cree preached an appropriate sermon at Roxobel the 11th. The text was "Nothing but Leaves." We shall give it in full as soon as we can spare the space.

....We will publish decisions of the Supreme Courts of Ohio, California and Wisconsin relating to religious liberty and religious toleration, as soon as the space can be spared.

....Get ready for the Convention. There is enough in the Convention itself to attract, but this apart, Charlotte is the coming city of North Carolina, and it will help us to put in a great meeting there.

... Bro. A. D. Hunter buried two of his congregation last week, one, Bro. F. F. Ellis, an aged and worthy member of the West Raleigh church, the other, Bro. Brinkley, of Mt. Vernon church.

....The Western Recorder has completed its sixty-ninth volume. May it long maintain the doctrine with faith, hope and love. It is a faithful watchman, and has never been more efficient than it is now.

....These latter days have been called the age of ten thousand things; but the Baptist Record gets off a new one, beginning an editorial with "Surely this is the age of obscenity"! Poor old nineteenth century.

....Pastor E. M. Poteat, of Calvary Baptist church, New Haven, Conn., has already baptized more than 60 persons, part of the fruits of the meeting held there not long ago by Dr. H. M. Wharton.—Baltimore Baptist.

....It was Rev. O. C. Horton, of Selma, who was called to East Durham, instead of Rev. Walter Gilmore. The latter is well qualified for pastoral work, and we do hope God will see fit to give him to North Carolina.

....The RECORDER's special offer will not be urged much longer. One brother has sent us twenty new subscribers since it was announced. Many have sent more than ten. We hope to hear from many more this month.

....This is the season when the newspapers expect to make collections enough to wipe away old scores and have a little over to begin the long up hill year with. See if you can't send us your renewal or a part of it this week.

....Here's how it reads in the Arkansas Baptist: "Rev. J. W. Couch, of Kentucky, can be induced to come to Arkansas." It is time, high time, that some people were reminded that God still calls. Talk about "induced"!

....It seems necessary to say that Rev. R. T. Bryan has never advised the RECORDER to do anything with any letter from any missionary; and that never in his life has Bro. Bryan spent "a good part of his time" in Raleigh.

....Dr. J. A. Mundy, of Wilson, says the Mirror, is engaged with Rev. T. N. Ivey in a meeting at the Methodist church at Wilson. Progress on the new church is very gratifying, and the pastor has become warmly loved by his flock.

....Just as we have feared all the while, there is an effort making to run the Baptist Young People of North Carolina into the ground of B. Y. P. U. ism. The first faint excrescences cropped out last week. It is well that the Convention is near at hand.

....Rev. E. D. Wells, of Packsville, South Carolina, who is quite well known in our State, has baptized one hundred and five persons, eighty-five of them into his own churches, in the last few months; and he says he never felt better, despite his incessant work.

....Rev. Walter Gilmore occupied Rev. C. J. F. Anderson's Carthage pulpit the 1st Sunday and preached a very acceptable sermon. Bro. Anderson is pushing right forward with his work; his people at Carthage are making some improvements on their church house.

....Rev. C. A. G. Thomas preached a sermon on "Separation of Church and State" from his Greensboro pulpit the other day. It will be published in these columns and afterwards put in tract form. There is no doubt but that it is sadly needed, by some Baptists as well as others.

....It is stated in exchanges that Capt. J. D. Moore and Rev. M. P. Matheny went to Hickory last Thursday to meet other committeemen, representing Baptist churches, to consider the advisability of purchasing Rutherford College, which is now in the hands of Mr. Jos. Elliott.

....Brethren, it's getting cold. Do two things: stop drinking whiskey. Send something to the orphans.—N. C. Baptist. We would like to know if our contemporary really thinks that any of "the brethren" are drinking whiskey. If it does, there is but one course: let them not be brethren.

....They set the day for Tuesday, the 27th inst.; the invitation, for which we are grateful, informs us that Bro. A. T. Robertson and Sister Ella T. Broadus, daughter of Bro. and Sister Jno. A. Broadus, will be married at noon the 27th inst. in Bro. Eaton's church, Louisville. We rejoice with them.

....We will esteem it a great favor if our subscribers whose subscriptions have expired will renew immediately. It is very expensive to send out formal notices, and prompt renewal, in whole or in part, right now, will save us just that much. Do not put it off. SEE THE LABEL ON THE PAPER, then act forthwith.

....Let the brethren who have been sending us lengthy obituaries without payment for extra words, possess their souls in patience. We will get through with them all after awhile. By the way, some of the brethren have a habit of advising us to "send bill to" so and so, as if they didn't know the amount. Anyone who can count sixty doesn't need a bill.

....The Spring term announcement of Littleton High School and Business Institute appears in this paper. We heartily commend this well known institution to our readers. It has a record for efficiency and reliability that any one might be proud of.

... Dr. W. A. Nelson, well known in North Carolina, having been a pastor at Asheville and Raleigh, will aid Prest. Gambrell, of Mercer University, Ga., in his new Preachers' School. We rejoice at this evidence of the return of Bro. Nelson's vigor.

....The Methodists have been making quite a deal over their Epworth League for young people, but they are now facing a problem. There is danger of the League being used to divert the young people's money into "divers and sundry projects." But the Methodists always have their organizations well in hand because of the thorough organization of the Conferences.

....The Examiner announces that Mr. H. C. Vedder, who has been editor in charge of that journal, will retire January 1st, and that Rev. Dr. H. L. Wayland will succeed him. Mr. Edward Bright, son of the late editor of the Examiner, is now engaged upon its literary and secular columns. Mr. Thos. O. Conant will become managing editor.

....Bro. John F. McMillan, of Savage, who has been preaching to churches in Florence and Southeast Associations for several years, has accepted the call of the Graniteville church and will begin work there at an early day. Bro. McMillan has done a fine work in his present field and he goes to another important field. We hope that his work at Graniteville will be richly blessed. He is one of our best men.—S. C. Courier.

....Prest. Taylor is sending out an ornate and interesting "announcement of the 120th term of Wake Forest College," which will begin January 15th next. It will quicken the interest of anyone who will read it; and it is so short and terse and cleanly printed that the lines invite one to follow them. If you know a youth who ought to think about getting to College, send his name to Prest. Taylor; he can help him think about it, anyway.

....The Rev. A. C. Dixon, pastor of Hanson Place Baptist Church, Brooklyn, preached yesterday morning his fourth anniversary sermon. There was a great crowd in attendance at the church. In the course of his remarks he said that the membership had increased from 662 to 1,037, an increase of 592 in the four years. The Sunday school had grown from 398 to 718, and the contributions for all purposes had increased from $13,140 to $20,407.—N. Y. Recorder.

....The Congressman-elect from this district has said that he would rather have won over any man than Charley Cooke. Bro. Cooke is loved even by his opponents. When he was nominated and almost every one thought he would win, it was remarked more than once that it was a pity to send so good and true a man out of the State. He is one man whose usefulness does not depend on political preferment, one who knows how to do well in any relation.

....Supt. Mills and his class of orphans will appear at the following places, dates named: Belmont, Monday, Nov. 26, 2 p. m.; McAdensville, Monday, Nov. 26, 8 p. m.; Lowell, Tuesday, Nov. 27, 11 a. m.; Gastonia, Tuesday, Nov. 27, 8 p. m.; Long Creek, Wednesday, Nov. 28, 11 a. m.; Dallas, Wednesday, Nov. 28, 8 p. m.; Salem, Thursday, Nov. 29, 11 a. m.; Lincolnton, Thursday, Nov. 29, 8 p. m.; Stanley, Friday, Nov. 30, 11 a. m.; Mt. Holly, Friday, Nov. 30, 8 p. m.

....We strive to avoid nothing so much as mistakes. Yet they have a way of reminding us of our fallibility every little while. That paragraph about the new Judiciary was sadly out of plumb. We do not know Mr. Furches' church relations; Mr. W. S. O'B. Robinson, of Wayne, is a son of old Ireland, as his name betrays, and of course a devout Roman Catholic, and Judge Eure and Judge Jno. Kerr, both good Baptists, have graced our Superior Court bench since 1870. We beg the gentlemens' pardons.

...."All's well that ends well," the saying holds; and hoary truth though it be, it received new meaning and new strength, last week, when, sequel to romantic and not altogether joyous circumstances, Mr. E. Y. Webb, son of Rev. G. M. Webb, a young lawyer whose ability has already been recognized by his native town of Shelby, and Miss Willie Frank Simmons, a talented, cultured daughter of the lamented Prof. Wm. Gaston Simmons, were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's mother at Wake Forest by Rev. C. E. Taylor. We must be content to chronicle the event.

....There is more real thought, more instructive reading and more Baptist religion in the Young People's Leader, published by the Southern Baptist S. S. Board, Nashville, Tenn., than there is in any strictly young people's religious journal that we have seen. The profits of the Sunday School Board are devoted to missions, and more than fifteen thousand dollars has thus been used for the Lord and returned to the Lord. The Board's publications are worth their prices, but if anything is left over after expenses are paid, it is turned back into Southern Baptist channels.

....The RECORDER said: "Churches ought not to expect concessions or favors from a State—at least Baptist churches ought not." Whereupon Charity and Children declares it is unable "to understand the recent rage for levying taxes on churches, schools and orphan houses." Entire separation of Church and State is a good Baptist principle and Charity and Children does the Orphanage great credit with this kind of talk. Our contemporary pretends to think that levying taxes is evidence of hostility, and asks: "Why should a State be hostile to a church?" Better ask "why is this State so friendly to a church?"

....There will be a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Wake Forest College at the State Convention. Among other matters, the following will be considered: Ways and means of increasing the endowment and equipment, and meeting the current expenses of the College; definite instruction to the Bursar in regard to printing his report (all or part), and in regard to purchase of books for the Library. Dr. Taylor is anxious to raise $20,000 for the endowment of the Wm. Royall Chair of English, toward which, when $20,000 has been raised, the American Baptist Education Society will give $5,000.

....Rev. M. A. Adams, the able Reidsville pastor, has been aiding pastor Simms at the Raleigh Tabernacle in a series of successful meetings the last several days. Up to Sunday, after five day's work, there had been seven professions, and a great many backsliders have turned again to the Lord's active service. ——At the First Baptist church Rev. O. L. Stringfield delivered an earnest address on Female Education to an attentive audience. ——At their promising new mission at Caraleigh Mills, near Raleigh, the Baptists organized a Sunday-school last Sunday. Those in charge of the work believe they have a great field of labor. The building and furniture cost $500. And so we go forward.

....Judge Battle, holding court in the 9th Judicial district, gave an opinion upon a question that is referred to as "one of the most important that has come up in the North Carolina courts for several years." The Board of Provincial Elders and Congregation of United Brethren of Salem owned a good deal of property, that, though owned by a religious organization, was not used for usual church purposes; and Judge Battle decreed that it is not exempted from taxation by the act exempting property held for educational, charitable or religious purposes, and is therefore taxable. The Judge very pertinently says, "Property used in farming or in manufacturing or in the trades, cannot be said to be used exclusively for religious, charitable or educational purposes, even though the resulting profits may be exclusively devoted to such purposes." An appeal to the Supreme Court has been taken.

Great Meetings at Fayetteville.

Dear Recorder:—Our hearts are filled with rejoicing here in the Lord's work. Some weeks ago the writer conducted a meeting of a little over a week at a mission of the church. The Lord was present in great power, and fifteen souls were happily converted. Twelve were added to the Fayetteville church as a partial result of the meeting.

Two weeks ago Rev. P. G. Elsom of Fincastle Va. came to aid the pastor, and was with us eleven days. He preached the Word with great faithfulness and power, and the gospel as preached by him moved the whole community. The Holy Spirit was with us in convicting and converting power, and eighty eight souls made a profession of faith in Christ Twenty-three have already united with our church and a number of others expect to do so. Every church in town will receive members as a result of the meeting. The best thing of all is that the church has been thoroughly revived throughout her entire membership, and is in condition to press the work so graciously begun. Christians are full of joy and enthusiasm in the Master's work. Brethren and sisters of all the churches worked with great heartiness and unanimity in the meetings.

Enormous crowds attended every night service—even on the night of the election the church was crowded to overflowing.

The men's meeting at the Opera House Sunday afternoon was greatly blessed. The building was crowded, and very deep and salutary impressions were made. It was the best men's meeting the writer ever attended.

Brother Elsom is a man of thorough consecration, a preacher of great personal magnetism and intense earnestness. His preaching is full of the gospel and hence richly blessed to the salvation of souls.

Brethren, rejoice with us, for the Lord hath done great things for us whereof we are glad. J. HARTWELL EDWARDS.

Nov. 12.h, 1894.

To the Pastors and Churches of the Sandy Creek Association.

Dear Brethren:—If you will turn to the minutes of our Association for the year 1891, page 10, under "Report On Union Meetings," you will find that the Association agreed to return to Associational Missions. And since Rev. W. T. Jones left the Railroad Field we have not received anything from the State Board.

Our minutes for the three years, since 1891, show $181.85 for Associational Missions, and for State Missions $247.53.

Brethren, is it fair to appoint an Executive Board and expect them to carry on the Associational Mission work, and not give them the necessary funds for the work? Since last January the Board has received and turned over to the missionaries $97.85. Now we need $97.85 between this and the fifth Sunday in December, 1894, to pay off all our missionaries.

There ought to be one hundred men of the 8,500 members of the churches of our Association that would give one dollar each for this cause; and then begin 1895 out of debt. I will be one of the one hundred.

The Secretary of the Board has been asked to apportion the amount needed among the churches. Please raise the amounts asked for, in every church.

G. L. MERRELL, Ch. Ex. Bd.

Franklinville, N. C., Nov. 18, 1894.

P. S.—The next Union Meeting of the Sandy Creek Association convenes with Bethany church, Gulf N. C., on Friday, before the fifth Sunday in December; I every member of the Board be present. It is probable that we will have to elect a new chairman. And we must plan for next year.

Sincerely, G. L. M.

'Heathen' China More Interesting than "Warring" China.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I am very glad to see your editorial of August 22d, "Missionaries not in Danger." You speak of warring, plague stricken, heathen China. To be sure it is a very destructive war that is being waged between China and Japan concerning Corea. Modern implements of warfare are being used on both sides. September 17th may be remembered as the date of most decisive battles by land and by sea. On that date the Japanese occupied Ping Yang, the stronghold of the Chinese in northern Corea.

On the same date the fleets of the two nations were engaged off the mouth of the Yaloo river, northwestern Corea. Of the twenty thousand Chinese at Ping Yang about one-third were killed, wounded, or taken prisoners. Japanese loss unknown as yet. At Yaloo river eleven Japanese gun boats were said to have approached the Chinese fleet, which consisted of twelve gun boats and six torpedo boats. Five Chinese vessels are said to have been sunk, burnt or beached, while the Japanese claim to have lost none.

Now the Japanese are pressing towards Moukden, the capital of a northern Provence, and Peking, the capital of China. Whatever the Japanese may or may not do to free and reform Corea, they seem bent on venting an old grudge against and humbling China. A vast indemnity will likely be demanded by Japan that her financial loss may be as little as possible.

Warring China is a subject of momentous interest, but it is heathen China that concerns us most. Are missionaries safe in China? I think you put it well when you said: "Mobs occasionally attack foreigners, but the officers of the law do all they can to prevent them." In some cases officers have winked at the conduct of those who threatened riot, but such winking is becoming rare and infrequent. If China is defeated, as seems likely now, there will be the danger of disbanded, demoralized, returning troops. There will be the need of unusual care and prudence in the North and interior. Some inland stations may be withdrawn from for a season; but withdraw from China? I should say, no, never.

One missionary, Rev. James Wylie, of the Scotch Presbyterian mission in north China, was assaulted by a mob of soldiers who were on their way to the war, and the Chinese have had an object lesson of what such conduct would cost a man. Rev. Mr. Wylie died from the treatment received from the hands of the mob. The leader of the mob has been arrested by the Chinese officers and executed. Others implicated, were sentenced to banishment, imprisonment and removal from office or position, according as their guilt seemed to demand. Justice has not been delayed as has often been the case after mob violence. I think you are justified in your statement concerning China and Japan, when you say: "Either government will take pains to keep on friendly terms with us."

Yet the fact remains, war or no war, that those who come to China as missionaries, especially those who come to the interior of China, come at the risk of their lives. If we are not willing to count that in, let's not come.

I have been asked whether or not I would advise Bro. Bryan and party to wait. I answered no. I afterwards consulted with our Consul General, Mr. T. R. Jernigan, who comes from North Carolina, and takes kindly interest in missionaries and their work. He said missionaries were as safe here (in Shanghai) as they were in the United States. No one claims absolute legal safety in the interior. Missionaries stayed here thirty years ago, when China was in the midst of internal war, the Taiping Rebellion. Run away now? Stay away now? after we have had a quarter of a century to establish ourselves and recruit. I think not. We come to sow and to reap. We can't stop to observe war clouds even. By the time you get this, I hope Bro. Bryan and party will be on the Pacific with their faces towards China. We have to do with heathen China. If they will yield to our Master they may lay down the swords of steel. We do desire to raise them above the filth that makes plagues and the moral degradation that breeds war. How true your words seem when you say: "Surely it is time we were sending more salvation guides to her despairing millions."

Yes, add all the God called laborers you can find to the expected company, and continue to pray for them and us and China.

Yours fraternally,

E. F. TATUM.

Co-education With A Vengeance.

A few weeks ago at the Fresh rush in a co educational college in Ohio, the young women students engaged in the melee on either side. I was delighted to read that "many of the combatants came out with scratched face and torn hair." A young lady belonging to the college was describing a scene here the other day, and with no apparent sense that there was anything out of the way about it, witlessly remarked, "The girls just piled themselves on the stairways to prevent the men from going up."

"And what did the men do then?"

"O, they just picked the girls up in their arms and set them down out of the way, and went on."

"O," said a married lady present, "but couldn't the girls have bit and kicked."

Here's co education for you, and a fine thing for the gymnasiums too, for when roses and becoming dresses fail, there must be special instruction in these exercises. The biting and kicking of untrained girls does not amount to much. They must be taught it scientifically. Just let the men wait awhile. Everything comes to the man who can wait.—Cornelia Spencer, in News and Observer.

"If You Love Me"

Dear Recorder:—I have just read Dr. Willingham's appeal to us for the work he represents. I have asked myself if we have done our part. During October, as reported in the RECORDER, our churches sent to our Treasurer $999.47. During the Conventional year so far, we have given $5,490.28. Have we done our part? Is this the measure of our ability, and have we measured our ability by our love for the Lord and his cause? We are told a certain woman who bestowed peculiar honor upon Jesus "loved much."

Paul did his great work as missionary in Asia Minor, Greece and Europe because the love of the Lord constrained him. I think the churches of Macedonia, in their "deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality," because they loved the cause and their Lord. As we love the Lord we will respond to his demands; that is the supreme test.

We may have done well in the past, but having done our duty in the past year, we are not relieved of duty and obligations in the present year, with its larger opportunities and heavier demands. If I speak to a church that has not helped the Foreign Mission work this year, will you not take the matter under immediate consideration, and for the love you have for your Lord help, and help in this work now.

"If you love me keep my commandments."

I want to earnestly urge the woman's missionary societies in our State to make a Christmas offering for our Foreign Mission work. I do not know how many societies we have in our churches in the State, but, there are many, and a contribution from each one will help the work the women have been asked to do, and prove to the church in a practical way that the woman's society is auxiliary to the church.

The church by my request accepted my resignation, and immediately called me again. It is hard to know what to do.

Yours, H. VAN DEVENTER.

Correction.

My Dear Brethren:—I find that the report of receipts from North Carolina, as published in my letter last week, did not contain the receipts of the Western North Carolina Convention. These were $608 48, making $2,895.15. I hasten to make this my correction, and hope further "corrections" to enlarge the amount will come speedily from all over the State.

Fraternally,

R. J. WILLINGHAM, Cor. Sec'y.

From the South River Association.

Bro. D. S. Bullard and the writer commenced a meeting with the Salem church on Monday after the second Sunday in September, which lasted seven days.

The church seemed to be very much revived and there were eleven members received by the church. This church is situated in an excellent section, and in this community there is one of the oldest and best schools in the county of Sampson. Those who know the teachers of this school and the people of the neighborhood, are not surprised at their succeeding, even in these hard times.

There is in this section back-bone and grit which makes them stand firm; and also Salt or grace which saves from the hands of the temptor.

Our next meeting was held with the church at Bever Dam, resulting in the addition of nineteen members. I think this church is constantly growing in grace, knowledge and liberality. May this people have the desire of their hearts.

On Monday after the first Sunday in October we began a meeting with the church at Long Branch, which lasted until the following Sunday, resulting in thirteen accessions to the church at Long Branch and one to the church at Autryville. This meeting was in progress during the great freshet, which was very much against our having large congregations, but the members were at work from the beginning, and He blessed our efforts. To Him be all the glory.

each parts of one great system. No one of them can be adequately understood without an estimate of its bearing on the whole. By consequence, each and all of them are factors in all sound scientific method, and, positively or negatively considered, enter, as necessary and constituent elements, into all high education.

While I hold that the elements of knowledge, such as are taught in the common school, may be taught and learned without serious and scientific discussion of these points of controversy, this is not true of the subject matter of high education. These questions to day occupy a larger space in all treatises on general science than ever before. To illustrate what I say, you have only to take up any modern treatise on Method, or any treatise on fundamental questions in general scientific inquiry. These subjects come to the surface in any thorough discussion of the nature of the certainty which results from the inductive process—in the discussion of the origin and character of those uniformities to which we give the name of "law" in Physics or Natural History—in fixing our conceptions of the origin of force—in settling the nature of those necessary truths that lie at the basis of the science of quantity—in determining the ground of the sacredness of contracts, as involved in the necessity and universality of moral distinctions. These topics are discussed in magazines, newspapers, and works of fiction even, with such boldness and freedom that the teacher who fails to attack them must either be inexcusably superficial, or neglectful of his professional obligations.

THE QUESTION OF TO-DAY.

The question before our profession to day is this: Shall the young men of the future be trained in scientific methods, so called, which assume a godless universe and deny the reality of all distinction between mind and matter; or in a method which finds an Infinite Mind as the bottom thought of all science and moral law, incarnated in all history, in all jurisprudence, and in every form of social order?

The obligation to furnish on these subjects instruction which shall be sound and healthy, rests upon our higher institutions of learning; and the duty cannot be discharged with the highest efficiency and freedom, where the institution is entangled by obligations to respect the opinions or prejudices of the great body of voters, as must necessarily be the case when an institution depends on taxation for its support, or has been endowed by State patronage. This is no question of mere sectarian propagandism. It involves the inculcation of belief in an objective moral order which must affect the whole moral cement of society, the spirit and character of our political philosophy, the ethics of commerce, the foundations of law. I make no charges against State institutions and the able and right-minded men who, so generally, control them: but if I do not greatly mistake, they will find more and more difficulties in the discharge of those obligations which are imposed upon them by a due regard for their convictions of the being of God and the substantial existence of the human soul. Those considerations which lead to the exclusion of religious instruction from the common school apply, with much greater force, to institutions for high education supported and controlled by the State. Those principles of our government which deny to the State the right, or the duty, to teach or to control religion, have a broader application than is generally admitted. The voluntary system for the support of religion, not only excludes the State from the maintenance of forms of belief or worship, but also from the maintenance and administration of those higher forms of scientific education which are necessarily conversant with the very foundations of all morality and all religion.

STATE PATRONAGE.

It is obvious that, if the State undertakes the work of high education at all, its patronage should be distributed among existing institutions on principles which shall approach, at least, proportion and fairness, taking into view the excellence of their work and the constituency which they represent. But since the State has withdrawn its support from colleges considered as a part of the State Church system, government patronage has been distributed with little or no regard to any system or law. Land grants have been made to the new States at the expense of the older. While the older States have borne the burdens of war or purchase attendant upon the acquisition of the public lands, the general government has granted to these States comparatively small amounts of the land thus acquired. Where special appropriations have been made by the several States, they have been distributed with little or no regard to the service that institutions have rendered to the cause of education, or to any principle of fairness or proportion whatever. The State, or municipalities under the sanction of the State, have given large sums to a very few colleges in the State of New York; while others, with equal claims, in every particular, have been entirely neglected. [Some Catholic and Episcopal] have received public property by millions; others little or nothing. There has been a gradual approach, of late, to the policy of withdrawing State patronage from higher institutions of learning altogether. This tendency has been due to a vague recognition of the principle that high education should, like religion, be left to the control of the voluntary principle.

A distinction should here be made between institutions for educational purposes and appropriations made by government for the encouragement of science and the purposes of general public utility—such as the coast survey, the geological exploration of States, and scientific experiments and investigations which meet a public and universal necessity, but are so expensive as to be beyond the capacity of private individuals or institutions.

DANGERS OF STATE INSTITUTIONS.

A popular argument in favor of the control of high education by the State is drawn from the great number of colleges established on the voluntary principle, and the alleged imperfection of the instruction which they impart. Regarding this objection, we have to remark that there is something besides State endowment necessary to the success of an institution of learning. We are nor aware that the institutions established in the newer States, and endowed by those States or the General Government, have been especially conspicuous for their services to high education, either with reference to the numbers that they have educated or the breadth and solidity of the instruction imparted. The University of Michigan is generally cited as an example of the success of State institutions, in contrast with those founded on the voluntary principle. But this institution is an exception to the general rule, and stands out conspicuously among many comparative failures. Every one familiar with its history knows that its early growth was slow, and its very existence has been brought into jeopardy by quarrels over its administration by parties, sects, and the advocates of different systems of opinion.

One of its most successful presidents informed the writer, a few years since, that he was under the necessity of spending a large portion of each winter in attendance on the legislature, for the purpose of preventing legislation interfering with its internal working, or in some way inimical to its interests. Much of its large patronage is due to the fact that it gives professional education to lawyers, doctors, miners, and engineers gratuitously at the public expense. This course can not be defended upon any sound principles of political philosophy. The danger apprehended from State interference with institutions mainly endowed by public funds is illustrated in the different attempts that have been made, by constitutional enactments, to exclude the State of New York from control of the large public property given to Cornell University. The immense grant made to Columbia College by the authority of the State took the form of gift, and neither the State nor the city of New York has ever been represented, as such, in its board of trustees. Hence its internal administration has not been interfered with by the public authorities. But as a general rule throughout our country, the literary managers of State institutions have been in a state of chronic trepidation lest their best efforts should be rendered nugatory by the caprices of unintelligent legislation.

Looking over the numerous State institutions in our country, we believe that, taking them as a whole, they show no better educational results than those colleges that have owed their origin to the voluntary principle. It is obviously impossible, under a government in which religious and political parties make themselves felt in every department, to secure instruction as broad, as free, as untrammeled in such institutions as in those under the control of the voluntary principle.

The doctrines of Political Economy have, for half a century, entered as factors into every presidential election, and no scientific economist would have been free to utter his own convictions, and to impress them upon his students, if he had taught under governmental patronage. Even now, the means of reaching a sound currency, and the propriety of a protective tariff enter so intimately into party politics, that an institution supported by the national government would hardly find itself free in announcing the clearest results of scientific inquiry respecting those subjects. The restrictions that were necessarily imposed upon the discussion of moral, political, and economical philosophy at West Point and Annapolis, showed their results, to every thoughtful observer, at the beginning of the late war. Nothing is clearer than the fact that government control over institutions of higher education in Europe has been constantly made use of to secure or maintain the ascendency of political and religious parties. Many of the results which we deprecate in an established church have shown themselves in State control of high education.

"SECTARIAN COLLEGES."

I am aware of the persistent ridicule—not to say misrepresentation—which has been expended upon what the opponents of the voluntary system have been pleased to call "sectarian colleges." They forget that there may be a sectarianism of skepticism and religion as positive and as bitter as any that exists within the limits of religious denominations. As a general rule, it is not true that the colleges of our country have been used as instruments for propagating the tenets of religious sects among their students. Such a charge, indiscriminately made against those who control the American colleges that have derived their main endowment from religious denominations, may be justly designated as slanderous. No man acquainted with the broad-minded, liberal, and learned men who have the control of these so-called "sectarian" institutions, can either intelligently or honestly charge them with using their positions for sectarian purposes in any legitimate sense of the term. No thoughtful man can ignore the work which such "sectarian colleges" as Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth, Columbia, and Brown have done for the country. These have all been predominantly controlled by some denomination of Christians, and they represent to day the highest type of our intellectual growth. They have saved us from educational barbarism. They have adopted into their curriculum every new science which has established any just claim to recognition. They have been nurseries of public morality and of an exalted patriotism. They have given tone and ele-

"Among the many testimonials which I see in regard to certain medicines performing cures, cleansing the blood, etc.," writes HENRY HUDSON, of the James Smith Woolen Machinery Co., Philadelphia, Pa., "none impress me more than my own case. Twenty years ago, at the age of 18 years, I had swellings come on my legs, which broke and became running sores. Our family physician could do me no good, and it was feared that the bones would be affected. At last, my good old mother urged me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles, the sores healed, and I have not been troubled since. Only the scars remain, and the memory of the past, to remind me of the good Ayer's Sarsaparilla has done me. I now weigh two hundred and twenty pounds, and am in the best of health. I have been on the road for the past twelve years, have noticed Ayer's Sarsaparilla advertised in all parts of the United States, and always take pleasure in telling what good it did for me."

vation to our literature. They have furnished an education distinctively American—a better preparation for American public life, whether political, professional, or mercantile, than can be furnished by any institutions in the Old World, however broad and comprehensive their courses of instruction may be. They furnish the ideal to-day which the newer institutions of the country, established under State patronage, are painfully and laboriously striving to realize.

MORE CENTRALIZATION.

But we are told that our institutions of higher learning ought to be centralized. We answer: A country like ours, in which local self-government so predominates, never can, and never should, be brought under the control of a single type of culture. Our country's intellectual life ought not to be shaped from any State or intellectual centre. Such a state of things would inevitably destroy the freedom, the variety, the manifoldness which is one of the best characteristics of American society as contrasted with that of France and England.

But we are told that there are too many colleges; and that this result is due to the voluntary system. In a free country, how can this be helped? There are just now too many banks, too many railroads, too many ships, too much iron; but the law of supply and demand is the only possible corrective for the evil. If a college attracts to itself patronage and endowment, it has a right to live; if it does not, it will die. The law of natural selection applies to colleges as well as to the animal and vegetable world. A college that does good work creates its own patronage by its elevating influence over the community around it. Time alone can determine whether a college has a right to live. All permanent institutions are of slow growth. The healthiest institutions of our country have sprung from the smallest beginnings. Tried by the standard which men seek now now to apply to the newer colleges of our country, Harvard and Yale would have been abated as educational nuisances when they were a century old. When Williams and Amherst were established, the friends of Harvard thought there were too many colleges, and threw every available obstacle in the way of the new institutions.

THE AMERICAN COLLEGE.

We believe that, in the future development of the wealth and intelligence of our country, the voluntary system, which has been so satisfactory and successful in the maintenance of religion, will be abundantly able to meet all the demands of higher liberal and professional education. We would then confine State provision for education to the common school, and to institutions that may be found necessary to train teachers for the common school. We have the most implicit faith that the individual benevolence of the country will, in the future, give to those institutions of higher learning which show themselves worthy of it, an endowment beyond anything that the present century has seen. Men of wealth will soon learn, that he only can secure a place in the memory and affections of coming generations who links his name and fortune to institutions for the moral and intellectual elevation of his fellow-men.

The demand for Ayer's Hair Vigor in such widely-separated regions as South America, Spain, Australia, and India has kept pace with the home consumption, which goes to show that these people know a good thing when they try it.

If Christianity is heroic life, the missionary work is heroic Christianity. It is a little heroic even to believe in missions. If we may not be among the heroes, let us like the church of old, hear the Holy Ghost and go with Paul and Barnabas down to their ships and lay our hands on them and send them away with all our sympathy and blessing. So, perhaps we may catch something of their heroism. So, in our quiet and home-keeping lives, the idea of Christianity may become more clear, Christ our Lord more dear, and we ourselves more faithful, more generous, more brave.—Phillips Brooks.

Ashe and Alleghany Union Meeting.

A Union Meeting of the Ashe and Alleghany Association was held with the Liberty church, Alleghany county, N. C., commencing on Friday before the fifth Sunday in September, 1894.

The introductory sermon was preached by Rev. W. F. Barker from 2 Peter 3: 18—"But grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

The Union organized by electing Rev. T. M. Duncan, Moderator, and R. L. Loaf, Secretary.

A number of churches were represented through their delegates, some of whom rode fifteen to thirty-five miles through the rain on Thursday, and the Spirit of the Lord met with them.

Delegates were enrolled and the necessary committees appointed by the Moderator.

Met Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. Spent half an hour in devotional exercises led by Bro. R. L. Shoaf.

The Secretary read the program of services as follows:

1. What is the best method to arouse our churches out of the cold, dilapidated state that some of them are now in?

2. What should be done with church-members who do not attend their church-meetings?

3. Who should attend Sunday-schools?

4. Is so called open communion taught in the New Testament?

The first query was taken up and discussed by Revs. E. Blevins, F. B Cheek, E. Tucker, W. F. Barker and the Moderator.

The second query was discussed by E. Tucker, F. W. Cheek, R. L. Loaf, E. Blevins, and F. B. Cheek.

At 11 o'clock a. m., Rev. E. Tucker preached a sermon.

On re-assembling at 2 o'clock p. m., the second query was further discussed by T. M. Duncan, E. Blevins, R. L. Shoaf and E. Tucker.

The third query was discussed by F. B. Cheek and W. F. Barker.

The fourth query was discussed by E. Blevins, F. B. Cheek, R. L. Shoaf and T. M. Duncan.

Interesting reports were submitted by the various committees.

The next Union Meeting will be held with Bethel Baptist church, eight miles south of Jefferson, Ashe county, on Friday before the fifth Sunday in December, 1894.

The following is the program for that meeting:

1st. Should Missionary Baptists compromise with other denominations? Speakers—Rev. T. M. Duncan and H. A. Eller.

2nd, What is Scriptural baptism? Who are proper subjects? Who are proper administrators? Speakers—Rev. E. Tucker and N. H. Jones.

3rd. What is forgiveness as taught in the Bible, and on what terms is an individual required to forgive an injury done him? Speakers—E. Blevins and F. W. Cheek.

4th. Can we as Missionary Baptists receive members by letter from other Baptist denominations not of our faith and practice? Speakers—R. L. Shoaf and G. Porter.

The Secretary was instructed to send the minutes of this meeting to the BIBLICAL RECORDER, Alleghany Star and Ashe Pioneer for publication.

On motion, the Union Meeting adjourned to time and place by singing a parting hymn and giving each other the hand. Prayer by E. Tucker. Benediction by the Moderator.

On Sunday 10 a. m. Rev. T. M. Duncan preached a warm and touching sermon.

Thus closed a most delightful Union Meeting. Indeed, let us all remember the December Union and make it interesting by attending and asking the Lord to meet with us by his Spirit. R. L. SHOAF, Sec.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

In Russia the great bulk of the work of Bible distribution is done by the British and Foreign Bible Society. The American Society co-operates with the Russian Bible Society, which circulates about 100,000 copies of the Bible annually. The work among the Jews is more restricted recently than it was a few years ago. Rev. Dr. Ellis, of Warsaw, is the only foreign missionary recognized by the government. Joseph Rabinowitch, a native Russian Jew, is doing a good work in Southwestern Russia.

STUDY TOPICS.—Hindrances to the work—self-interest, priestly opposition, depraved moral sense of the people, poor equipment. Do Romanists need missionaries to give them the gospel? Missions of the S. B. C. Missions of other Protestant bodies in Italy.

Missions.

I wish we could outgrow the word "missions"! It is a convenient word, but it does a great deal toward defeating its own mission. It is a grand word, but it has a far away sound. And then, to make matters worse, we talk about "home missions" and "foreign missions" as though they were separate from each other and separate from our interests, and the "foreign" part of it even alien from our life. I am tired of battering away against the stone wall of indifference in our churches that rests on the popular conception of these words. I am tired of saying "missions, missions, missions," to people who, if they are too polite to say it in words, at least by their looks tell me, "I am not interested in missions!" If I were a minister I would like to go away off where people had never been preached to and gather a church that had never heard the Word. I would teach them that they had volunteered in any army organized and working and fighting for the spread of the kingdom. "The kingdom for the King!" should be our watchword. And we should talk about "our Chinese wing" and "our Japanese flank," our "Southern corps," our "Mountain scouts" and "our Alaskan outposts." And we should sustain and reinforce them according to their need, as a matter of course, since the cause is our own and the army one and we and the cause and the army our King's. And no one should ever say to me again, "I am not interested in missions!" And the thought that any part of the King's interests was alien to any of his soldiers should never be dreamed.—The Advocate.

Proportionate Giving.

A member of the church who possessed considerable means gave but little toward the church expenses. On this being referred to in a public meeting, he claimed that he was in favor of proportionate giving, and that he had given proportionately more than the others. After the others had expressed their amazement at this statement, he explained that he meant he had given more in proportion to the amount of religion he had than of the others. This may be true. Is your giving in proportion to your means or your religion?

Doing Well (?)

A church in Hartford gave eleven hundred dollars to home missions. One lady said to another: "Didn't we do well this morning?" "No, not as a church," was the reply. "For one lady gave six hundred dollars and one gentleman gave three hundred." If church collections were analyzed it would appear that, as a rule, by far the greater part is given by a very few persons, and they not the most able. The great majority of church members give only a trifle or nothing at all for the work of missions.

God delights in spiritual spontaneity. The penny pushed from the open hand by the impulse of the Holy Ghost is worth more to him than the pound wrung from the reluctant grip by the dunning of church beggars. I am so much impressed with the importance which God attaches to sweet voluntariness in Scripture, that I am often tempted to resolve never to beg a cent for God again, but rather spend my energy in getting Christians spiritualized, assured that they will certainly become liberalized. As I was reading my Greek Testament the other day I was delighted with the discovery concerning a well known text: 'God loveth a cheerful giver.' The word cheerful is our word for hilarious.' And I have to imagine the word put into action. 'Will you give me a thousand dollars for missions?' 'Ha! ha! ha! I should be delighted to, since God has so wonderfully blessed and prospered me.' 'Will you contribute a hundred dollars toward our evangelistic work this winter?' 'Ha! ha! ha! I am only too glad for the opportunity to give, since I have so abundantly received.' How much better that sounds than the doleful, 'O, dear, I am tired with the never-ending calls of money, money, money.' But this hilarious giving is not possible except the spirit is dwelling richly within it. For only the spirit shows the greatness of that salvation which we received through Christ, and the greatness of our consequent obligation.—A. J. Gordon.

No church ought to call itself thoroughly aggressive and evangelical that does not expend for the support of missions at least one dollar for every five dollars it expends on itself.—Joseph Cook.

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs.

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON, RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its meaning. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

The Little River Association.

Though I am too busy to write, yet I feel like it will not do to let pass unnoticed such a meeting as the last session of our body. We met in our nineteenth session with the church at Hector's Creek, Harnett county, on Thursday, November 1st, 1894. Just twelve years ago the body met with this same church. The Association then had 944 members, and sent $57 88 to that meeting, of which $31 23 was for missions. This year there are more than 2,100 members—or a little more than double the membership of 1882—who sent to the Association more than $330, of which more than $300 was for the objects of the Convention, or nearly seven times as much money as in 1882.

When we consider the fact that nearly all our territory is one large mission field and has been occupied but a few years, we doubt whether there is a body in the State that has developed more rapidly. There are no strong wealthy churches, but there is a willingness to work and concert of action.

This year was the most prosperous session in the history of the body. The congregations were large, the entertainment was all that could be asked for, the speaking was good, and the collections larger than usual.

The introductory sermon was preached on Thursday by Rev. J. M. Holleman, using as his text, "Owe no man anything," in which he showed forcibly the evils of debt, urging the people to promptness in meeting their obligations.

The election of officers resulted in re electing Bro. H. Y. Smith moderator and J. A. Campbell clerk and treasurer. Brother Smith usually presides well, but this year he did better than ever. Why? Because he is at Wake Forest this year and is learning how to be of greater service to God and his brethren.

We did not have a great many visiting brethren present this year. Rev. J. V. Devenny, who is this year to complete his course at Wake Forest, was present, and made two forcible addresses, one on ministerial education and the other on "State aid." These speeches were much enjoyed and will do great good in years to come. Brethren G. A. Bain and J. L. Hall, of the South River Association, and William Rogers and J. H. Henly, of the Sandy Creek Association, were present, and added their part to the work of the body. Since the meeting was at my home church, and also one of which I have been pastor for eight years, I will not say what others said, viz., "the singing was the best I ever heard."

But I will say that I know of no country church that has better church music than they have at Hector's Creek. How do you manage it? We don't manage it. We simply supply the people with plenty of books, "The Choice," and they do the singing. The pastor leads and the people love to follow. Some one said, "How do you manage to have such Sunday school music?" Well, we get a new song book every year, and this keeps up a live interest in singing. There has been but one music school taught here for eighteen years, but it is wonderful to see how soon they can sing a new piece of music.

It would not be a just report of the meeting were I to fail to mention the name of Prof. P. H. Rogers, who led the singing and trained the class for the occasion.

It was a great joy to see so many young brethren entering the work and taking such an active part in advancing the Lord's work. Some whose parents have been leaders in our meetings, but have passed away, or become too feeble to take an active part in our work, and others who have been added to the churches on our mission fields. There's a brighter day coming to the Little River Association.

On Sunday Rev. W. G. King preached the missionary sermon. Text: "And ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem and Judea," &c. It was a fine sermon and was greatly appreciated by the large audience who heard him.

Rev. G. A. Bain preached in the Academy at the same hour, and a great many could not get in either house. The congregation sang, "God be with you till we meet again," and dispersed.

The next session will be held at Friendship church, Harnett county, where the Baptist State Convention met, I am told, in 1846. Will some one please inform me if the above date is incorrect?

And now, my brethren, we are separated again, each in our respective fields, trying to work for God. Let us not forget to pray for each other and strive to make this better than any preceding year in our history—better churches, better Sunday schools, better preaching, better hearing and more money from each church to be carried to Friendship next year. Let us begin to day.

The State penitentiary cotton crop will aggregate nearly 2,000 bales. The aggregate loss to the State by the decline in prices is $30,000. But, if the State will hold the cotton and advance money for the penitentiary running expenses, the price may rise. The corn crop, says Supt. Leazer, amounts to 100,000 bushels. It is probable that the penitentiary will pay out clear this year, greatly to the credit of Mr. Leazer.

The best way to avoid scalp diseases, hair falling out, and premature baldness, is to use the best preventive known for that purpose—Hall's Hair Renewer.

Cooperative penitentiary convicts on North Carolina state farms follows: 68 get $68 a year; 241 get $60; 360 get $54; 194 get $17; 2,743 will get $17.

Clinton Chapel, a house of worship owned by negroes, has been closed by the courts, on account of the contentions of two factions of the congregation.

Judge V. C. Barringer, who has been a member of the appellate court at Alexandria, Egypt, for twenty years, has returned to North Carolina to remain.

Chas. H. Brown, attorney, was shot and killed by a court witness, Geo. Waters, at Kinston last week. The lawyer accused the witness of false testimony.

The first annual exhibit of the Mecklenburg Live Stock Association was successfully given last week at Charlotte. Interest in stock is liver in North Carolina than it ever has been.

One J. C. Howard—real name, C. B. Kumlin—has been making a deal of money by posing as president of the "Universal Association of Home Artists," with headquarters at Asheville. He charged a good membership fee and offered to get remunerative work for all of his members. He is a fraud.

The Advertiser is a new weekly journal from Rutherfordton, well printed and, Col. J. C. Tipton being editor, is of course ably edited. The Davidson Dispatch has assigned. The Silver Dollar, the Durham Times (weekly), and an Alamance county paper have discontinued publication.

Rev. C. H. Martin has given notice that he will contest the seat in congress, to which Mr. J. A. Lockhart is reported to have been elected by 400 majority. The State election canvassing board meets the 29th. All congressional seats not won by Populists or Republicans will be contested.

The horrible massacre of thousands of Christian Armenians by the Governor of Bitles in the Sassaun district, ruled over by Turks, is reported. The Governor ordered his troops to shoot into the populace with the aforesaid results.

In a sparring match at Syracuse, N. Y., between two pugilists, one of them, Fitzsimmons by name, of national reputation, struck his opponent, Rodan, a blow on the chin that induced hemorrhage of the brain, resulting fatally. Fitzsimmons is held for manslaughter.

The commission appointed to investigate the great Pullman strike has reported, charging both sides with error, being more severe on the Pullman Company and the Railway managers, against whom the strike was made. This is a step toward recognition of the defenceless laboringman's rights and employers' duties.

The Government has announced that it will sell another lot of $50,000,000 worth of interest bearing ten year bonds. It seems that the New York bankers had more money than they could lend at the desired rate, and, of course, they turned in and by some occult means, have forced the government to offer to borrow their surplus cash and pay them well for it. The bankers were at least considerate to wait until after November 6th.

From Williamston.

Dear Recorder:—Our town is quite dull at present. The farmer wears a long face, because he cannot pay debts while cotton sells for four or five cents. The merchant looks discouraged. This is caused by slow collections. We are looking forward to, and hoping for, better times. The religious outlook is also gloomy. But now that the election is over, and the people have again settled down to work, it is to be hoped the fog will disappear and the spiritual outlook will brighten. My churches are not doing as well as I could wish, but as well as I could expect.

I held a ten days meeting with the church at Hamilton during the fall. The church was revived, one added by baptism, and I hope much good was done that may be seen in the near future. I also preached ten nights at Everetts. Three were immersed, one restored, and another awaiting baptism. I have not protracted here at Williamston, but expect to do so soon.

The health of our people is improving, and the chills will soon be a thing of the past.

Thanks to the writer of the articles on the first page of the RECORDER.

I have been a constant attendant of our Convention, but will not go this fall. Hope our Boards will come up all-right.

I love my work and people. They are very kind and thoughtful of my comfort. And with such men to lead as Brother Simmons and Dr. J. B. H. Knight we expect to see grand results in Williamston. The sowing is going on; the harvest must come. There may be delay; indeed we may not live to see it. But the day will come when Williamston Baptist church will be a power for good in this part of North Carolina.

Very truly yours,
E. J. EDWARDS.

November 16, 1894.

Pastor Matthews at Chincoteague Island.

Dear Recorder:—Sunday (11th) was a busy day for the pastor of Beulah church on Chincoteague Island, Va. In the morning at 10:30 he preached on the subject: "Complete Satisfaction," Ps. 17:15, and at 11:30 he baptised a lady. In the afternoon, at 2 o'clock, he attended Sunday School; at 3:15 preached a sermon to children on "The Childhood of Jesus," and preached again at night on "Preparing Victuals for Crossing the Jordan," Josh. 1:11.

There seems to be a genuine spirit of revival in the hearts of the Beulah congregation. Congregations have almost doubled in four weeks. The church will celebrate Christmas by holding a series of evangelistic services.

It is the mature conviction of both church and pastor that the Lord was in the call and coming of the pastor. He never felt more like trying to do his whole duty in a prudent, straightforward and christianlike manner in his life. Past experience and present needs have caused him to be clothed with new desires and renewed determinations. He considers his church one of the best and one of the most prosperous and enthusiastic in this part of the vineyard. With deep sorrow for every mistake made in the past, he begs the sincere prayers of his brethren and sisters anxious for his future welfare. Truly his lot is cast in a pleasant field, and in one presenting a great door open for large usefulness.

DIED.

HINSON—Sister A. N. Hinson, after months of lingering consumption, passed over the river on Thursday, Oct. 25th. She was much beloved by a large circle of friends, and left a husband and four daughters to mourn their loss. She was a consistent member of the Baptist church in Concord. PASTOR.

BROGDEN—Died at her home in Goldsboro, N. C., on the morning of Nov. 8th, 1894, Mrs. Willis H. Brogden, in her fifty-third year.

For thirty-eight years she was a consistent member of the Baptist church in Goldsboro, a patient, meek, and uncomplaining Christian. Though always delicate, she bore the burdens of life more patiently than many who have greater strength. She was the daughter of the lately deceased and sainted Mrs. Margaret Robinson, who preceded her to glory by only two and a half months.

May God sanctify her death to the good of her two boys and bereaved husband.

C. A. JENKENS.

GREGORY—Katie Gregory, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. R. White, and wife of Mr. Zenous Gregory, was born Sept. 6th, 1867, and departed this life Aug. 18th, 1894. She became a member of Huntersville Baptist church, Norfolk, Va. Rev. J. R. Leaks, pastor of said church, was much beloved by our sister. A few years ago her family moved to Hertford, N. C., and she deposited her letter in the church there. She was full of zeal for her Master and loved the church, ever ready to talk of Jesus and his love. But suddenly health failed. She became a great sufferer, sometimes better better and then worse. As a child she was obedient; as a wife kind and true. Often she was heard thanking parents and husband for the devoted attention given to her as she felt the change stealing over her gradually. She became very weak and helpless. Just before death, with uplifted hands, she said to her mother, "My fingers are purple; this is death; but I am not afraid to die." And with Christian resignation she placed her hands upon her breast and said, "Don't grieve for me; I am going home." The home on earth will miss her. Father, mother and husband, look up and think of her request, "Meet me in heaven." Be faithful to God. The storms of life will soon be over and you can rest sweetly beyond. PASTOR.

HOLLEMAN—William Henry Holleman was born June 14th, 1812. He was the son of Louis and Penelope Holleman. His mother was the daughter of Mr. James Lane, one of the founders of the city of Raleigh. Mr. Holleman was descended from a family prominent in the early history of our Commonwealth. He inherited a good estate from his father, his old homestead being held under the original grant to his ancestors from George the Third. Mr. Holleman was a man of very fine sense and of unusually correct business habits. By wise but honest management of his affairs, he added largely to his patrimony until at the close of a long life he died one of the wealthiest citizens of Raleigh.

Mr. Holleman was warmly esteemed as a man of pure life by all who knew him. He was a man of very noble bearing. The old style Southern gentleman was well impersonated in him. He possessed a true refinement of soul, and his presence always added a charm and grace to life.

Mr. Josephus Daniels, wrote of him the day after his death as follows:—

"For more than half a century the people of Raleigh have been accustomed to see the familiar figure of William Henry Holleman, seated in a plain and strongly built buggy, drawn by a horse that had good blood, riding from his model farm into Raleigh in the morning with the regularity of a clock, and returning later in the day to his country home. Young men have grown to manhood, mature men have grown gray and gone into their graves; children have grown into grandparents in these years, but the simple, quiet, useful and unostentatious life of Mr. Holleman had undergone no change.

"His temperament was equable and he had perfect mastery of himself. Other men became excited; other men showed disappointment; other men lost their head. He was always the same in bearing. If he felt deeply, nobody knew it. If he had disappointment or perplexity, his face never betrayed it. He was not a demonstrative man, gave his confidence to few and then slowly, but when he trusted a man, he loved to show his esteem in a quiet way. His affection for his wife was truly beautiful, and his solicitude for the comfort of those he loved told of his unselfish thoughtfulness.

"Accurate and methodical in all his ways, honest and upright, prudent and successful, he had grown into the life of this county until he seemed as much a part of it as the granite of the capitol. And he was as sturdy and as solid as the base of that substantial structure."

On April 21st, 1880, Mr. Holleman was married to Miss Roe Ella Robbins of Randolph county, N. C. For nearly fifteen years they lived happily together until death took him from the companionships of earth. His home life was very beautiful. All who were admitted to the sanctities of that home felt that heaven had been lavish in her gifts of comfort and contentment and joy.

During the past summer it became very perceptible to his friends and loved ones that his health was failing. Under counsel of his physician he made a visit with his wife to her old home in Randolph county. This proved to be of no permanent good to his health; so, after a few weeks, he returned to Raleigh and took rooms at the Park hotel, his physician thinking it not well for him to go to his old home, two miles out of the city. Here he had every comfort and attention that love and human skill could provide. His devoted wife was by his side every hour of his declining health, and with her own hands ministered to his comfort and happiness.

On October 14th, 1894, in the midst of dear friends and in the arms of his wife, he heard the Master's summons and answered the call. He was ready to go; and so he is ever with the Lord.

He held membership with the First Baptist church of Raleigh, and lived in the confidence and love of his brethren.

His wife being a Methodist, he often worshipped with her at the Edenton Street Methodist church. He prayed daily for his own and for his wife's pastor, and he ever extended to them a warm and princely greeting under his hospitable roof. He lived in a broad Christian fraternity with all God's people. He took a hearty interest in the great movements of all branches of the church of Christ. He was a close reader of the Word of God, and was an interested and devout listener to the preaching of that Word.

It is rare that a more elegant gentleman is to be seen in the walks of life. I entertained for him a tender and affectionate regard, and will ever thank the good Lord for the sweet companionship I have had with him.

A gentleman of noble bearing, a soul of rare refinement and taste, a man highly endowed with the virtues of a true manhood, and withal a follower of the Lord Jesus, was William Henry Holleman. We sorrow for him, but not without hope.

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, It hath pleased God in His wisdom to remove from our midst, by death, on the 14th day of October, 1894, Brother John Brown, who for a long time was a useful member of Camden Lodge, No. 80, I. O. O. F.; therefore,

Resolved 1. That the Lodge has lost a useful member, the Order at large a bright example of true Odd fellowship, and each member of this Lodge a personal friend.

Resolved 2. That we extend to his family our sincere sympathy, and commend them to the care of the same loving Savior whom our Brother endeavored to serve in his life.

Resolved 3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the wife and mother, and they be spread upon the minutes of this Lodge, and a copy sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER, and the usual badge of mourning be worn thirty days.

Respectfully submitted,

Waiting.

I am waiting for the coming of my dear Redeemer Lord,
I am resting in His promise in His precious, priceless word;
And although He seems to tarry, yet I know He'll surely come,
And take His own, His ransomed, to His bright and blissful home.

When I waken in the morning, ere the dawning of the day,
I lift my soul to His dear side, and watch and praise and pray,
For it may be in the morning I shall hear His blessed voice,
Triumphant o'er the waves of time, bid all His own rejoice.

Then in the noontide splendor of the sun's meridian light,
When the busy world's surroundings need our armor should be bright,
'Tis sweet to turn aside our thoughts from the carking cares of life,
And think perhaps 'tis now he'll come 'mid the battle and the strife.

Then when the shadowying of night spreads darkness on the land;
Ere soft slumbers close my senses, I yield all into His hand;
My body, soul and spirit—self—all I ask Him safe to keep,
And thinking on His precious blood I fain would fall asleep;

For it may be while I'm sleeping the arch-angel's trump will sound,
Then, oh! what a glorious waking, to be all in Jesus found!
Yes! but whether in the morning or the noontide or the night,
It recks little to the Christian soul whose light is in His light.

For no matter when He cometh—oh, what praise for truth like this!
When He comes, we shall be like Him, "we shall see Him as He is."

—C. L. Elliott.

How To Spend Sunday.

If we are to take our Lord's example as given us in the Sunday-school lesson for October 21, and his teaching as given in the lesson for November 4, as our guide, we ought to use the Sabbath in the service of God and man. On the morning of the Sabbath at Capernaum our Lord went to the synagogue, and engaged heartily in its services. He did not leave the house, however, without doing good to at least one poor soul that had gone there for comfort and help. Then in the afternoon, while he appears to have given some of the hours to rest, he made his healing presence felt in the house where he was staying. In the evening he resumed his work for suffering humanity, and continued at this until midnight. What a busy day it must have been! So on the days described in the second lesson he evidently did not regard the Sabbath as merely for rest from physical toil, but gave it to helping others, or to communion with God, affirming as he did so, that the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath.

With the example and teachings of our Lord as our guide, therefore, we should spend the Sabbath in holy work as well as in rest. Like him we should give the day to God and our fellow-men. Instead of spending it in idleness or pleasure, we should devote it to the cultivation of our higher natures, to work of mercy and to worship. Such use of the day will be a blessing to ourselves and the world.—Our Young People.

Night in a Great Hospital.

At night the ward is strangely picturesque. After nearly fourteen years of familiarity with hospital scenes I never enter one after the lights have been lowered without a vague thought that there is something uncanny about the place. The big room seems bigger, and the row of beds upon either side seem longer than by daylight. The lowered gas flame over the medicine chest is the center of a dense-walled hollow sphere of darkness. Around the beds of those who need close watching, screens covered with white muslin are placed, and within them are candles, whose flickering light makes ghostly shadows here and there. The faint noises made by the restless sleepers as they turn uneasily in their beds; the occasional muttering or loud talking of the delirious; the subdued sounds produced by attendants moving cautiously about their duties—all serve to make the silence audible. The place seems surrounded by a sea of darkness and silence, whose waves are beating fiercely against the walls.—Dr. J. W. Roosevelt.

A Bad Wreck

—of the consumption may follow in the track of a disordered system, due to impure blood or inactive liver. Don't run the risk! The proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery take all the chances. They make a straightforward offer to return your money if their remedy fail's to benefit or cure in all disorders and affections due to impure blood or inactive liver. The germs of disease circulate through the blood; the liver is the filter which permits the germs to enter or not. The liver active, and the blood pure, and you escape disease.

When you're run down, debilitated, weak, and your weight below a healthy standard, you regain health, strength, and wholesome flesh, by using the "Discovery." It builds up the body faster than nauseating Cod liver oil or emulsions.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation, piles, biliousness, indigestion, or dyspepsia, and headaches.

Grading Wool.

"The finest and softest wool is," says Town and Country Journal, "always on the shoulders of the sheep. An expert in judging sheep always looks at the wool on the shoulders first. A writer of experience in rearing fine wooled sheep and handling wool communicates the following suggestions for selecting a good wooled sheep: Always assuming that the wool to be inspected is really fine, we first examine the shoulders as a part where we find the finest wool; then that on the ribs, the thigh, the rump and shoulder parts, and the nearer the wool from the various portions of the animal approaches the standard the better. First we scrutinize the fineness, and if the result be satisfactory we pronounce the fleece in respect to fineness very 'even.' Next we scrutinize the length of the staple, and if we find that the wool on the ribs, thigh and back approximates reasonably in length to that of the standard we again declare the fleece, as regards length of staple, 'true and even.' We next satisfy ourselves as to the density of the fleece, and we do this by closing the hand upon a portion of the rump and loin wool, these points being usually the thinnest and most faulty. If this again give satisfaction, we designate all the wool 'even to density.'" Now to summarize these separate examinations: If the fleece is nearly of equal length on shoulder, rib and back, and density on shoulder, and across the loins, we conclude that we have a perfect sheep for producing valuable wool."

Dust.

It would be well if we could examine enough specimens of air under the microscope to be able to call up ever afterwards vivid pictures of its contents. We should then see the cloud of dust arising from every footfall in a carpet, springing up from every cushioned chair when its occupant leaves it, and flying out from unbrushed clothes and dirty boots. Had we these microscope eyes to see our real surroundings, certain reforms in our households would not be so delayed. There would soon be an end of the nailed-down carpet that would be beaten and brushed out of doors much oftener than it now is. We would have no heavy hangings to catch the dust, and, unseen, foul the air at every movement. Our furniture, especially of bedrooms, would be smoother of outline, with fewer dust-catchers. We would more intelligently direct our house-builders, requiring for one thing perfectly fitting floors, and, for another, fewer mouldings and projections too high to be conveniently cleaned every day, but sure to send down upon us their accumulations at every closing of the door. We should learn that a sweeping is not to be indoors, but out, the floor-covering to be removed for the purpose, and that the removal of dust does not consist in stirring it up only to settle again, but in wiping it up with a slightly dampened cloth, which shall carry the dust with it out of the room. And it is really true, good house-wife, that this system, once set running in your house, requires no more labor, take the whole year together, than your present way, and you will be clean all the time, instead of once or twice a year.—Hall's Journal of Health.

The Bible's Story.

My name is Bible. It is a Greek name, and in Greek it means the same as "The Book" in English.

I am a child of God. My infancy was in the days of Moses; but God made me grow and grow, until in the days of Paul and John I became full-grown.

I have passed through many hands and appeared in many different forms before I came to be put together as you see me now. Men have tried to destroy me by burning all the copies they could find, but still I have lived on through more than thirty centuries.

In my childhood—Old Testament days—I spoke in Hebrew. Seventy wise men are said to have translated my Old Testament sayings from the Hebrew language into Greek. This was two hundred and eighty years before Christ came to the earth.

In my early manhood Greek was my language. The Gospels were written in Greek and the Epistles of Paul and of other apostles (afterward gathered together and arranged as the New Testament) were all in Greek.

About four hundred years after Christ, the aged Saint Chrysostom gave me my name of "Bible," for until then I was spoken of as the "Scriptures."

But many of the people could not read Hebrew and Greek; so Jerome (in the fourth century) took me and translated me into Latin. About the year 1380, Wycliffe, the reformer, changed my dress into an English one.

Then Tyndale, in the sixteenth century, brought out another translation. His dying prayer, "Lord, open the King of England's eyes!" was answered when King James directed the last edition.

Now in my English dress I stand before you all and ask you to come and learn about Jesus.—Christian Observer.

Dangerous Places.

On the top of a hill in England there is now a notice-board with the inscription: "This hill is dangerous to cyclists." Before that notice was put up, a stranger had ridden down the hill. Before he had proceeded many yards his machine became unmanageable, and he was thrown with a sickening thud upon the pavement and killed upon the spot. After that, they put up the notice. If every place where a young man's life has been ruined were to be labeled, then every saloon in the United States would have to be labeled: "This place is dangerous to young men." Every racing course, every theatre, variety-show and dime museum, and every dancing saloon, would have to be labeled: "This place is dangerous to young men."—Exchange.

The Negro's Humor.

Among the old-time negroes in the region that we have been considering much of the humor was very interesting. Their speech, by constant contact with the white man's, which it sought to imitate, had a curtness and vivacity never heard on large seaboard and river plantations. In the lightness of the negroes heart, with an imagination that never sought to be curbed, his words and his deportment often had a fun as racy as any lover of that article reasonably could wish to see. Even his complainings, oftener than otherwise, were put forth with a resentment so peculiar as to provoke laughter as well as sympathy. Witness the following anecdote of the return to his old master, not very long ago, of one of his former slaves after having served another person for a year:

"Why, Jim, how happens it that you quit Perkins?" asked the gentleman.

"Well, now, Marse Jack, I gwine up en tell you jes how 't is. I wuck fer dah man all las' year, and I wuck hard, en I make him a good crop. Well, now, de troof is, I did git f'om him a few, but min' you, jes only a few, merlasses en tobarker, en one hat, en a pa'r o' shoes, en one little thing en'nother. Well, den, Chris'mus come, en he say, 'Jim, I gwine make out our 'count.' En den he tuck he piece o' paper, en he pen, and he ink-vial, en he 'gin a-settin' down, en when he thoo wid dat job, he 'gin a-addin' up, en a-put'n' down, en a kyar'n; en he kyar'd, en he kep' on a-kyar'n', ontwel, bless your soul en body! Marse Jacky, when he gst thoo, he done kyar's off all what was a-comin' to me! En so I makes up my min', I does, to leff dar, en pewoose myself back to you, whar I knows dey not gwine be no sich kyar'n' as dem." Then he joined heartily in the laugh raised by what had just occurred to him as being a good practical joke.—Col. R. M. Johnson.

What a spectacle we must present to angels! With a land almost perfect in its soil and minerals and climate; with immunity from pestilence and disaster—with every gift in heaven's power lavished upon us, we are a discordant, dissatisfied, quarrelsome nation, scarcely able to keep ourselves from internecine war or from starvation. Penitence would be an ornament to the people of this land.—Central Baptist.

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.:

Dear Sir—I think your "Favorite Prescription" was the preservation of my life. I was under the doctor's care for three months with womb disease and a gradual wasting all the time. I was so weak that I could not be raised in bed when I commenced taking the "Prescription," and by the time I had taken three bottles I was up and going wherever I pleased and have had good health and been very strong ever since. That was four years ago. I have recommended it to a good many of my friends, and they have taken it and are highly pleased.

"THROUGH the Church into Society" is the chief display line in a handsome double column, illustrated advertisement, announcing to the readers of several contemporaries that an article of that title, by Rev. J. R. Paxton, D. D., will be an early feature of a popular woman's journal. If experience were worth anything, there are many who could write graphically on Through Society Out of the Church; but experience without brains is rather a lame affair. There are doubtless many others who might write a volume or more on Through Society into the Ditch; but people in that situation probably do not care to write on the subject; and, surely, if the dead could write, many and long and realistic would be the dissertations sent up to earth on Through Society to the Devil. But it remains for Dr. Paxton to explore the devious path "Through the Church into Society."

Surely the reverend writer has dipped into the realm of the fantastic. Is it really possible that he knows some one who actually trod the path of which he is to write? Perhaps so; but it is evident that he beheld that one in the act, for it is quite beyond doubt that the most acute observer would never suspect one in Society of having actually come through a sure enough church—not, at least, if actions haven't lost their historical vociferousness.

But, to tell the truth, we must confess that in our day there have been two people who tried desperately to achieve what Dr. Paxton is advertised to write about; but they failed utterly, else that announcement might be embellished by the picture of another than Dr. Paxton. The sad tale of one of them is quickly told: "Baptist born, Baptist bred, Baptist 'till I die" was her profession until she perceived that this policy promised to bring her to the grave an old maid. Then there was a hurrying and scurrying; she must get into society. And reasoning from experience, she came to the conclusion that there were three things needful—pedigree, parsphernalia, and a god-mother. The first was easily acquired, the last more easily, but for the life of her she couldn't get the money that obtains the second. And so unless she inherits a fortune, she will die an old maid for all her pedigree and god-mother; but that is better than the ditch or the other place, though she doesn't know it.

THE average good Baptist reader will be somewhat surprised to learn that such beings as fashionable preachers are extant. We do not think there are any in these parts. A man who panders to the opinions of his hearers, however, is no whit better than the most finished society preacher. A policy man is a scoundrel, no matter whether he has committed an evil deed or not; and many men whom one hears spoken of as discreet or astute are policy men. The bunco steerer palms a satchel of sawdust upon a gullible would be fraud; the man who chokes down his own opinion and spouts out that of him whom he would please is merely an intellectual bunco-steerer: the difference, the one goes to the penitentiary, the other to fame and fortune perhaps, to a fair living generally, when he ought to have gone to the dogs.

There are fashionable churches, too. They would have heathen choristers, if such were needed to out-sing the choir on the next block; and any kind of a preacher will do, if he will approve of keeping the church in the fashion and at the same time keep himself quite proper. We really believe there is a preacher in New York who would do most anything in order to be proper. He is on record before the world as having forgotten that, for propriety's sake, he clandestinely married a notorious couple. His picture was in the papers not long ago. His hair parts in the middle, he affects bangs and cultivates the appearance of one who is more concerned for the creases in his pants than for the salvation of sinners. Poor man, his lot is not enviable, although his salary is princely. He is the shepherd of the very wealthy, and his business is to console their "bereaved relatives and friends."

ONE is fortunate if he reads several journals and is not reminded every week or two by one writer or another, over and over again, that "we are living in the last years of the nineteenth century"; and, by the way, it is somewhat suggestive that several well-known newspapers are giving space to disputants who are trying to determine when the new century begins, whether with the year 1900 or 1901. We have forgotten which our professor of astronomy incidentally told us, and we rather think anyway that it were better not to cross that bridge before we get to it. People always talking about the future are usually out of jobs. It is even boring to hear so much of other days, but one really cannot know too well what has been.

It is certainly interesting to note the variations of opinions incident to the points of view of those who express them. Men who would not tolerate the idea that we were having any but halcyon times before Nov. 6th, are beginning to admit that they might be improved on after all; others who pictured all sorts of evil, ranted of oppression and rights, are rather subdued now; the Northern papers have ceased for a time to shriek about negro lynchings; the English committee has not appeared, and we almost believe that the Wells woman and a great deal of that hot indignation which she incited in England and the North, was used for campaign thunder. There will also be less advertising of reviving industries, and the hard times people will not feel called on to proclaim the closing of every small factory that in the natural course of events is sold for debt.

The press could create a panic in a week, if the men of the press were all fiends. And, too, the press is fortunately divided against itself.

IF A writer have good health and income, it is likely that he will tell us that it is a rare privilege to breathe the atmosphere of these times, this heydey of enlightenment, this golden era of human achievement. And he will point to the floods of literature, the marvellous facilities for communication and transportation, and the myriads of latter-day conveniences that other generations never dreamed of. But alas, most of the writers seem to have small income, poor health, peevish wives and houseful of children. And so, while one man exults, a hundred are calling these times all sorts of bad names, viz., the age of "change," of "revolution," "unrest," "distrust," "over-production," "unfaith," "obscenity," "indecency," "corruption," and everything else dyspeptic. Some one said not so very along ago that if he were a resident of Ireland and if there were no snakes there, he would not import any just for the diversion of killing them. So now many of our troubles are hunted down in the future, for the privilege of making great ado over their solution. If people will stop charging all their personal weaknesses and afflictions to the times, and if some problem solver will devote themselves to more common place work, the old century will go out in pretty good shape and without the aid of pall-bearers.

IT IS gratifying to know that Davidson College students, under the direction of Dr. Currell, have organized a club for the study of current questions. There is always danger of college students persuading themselves that all their time can most profitably be devoted to text books; and although the colleges of this State are provided with libraries and reading-rooms, it is a fact that many college students never enter the latter, at least with serious purpose. There have been college seniors in this decade who never heard of Charles Stewart Parnell or Henry Grady; and they were not foot-ball or athletic men, either, as one might suppose.

Acquaintance with history, the sciences, the languages, is very desirable, but one who has not got the history of his own times, in his native and other lands, at his fingers' ends, is not educated. Certainly knowledge of the Past is not useful except in the light of the Present. The scientist or linguist who buries himself from the world, cannot make the impress upon his fellows that a well-rounded man, with less learning, will.

The people of every community will do well to organize such clubs, of course, with more modest, though none the less commendable, aims.

Close Communion.

BY REV. C. A. JENKENS, GOLDSBORO, N. C.

"The Lord's Supper."—1 Cor. 11: 20.

In the early days of Christianity, it would have sounded odd and ill to designate the Lord's Supper as either open or close. Such terms then would have had no meaning, and would have necessitated an explanation on the part of the person using them. We do not, therefore, find in the Scriptures any recognition of these phrases which have gained so great currency of late years. The reason is ready. All of the primitive churches were constructed on the one divine model given by our Lord, and hence they maintained a beautiful symmetry of purpose, thought, life, and doctrine. Christianity had not been rent by ambitious factions, heretical founders of churches had not arisen, and the peace of Christendom was undisturbed by contending communions. Those early Christians, then, received the same gospel, labored under the same church polity, believed the same doctrines, and administered the same ordinances. Hence, it follows that, with their creed succinctly stated in the inspired formula, "One Lord, one faith, one baptism," there could have been but one Lord's Supper. This is all that Baptists claim; this is the tremendous fact they have been striving to impress upon Popery and its Pedobaptist lineage through the dark and bloody centuries.

I. COMMUNION DETERMINED BY THE NATURE OF THE NEW TESTAMENT CHURCH.

The Baptists hold that their church polity is of divine origin, and that it is in close harmony with apostolic teaching and practice. In the light of this truth they do not object to the term close as applied either to their doctrines or their ordinances. The misunderstanding respecting the Lord's Supper has grown largely out of a misconception of the Lord's Church. Everything about the Church of Christ is close. The Church itself is close, being the most compact and complete body in the world. Each church is a perfect organization within itself; it needs, therefore, nothing outside, it lacks nothing inside. It has no organic connection with any other body, civil or ecclesiastical, nor even with any other church of the same faith and order. It may have relations with other bodies, but they are independent relations; thus a Baptist church forms no ties and sustains no connections that may not be readily dissolved without affecting in the least its integrity. That Minerva sprang full-armed from the brain of Jove, is a pleasing myth; but that the Church issued full empowered from the mind of Christ, is a gracious truth. One may speak with strict propriety of the Episcopal Church, the Methodist Church, the Presbyterian Church, the Catholic Church, or the Mormon Church; for such organizations have a centralized government, and are possessed of inherent powers, by virtue of which they meet in Convocation, Conference, Synod or Council for the purpose of legislating, enforcing discipline, and exerting authority over all the minor parts that contribute to the great whole; but such centralization of powers and rites is unknown among Baptists, and is, moreover, foreign, nay, antagonistic to the New Testament idea of a church. So, there is no such institution on earth as the Baptist Church. There are, however, many Baptist churches, having the same polity, officers, and functions—all alike, all equal, all complete. The wide difference between a Baptist and a Pedobaptist church may be best illustrated by means of an hypothesis. If, by any force of circumstances, say by persecution or civil legislative enactment, the Discipline and the Book of Common Prayer and the Confession of Faith, were suppressed, the bodies governed by these manuals would be forced to cry, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Wherefore it is evident, that Pedobaptism, with its life dependent on ecclesiastical machinery, would be reduced, whenever "the pitcher be broken at the fountain or the wheel broken at the cistern," to grief more bitter than the wailings of Cassandra. How different with a Baptist church! Should every page that uninspired men have written be blotted out, should every Baptist Association and Convention be abolished, the powers and functions of the individual church would in no way be essentially affected, while it would, withal, retain its divine characteristics of spiritual completeness and organic perfection.

In regard to the Lord's Supper, no relation can exist among Baptist churches other than that of courtesy. No church can demand anything of her sister churches, not even the communion. When one Baptist church invites to the Lord's Table the members of another of like faith, it is not because any inherent rights are involved on the part of the invited, but because such persons have proper qualifications for such a service, and an invitation extended them is in accord with the fitness of things.

As has been shown, from its very nature, the Church of Christ is close. So the kingdom of heaven, of which the Church is the organic exponent, the visible representation, and the concrete working force, is likewise close. It is well to remember that Messiah's reign was announced under restrictions and conditions. "Repent ye," said the Forerunner, "for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." All men were not received as members of this kingdom, and granted its privileges and ordinances; for John the Baptist forbade baptism to many, though they urged the plausible claim, "We have Abraham to our father." Nor did Jesus open a wider door when he entered upon his ministry; but, taking up the divine note as it died away on the lips of John, he placed repentance, as a condition, at the very door of the kingdom, saying, "Repent; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." In his subsequent teaching he never relaxed his demands, but on the contrary, he ever emphasized the great truth that his doctrines are searching and his kingdom is guarded and close. Notice the exclusive trend of his teaching in the following bold and authoritative utterances: "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." "He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber." "And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage; and the door was shut." "And there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination or maketh a lie: but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life."

The ministry, too, of the Gospel Church is close, for the New Testament knows nothing of the proud ecclesiastical dignitaries of medieval and modern times. Could one have made mention of Popes, Cardinals, Archbishops, Canons, Deans, and a number of other strange and pompous titles, in the presence of the Apostles, it might have been recorded of them as it was of others, "And they were all amazed, and were in doubt, saying one to another, What meaneth this?" There being but one rank in the ministry, these ambitious magnates would have to be reshaped to fit the sacred calling of apostolic days. Hence Baptists disown the work and office of the false usurper, as in dissonance with the New Testament precedent, and pray as the Psalmist sang, "His bishoprick let another take."

It is no less true that Bible baptism is close. John, the Harbinger, with characteristic ardor, refused the ordinance to all but those who brought forth fruits meet for repentance, at once excluding both infants and unconverted adults. Indeed, a mixed membership is incompatible with Scripture precept and example; for Jesus placed believers' baptism at the threshold of the Church, and did not begin his public ministry until he had himself submitted to the sacred rite. It is the belief of Baptists that persons who have not been immersed upon a credible profession of faith, no matter what excellencies of character they may possess, are living in disobedience to Christ's positive command; and having failed to receive the ordinance the ordinance that gives them membership in the Lord's Church as he established it, they have debarred themselves from the Lord's Table where he placed it.

So scriptural communion is close, and in just the same sense in which the kingdom of heaven, or the Church, or the Ministry, or Baptism is close. The Lord's Supper is no closer than the Lord's Baptism and the Lord's Church; and if for any one feature of their faith Baptists are to be termed close, their title should arise not from their views of communion or baptism, but from their conception of a Gospel Church; so that a better designation than Close Communists or Close Baptists would be Close Churchists. What if a word has to be coined to effect the change?

II. THE LORD'S SUPPER A CHURCH ORDINANCE.

It cannot be supposed that Christ committed his memorial ordinance to the world to use or misuse, to hold or reject at its capricious will. It was to be observed "till he come;" but could the unorganized multitude be trusted to take charge of the rite, when its very significance condemns evil, and renders a proper observance impossible? What interest do the public feel in either the Lord or his Supper? A boy may toss in sportive glee a toy ship upon an angry ocean to be borne, he knows not where, by fierce storms and relentless tides; to be shattered perchance on rocks, or drifted on distant shores, or engulfed in unfathomed waters: but not so of Christ and his Table. He entrusted the Supper to his faithful Church to be a memorial and "an ordinance forever." The Lord's Supper, accordingly, was not designed for private families, or sick beds, or Sunday schools, or temperance lodges, or military companies, or even Christian associations and conventions, but for churches, and churches only.

SCRIPTURAL POLITY.

When Christ entered upon his public ministry, he began at once the work of organizing. He gathered around him a few earnest disciples as the nucleus of the Church he came to establish. Of this incipient Church he became the loving Pastor. The Good Shepherd revealed to his faithful charge slowly and by degrees, the great truths of his kingdom, emphasizing repentance, regeneration, baptism, faith, election, perseverance of saints, and his own atonement. The very fact that they were separated from the rest of their fellow men under peculiar conditions, submitting to him for instruction and discipline, and that they were withal inspired to preach the Gospel and empowered at times to work miracles, constituted them an organization of the most powerful and elevated character. The Great Founder finally gave name to his organization, asserting at the same time its strength and perpetuity, saying, "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Thus he prepared the way for the declaration that he had now formed the Church, to which as a Church he gave specific instructions, saying, "And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church; but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican." Thus the divine model having been gradually developed, he at last completed it by the institution of the Supper; so that at his death, the Church basking in the gracious promise of the Holy Spirit, lacked no essential feature. It is worthy of remark that our Lord having instituted but two ordinances, began his ministry with one and closed it with the other.

The Lord's Supper having originated in the Church, was ever afterwards observed only as a Church ordinance in apostolic times. Let the following Scriptures witness. "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ? For we being many are one bread, and one body: for we are all partakers of that one bread." 1 Cor. 10: 16, 17. This passage clearly points to a joint participation in the Lord's Supper of "the many," who in communion with their Lord, were one "bread," or better "loaf," that is, "one body." Again, Paul discussing the proper observance of the Supper, uses this significant expression: "When ye come together in the church." 1 Cor. 11: 18. The words "in church," there being no article in the Greek, are equivalent to our well known phrase "in a church capacity," and demonstrate that the Corinthians celebrated the Supper as a church. The apostle adds in this connection, "What! have ye not houses to eat and drink in? or despise ye the church of God, and shame them that have not?" The Apostle having just spoken of their coming together "into one place," and now intimating that they had houses for their ordinary meals, shows that it never occurred to him that the eucharist could be celebrated at their homes or without the gathering of the church. In accord with the foregoing is the language of the thirty third verse: "When ye come together to eat, tarry one for another." Evidently the holy ordinance was not observed as a private affair, but by the church in regular assembly. Wherever else we find allusion to the celebration of the eucharist in the Scriptures, there is express mention of a congregation of believers. This fact finds a striking illustration in the action of the disciples just after the great ingathering of Pentecost, when the Lord was adding daily to the church, those who were being saved. "And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers. And all that believed were together, and had all things common." Acts 2: 42, 44. So it was at Troas. "And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them." Acts 20: 7. It is reasonable to believe that the disciples at Troas had been formed into a regular Gospel Church; otherwise there would seem to be a great oversight on the part of the apostle.

All these instances clearly teach that the Lord's Supper is confined to the local church, and hence is necessarily close. There is not an instance of open communion in the Bible. Such a thing would, indeed, have been impossible in the early days of Christianity, inasmuch as all the churches were of the same faith and order, and a person qualified for communion in one was qualified for communion in all. Had there been no departure on the part of Pedobaptist bodies from the Lord's baptism, there would have been no question respecting the Lord's Supper.

The practice of Baptist churches is singularly free and generous. They welcome to the Lord's Table all that have met the scriptural requirements. Could they go farther without usurping authority not delegated to men, and without open rebellion against the great Head of the Church? All the members are considered to have inalienable rights and equal privileges; so that at the Lord's Table there is no distinction between the veriest babes in Christ and the most venerable deacon that serves. The communion is as broad as the church. How different in Pedobaptist churches, whose custom offers the elements to many who are not members and withholds them from many who are! Thus infants, although by the Episcopal Prayer Book declared to be "regenerate, and grafted into the body of Christ's Church," are excluded from Christ's Table. What a palpable contradiction! This is a species of communion quite too close for Baptists, who "have no such custom, neither the churches of God."

III. BAPTISM PREREQUISITE TO THE LORD'S SUPPER.

Of course we mean by baptism the immersion of a believer in water. Nothing else will answer. Sprinkling and pouring are not modes of baptism. Baptism means immersion; sprinkling and pouring are not modes of immersion. To speak of a person's being baptized by sprinkling or pouring is as illogical as to speak of a horse's trotting by pacing, a bird's flying by hopping, or a man's walking by running.

1. The relation of the two ordinances. Each rite has a meaning of its own, but

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

THE Convention meets next week. Let us make it historical for great achievement and great attendance. Help swell the throng.

THERE are a few days left. State Missions are needy. Help now is doubly helpful. If you are able to give, do not delay. The cause is worthy and the time is short.

THE Corresponding Secretary requests that special prayer for the Foreign Mission work be made Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 1st and 2d. Swell the volume, brother, by sending up an earnest petition at that time.

LOW PRICES threaten to keep some of the brethren away from the Charlotte meeting; but we hope they will be enabled to come. It would be a source of decided forward movement if every Baptist pastor in the State could be there. Money spent in sending a representative to the Convention is not idly spent.

SANCTIFICATIONISTS have a warning here. A preacher in a neighboring State confessed in a pulpit not so very long ago, a brother informs us, that he had been preaching his sanctified sinlessly for ten years and all the while he was getting further and further from God and nearer to hell: For he was sinning, he says truly, every time he said he was sinless. It really is a fact, even though many seem to ignore it, that contradicting God's Word is sin.

ONE who can be silent while another is misrepresenting him, is a hero, if the misrepresenting one be a man in whom worthy people have confidence; but if the liar is notorious, then it is rather creditable than otherwise to be misrepresented by him. It certainly is not discreditable, if it be true that the defamer had been very lavish in his praises until he perceived that flattery was useless. Let no one be deceived: When flattery is returned void it will come again, to defame, not to praise.

A PASTOR remarked the other day that in his experience he had learned that there were few places in which it was harder to conduct a revival than in a church that had lately been subjected to "clap trap" excitement and high-pressure methods. The reason is plain: The Holy Spirit has been literally estranged from the church and the hearts of the people are following the eloquence of a man instead. It is a truth that high-pressure meetings must be followed by genuine revivals, if the church is to be kept alive.

HERE are some figures from the Baptist Almanac for 1895 that are worth knowing: There were in 1893 in the thirty-five Baptist colleges and universities in the United States 9,088 students, 767 of whom were preparing for the ministry. There are seven Baptist theological seminaries in this country, with property worth $3,401,618. Our Louisville Seminary leads in attendance and, in our opinion, in orthodoxy, scholarship and influence. There are more than 38,122 Baptist churches, 25,354 Baptist preachers, and 3,496,983 Baptist communicants in this country. The Baptists in the United States own 27 charitable institutions, with property valued at $1,360,021. More than half of these are in the South. There were 122 Baptist periodicals in the South last year, fifty-nine are issued weekly, forty-one monthly, the balance semi-monthly, quarterly and annually. There are sermons in such figures.

WE have not words to commend Bro. Jenkens' article in this paper as strongly as we would. It covers the ground entirely and invincibly, aggressively and defensively.

It is especially commended to the editors of non-Baptist papers, and more especially to those who have thought that "close communion" is the weak point in the Baptist armor. So far from being weak, it is as whole and strong as the Word of God itself.

There are many who are weak on this subject. There are many who say it is their only objection to Baptist doctrine. To these Bro. Jenkens' work will be a source of strength and knowledge. Close communion is a testimony to Christ instead of a drawback, as some seem to think.

Every Baptist pastor should keep this article where he can lay his hands on it, for there will be times when he needs a clear, concise and complete treatise on this subject. It is long, but books have been written on the same subject and not contained more sense.

We thank Bro. Jenkens for this service to the denomination.

A BRIEF RETROSPECT OF THE 1894 ASSOCIATIONS.

Since the first of August more than forty Associations have met; and after summing the results of the year, discussing such matters as pertained to the interests of the churches and laying plans for the coming year, the brethren are now at their respective posts, many, no doubt, taking steps for the work of a new year. There is no end to work; and in work lies our strength and hope.

In the beginning of this year's work we had much to be thankful for and to encourage us. We began with a debt of something like $5 000, but within ninety days after our Convention adjourned this amount was raised and our missionaries paid off, no less to the joy of heroic men and women who contributed and prayed than to the needy missionaries and their families who with gratitude received it.

Out of difficulties and sacrifices come denominational strength and unity, just as struggles produce the best and most substantial manhood in the physical and intellectual aspects of life.

The attendance at our meetings was never so large as during the present year. The bodies were not composed of curious or indifferent people, but brethren who were there for a purpose, and who were intensely interested in the work before them.

A large number of new houses of worship have been built during the year. The better construction of these houses, the superior comfort and conveniences they afford, to the churches built years ago, is evidence of great progress in this direction. And then, too, the sisters have shown their appreciation of this forward step by in many cases securing by their own efforts a nice carpet, pulpit furniture, clear lamps, from which comes a bright light, and many other things which add to the pleasure and general effect of worship.

The spirit of the brethren has been proverbially good. A real desire to do some work has to a great extent, at least, dissipated whatever differences may have heretofore existed as to how things ought to be done. It is very evident that the brethren have decided that discussion of methods has lost its right of way in North Carolina. "Hard times" attended as "delegate at large." He was there when we met and remained through the session, and yet he did not play as large a part as many believed and feared he would. The minutes as published will show larger pledges for next year's work than any year previous, and the delegates came up with more money than we remember to have seen before, and few, if any, of the churches have failed to meet their last year pledges.

The Board of Education has its sentinels planted all over the State. So Dr. Mitchell always has some one present whose work in the community is a strong plea for the liberal support of this work. And, too, the requiring by the Board of young ministers to pay back to the Board the money expended, has given it stronger hold on the denomination than it had heretofore.

We are persuaded that no such a campaign has ever been made before the denomination on general education as the one just closed. Its effects are not only seen and felt now, but will be for years to come. The articles, "How Far Should a State Undertake to Educate?" by Dr. Taylor, have been read and carefully studied by thousands and thousands of people in North Carolina. Dr. Durham has discussed this subject in its practical bearings and its effects as it specially concerned us as a denomination, in such a bold and masterly manner that it seemed that there was nothing to be said on the other side.

The cause of temperance has had a prominent place in the discussions this year. The discussions themselves have been temperate, and this has been good for the cause. Harsh and extreme methods of dealing with this subject are not the best, either to reclaim the unfortunate or to deter those who have not yet fallen victims to the dread calamity.

The Orphanage is the "pet" of all our denominational work. When it has had a representative present he has been given a good time to present his work and listened to with much interest, and when no representative can be present there are always brethren who delight to do this work.

Woman's missionary meetings have been held at many of the Associations. The faithful and persistent efforts of Sister Fannie Heck can now be seen in many of our best country churches, in the organizations which have been formed and the work now being done, and with proper interest on the part of our pastors these organizations will continue to grow in strength and results to our mission work in all parts of the State.

The RECORDER has had its full share of attention and support from the brethren. The large number of new subscribers we have received, and the many tokens of interest, sympathy and co-operation, indicated in many ways by the brethren, puts us under renewed obligations to start afresh, and to redouble our efforts to make a paper which shall not only reach the highest point of usefulness as a help in denominational work, but which shall be a source of pride and joy to every Baptist in North Carolina.

J. C. C.

THE secretaries of the Convention have secured the usual Convention rates from the Associated Railways of Virginia and the Carolinas—which include the Atlantic Coast Line, Piedmont Air Line (Southern Railway) and Seaboard Air Line, from Atlantic and North Carolina railroad and the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley.

The General Passenger Agent of the Norfolk and Southern writes that returning delegates will be required to pay only one half the usual fare from Norfolk upon presentation of certificate signed by Convention Secretary.

Inquire at your depot for reduced rates to the Convention, get you a ticket, and be there.

THE Adventists are reported to be leaving Mecklenburg county, where they created more trouble than usual. That's a good thing about Adventists in North Carolina, they never stay long in one place; but they do make a noise of it while they do stay. It is not unnatural that people who have such varying creeds, and who change so artfully from one tenet to another, when they get pushed, have also to change their base of operations every now and then.

We have been told that the President of the North Carolina Baptist Convention got an Adventist preacher "cornered" recently, and never let him go until his entire stock and store of false doctrine was shown up. It is not so difficult to show up one of the preachers, but it is a task to prevent them from making followers by sending out literature that begins with truth and ends with truth, but is cunningly false all in between.

BRO. CROCKER writes interestingly of the "Corean War" in this number. It is comforting to know that our brethren in China and Japan are in no unusual danger. May God continue to shield them. In this connection it is interesting to note that Japan has refused to allow the United States to arbitrate the trouble with China, though the latter is willing.——Prof. Hobgood's notes are very interesting, even if he does betray a slight touch of the co education fever. His statement that students receiving aid from the Board of Education are now required to give their notes promising to pay, whereas they used to receive help free, is very gratifying. It means that the fund for the education of ministers will be gradually increased and that those whom the Board helps will have opportunity to discharge their obligation by aiding others to serve the Lord.——Bro. Stradley is always fortunate in his subjects; and he never writes unworthily. The RECORDER is indeed proud of the testimony of one who grew up with it, and whose useful life bears the impress of its influence. We thank Bro. Stradley from the bottom of our heart.

THE cuckoo and tomtit of the News and Observer, who usually chirp in tolerable concord the praises of a wealthy tobacco manufacturer, undertook to make melody to the Baptists last Sunday, but with pitiable success.

The cuckoo fawned upon the Baptists, honoring them for interfering with civil affairs and throwing off establishment in former times. The tomtit, tuned to the highest note of pusillanimity, also fawned upon Baptists of all days—as he fawns upon everything,—but in his impudent big-headedness saw great danger in Baptists interfering with civil affairs in this day. Baptists in North Carolina are doing just what Baptists did in Washington's and Jefferson's day and what Baptists have lately done in New York and Indiana in this day.

Baptists can stand no little letting alone; but they will not tolerate idiotic, impudent, hair-brain, brazen, cracked-voice, cuckoo-coo-tomtit chirping. But as our esteemed aggregation of rara aves, constantly on exhibition under the auspices of the News and Observer, the cuckoo, the dodo, the tomtit, the canary and others, distinguished themselves for misrepresentation and making votes for the opposition in the late campaign, we apprehend that their plaintive chirps will have small effect.

Raleigh is a hardy and a long-suffering town.

IN REGARD to the Young People's movement, the RECORDER stands squarely by the reports of the last North Carolina, and the last Southern Baptist Convention. The action of these bodies will be printed next week.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....The Convention. Help swell the throng.

...."Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord."

....Rev. Josiah Elliott recently received seven members at Hertford.

....Rev. J. E. Hutson, evangelist, is holding meetings at Oxford.

....Pastors in need of assistance should consider our four months fifty cents offer.

....Rev. John W. Briggs should now be addressed at Mars Hill instead of Bald Creek.

....The twelfth Baptist Congress has gathered itself together and adjourned—that's all.

....Have you made an effort on our special offer? If not, you yet have a chance to grasp a good thing.

....Send the names of the young men in your neighborhood to Prest. Taylor, Wake Forest. He may interest them.

....We regret to learn that Bro. J. N. Blair of Reidsville, one of Pastor Adams' mainstays, died suddenly last week.

....State Missions, about $1,500 needed. Send straightway whatever you can to Treas. J. D. Boushall, Raleigh, N. C.

....Latest: A mother's meeting, feeder to the Sunday school. Well, 'er, yes. It may be inspected at Baltimore. Next.

....Rev. G. H. Church is in a meeting at Wilkesboro. The Lord blessed his work last week with Bro. Jones at Salisbury.

....The sister who said that Rev. H. W. Battle was the best of all the speakers at the late Virginia Convention, has taste and judgment.

....The Ledger says the Windsor Baptist church, Rev. J. B. Boone pastor, is having a new baptistery built and making other improvements.

....Rev. B. W. Spilman, formerly of Weldon, is now located at Smyrna, the pastorate in which he labored so successfully before going to the Seminary.

....Send your own or your pastor's name to Brethren Pritchard and Pruitt, Charlotte, N. C.,—and go or be represented at the Convention. Help swell the throng.

....The recent committee meeting with regard to purchasing Rutherford College adjourned without purchasing. Dr. Abernethy continues to run the institution.

....Now is a good time to be getting up a club to gladden our heart at the Convention. Ask your people to renew now. And a new subscriber is never untimely.

... Rev. O. T. Edwards of Mt. Vernon Springs sent us last week one of the best clubs of subscribers we have had in several weeks. His field is moving onward.

....There have been more than twenty-five professions of religion in the meeting now being conducted by Pastor Jenkens at Goldsboro; crowds tremendous, and interest increasing.

....The addresses of the following delegates have been lost, and Dr. Pritchard will be very glad to get them: James Smith, Dr. J. K. Moore (or Narce), Edward L. Webster, J. G. Pulliam.

....An able contemporary writing 'How to Spend Thanksgiving" treats the topic under two main hands—"spend it joyously and spend it helpfully." Do the latter and God will do the rest.

....Send one dollar, two dollars, five dollars, or a hundred dollars, for State Missions to-day, and help us to end a year of blessed achievement blessedly out of debt. The time is short—but you have time yet.

....The Monroe brethren and sisters have purchased a handsome parsonage well situated, and Bro. Moore is getting happier than ever. Thus the work that Bro. Adams began is being finished by Bro. Moore.

....We are glad to know that our Durham Second Church brethren and sisters have unanimously voted not to accept Pastor Dowell's resignation, and that he will probably tarry with them yet a while.

....The RECORDER's special offer will not be urged much longer. One brother has sent us twenty new subscribers since it was announced. Many have sent more than ten. We hope to hear from many more this month.

....Did you know there were more than three thousand Baptists in China, that men and women of the soil of North Carolina have been and are being used very largely in this good cause, and that the little leaven is perceptibly leavening the whole lump?

....Brother Stringfield is getting on well with the Female University. They are calling it "Woman's College" now, however. But no matter about the name; it's bound to be, and you will do yourself credit and the world a service to hasten its establishment.

....Rev. Jno. A. Wray has been engaged in a good revival with his Winston Broad Street people. The Sentinel speaks handsomely of his sermons, says large crowds are attending, and there is prospect of a vigorous awakening. The meeting began late last week.

....Rev. Livingston Johnson of Rockingham sends us some subscribers, and ends his letter with the following, which is the more valued coming as it does from a pastor of Bro. Johnson's experience: "I don't think a pastor can do any work that pays him better than to get the RECORDER in the homes of his people. You are certainly giving us a most excellent paper. The RECORDER deserves the lasting gratitude of all friends of Christian education for the manly fight it has made, single handed and alone, against State aid."

....This is the season when the newspapers expect to make collections enough to wipe away old scores and have a little over to begin the long up hill year with. See if you can't send us your renewal or a part of it this week.

....North Carolina has more Baptist laborers in foreign fields than any other Southern State. The RECORDER sends out quite a heap of mail each week to North Carolina and other missionary subscribers in China, Africa, Mexico and Italy.

....We have several hundred extra copies of this number of the RECORDER which we will sell at five cents each or fifty cents a dozen. Bro. Jenkens' article will do wonderful good if widely distributed; and it will probably be printed in more permanent form.

....Dr. H. T. Aydlett, who graduated at Wake Forest in 1892, and afterwards received the doctor's degree at the University of Virginia, has settled at South Mills to pursue his life's work. We know Bro. Aydlett well, and we hope for him abundant success.

....Rev. J. L. Shinn has been called to his old field of work—Hopewell, Mt. Home and Pleasant Hill, and also to Zion, all in Burke county and the Catawba Association. We thank Bro. Shinn for the good example he sets in many ways, the latest being a club of new subscribers.

....Many "Bible Bands" have lately been formed among Wake Forest students. In this connection it is pertinent to note that Prest. Taylor delivered the first of a series of lectures bearing on the Life of Christ last Sunday week. Drs. Royall and Mitchell will lecture on kindred subjects.

....We will esteem it a great favor if our subscribers whose subscriptions have expired will renew immediately. It is very expensive to send out formal notices, and prompt renewal, in whole or in part, right now, will save us just that much. Do not put it off. SEE THE LABEL ON THIS PAPER, then act forthwith.

....The list of preachers in the forthcoming Baptist Almanac will be the most complete ever sent out in North Carolina. It will have the name and address of every good pastor. Why? The old list and the Year Book list has been revised by the RECORDER list; and that contains all the good ones up to date.

....There ought to be a united effort on the part of all Christians to restrict and destroy liquor selling in North Carolina. If every Christian will talk temperance and talk it loud and long, such a sentiment will be created that no man will dare stand in its path. Write to your legislator, and get others to write.

....Rev. J. W. Powell, who has done good work at Mildred and elsewhere, writes: "I have turned over my work to Rev. W. V. Savage—a good, active man." Brother Powell will help Bro. Howell at several mission points for awhile, during which he will reside at Rocky Mount. We hope the Lord will direct some church to call Bro. Powell.

....Rev. A. M. Simms informs us that Rev. M. A. Adams' work with him at the Tabernacle was highly satisfactory, and that he could expect none but good results from Bro. Adams' ministry anywhere. Seven have been added to the church, the entire membership is awake, and there is every prospect of vigorous growth as the months pass.

....We have been of the opinion all along that Baptist boys or girls' brigades—i. e. youngsters in uniform—and getting religion by marching and parading with wooden guns, is a crazy notion of some new methodists; but we cannot bring ourselves up to Miss W. C. T. U. woman speaking Willard's fear that the brigades are about to make a warlike race of us.

...."Please call special attention to the request for united prayer for Foreign Mission work Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 1st and 2d. Our brethren on the fields need and should have our special prayer. The demand on us for funds is very great, and we are deeply in debt. Let us look to God." Bro. Willingham writes us thus earnestly. Will not the reader offer a prayer for the cause.

....Our W. N. C. contemporary, which says that North Carolina has had almost every scourge imaginable, and which is now face to face with a scourge of women politicians, is commended to Colorado for miserable company. In that State the Superintendent of Public Instruction and three legislators are women. But Colorado still lives; it has every kind of goose, biped or quadruped, except mongoose.

....Our allusion last week to the wedding of Brother and Sister Webb was understood well enough by those for whom it was intended. For the general good, however, it may be well to say that the event was hastened by the celebration of a golden wedding, at which the bride-to-be, with many others, were made very sick by poisoning. The unfortunate accident ending thus happily, suggested "All's well that ends well."

....Dr. J. B. Gambrell, the president of Mercer University, in which Georgia Baptists take especial pride, has the following to say in the Index of Dr. Skinner's book: "I have received from the author, Dr. Thos. E. Skinner, "Sermons, Addresses and Reminiscences," a book of 473 large pages, well printed and well bound. It is a $1.50 book, but the author places the price at a dollar. Evidently the intention is to do good and not make money. The whole book is juicy, soulful and helpful toward a wider range of things and a better spiritual life. It is a good Sunday book. The sermons deal with matters of life and death, and the addresses touch on many practical topics, while the reminiscences, especially of the author's conversion and spiritual life, are rich with a heavenly flavor. Dr. Skinner once lived in Georgia, and has many friends in this State."

....Some one ought to whisper it softly to the News and Observer birds that one of the original objects of Baptist Associations and Conventions is to petition and protest for or against public measures. Baptists have been interfering with civil affairs and uplifting the world ever since there were Baptists. O, say, neighbor, telephone to Durham and ask for the notes to your next song.

....For the life of us we cannot see how the vote in one precinct, no matter where, can be justly deed to oppose a question on which the entire State voted. With the legislators elect it is not how the Wake Forest precinct voted, but how did the people, whom the representatives represent, vote. But a drowning man will catch at a straw; and State aid is welcome to as many straws of this nature as it can find.

....We stated sometime since that we would publish a sermon from Dr. John Robinson of Scotland on Infant Baptism, originally printed in the Western Recorder. Since we made the announcement our contemporary has announced that, owing to the unusual demand, it will print a special edition of the sermon early in December. In view of this it would not be just right for us to print the sermon. We advise all who desire an able sermon on the subject to send five cents to the Western Recorder, Louisville, Ky., stating that the infant sprinkling edition is desired.

....We are grateful to Sister A. T. Turner of Goldsboro for the following note of Nov 22 1: "For ten days a meeting of great power has been in progress at the First Baptist church in Goldsboro. Our pastor, Rev. C. A. Jenkens, has had no help, but his sermons, so full of tenderness, persuasion and power, have touched the hearts of the hardest sinners in our town. From the first the house has been filled at every service, and the meetings increase in interest daily. A feeling of heartfelt sympathy, love and prayer prevails among the members. May God long grant us the preaching of such a man as we now have."

....Brethren Wilson and Prince, two sturdy sons of Wake Forest, are meeting fine success in their school enterprise at Scotland Neck. The attendance is large and growing, and general interest in education in that locality is increasing. Prof. Poteat of Wake Forest delivered a characteristic lecture at their academy the 23d, on "The School as a Manufactory of Power," and the Democrat speaks very highly of the effort. Bro Poteat also lectured at Wilson in the Graded School the 33d, on the subject, "The Cell, and What it Can Do." There is no better way to keep Wake Forest before the people and at the same time stimulate educational growth than by lectures like these all about the State.

Praise the Lord.

I have good news for all the Baptists of North Carolina. Notwithstanding the scarcity of money, the low price of cotton, the political excitement and elections, and the many other difficulties in the way, we will go to the Convention in Charlotte this year with each department of our work in better shape than it has been in during the past four years. The Lord hath done it. In Foreign and Home Missions, the contributions [illegible] year. In Sunday schools and the Supply Store, it has been the best year we have ever had.

In State Missions the total contributions last year were $12,535 33; and in State Missions this year, as you will see from the Treasurer's report in this paper, $13,150 38 have been received. This includes only the amounts received up to Saturday evening, Nov. 24th—the time the Treasurer's report had to go to the printers. There are yet six days in which he will receive amounts that will go into his report to the Convention this year.

I think I see where about $1,000 more will come from during these six days. But we will then need about $1,000 more to take us to the Convention free of debt. The Board projected its work this year on the basis of of $12 000, and the debt of $3 000; and the full amount can be secured, if all will help during the next few days. I have confidence in the brethren and sisters, the churches and mission societies, to hope that when the report of the Board is read to the Convention on Dec. 7th, every dollar will be paid. If you can't have time to send the money to the Treasurer, bring it to the Convention, and let me know the first day of the session the amount you bring.

We will, I think, have the largest and best Convention that we have had in ten years. Charlotte is one of the best little cities in the land. Come up, brethren and sisters, praising the Lord, and we shall be blessed, and be made a blessing to others.

The Corean War.

The newspapers have had much to say about the "black plague" in China. This was confined to two or three port cities in South China, and has not at all affected the northern portions of the country. It is so easy for one in America to forget that China is a big country, and because there is danger in one part, it does not necessarily follow that every other part will suffer. China is not like America, which, if one part is suffering, all other parts feel it more or less; but you might completely destroy one part of China, and the other parts would scarcely feel it. The mass of the people about us here in the northern part of interior China do not even know there ever was such a thing as "black plague." Some friends have written us expressing concern for our safety. We feel grateful that they should so think of us, but we wish to assure them that we are not in, and have not suffered, any danger of an extraordinary character. There is, of course, always danger from a human standpoint in living among a people without a high moral standard, without conscience or a sense of duty or obligation to a Supreme Ruler, who hate anything new or foreign, and are peculiarly liable to get into a frenzied mob. But we have about us the strong hand of the "Great Powers" of the earth, including the protection of the United States, and besides we have the higher and greater Power, the "King of kings and Lord of lords." So we beg our friends not to feel uneasy about us, but to trust the Word of God and move on in the work of trying to save these lost people.

But I started out to say something of the war that China is having with Japan, and how it looks over here. No doubt you all are in fuller possession of the knowledge of how things are going than we are, though we are much nearer the seat of war.

Some Coreans rebelled. China wanted to put down the rebellion and make Corea a Chinese province, or at least retain control thereof. Corea is so near to the Japanese coast that Japan thought the action of China a menace to her independence and peace, and so, as Japan had already an ancient grudge against China, and as she felt the need of trying the powers of her modern advancement, she decided to interfere. Troops have been hurrying into Corea from China and Japan. The Temperance Union, a paper published in Shanghai, says: "Those who have lately been to Corea are full of admiration for the discipline and excellent order amongst the Japanese soldiers there. * * * Everywhere good order, and there is no need of any protection for the Europeans in the country by foreign gunboats; they are perfectly safe under the Japanese rule." "The Chinese seem to have forgotten the sayings of their master, Confucius: To lead an uninstructed people to war is to throw them away."

The paper also says editorially: "Yes, China is a civilized country—and cuts off the heads of the prisoners of war! Yes, China is a rich country—and goes to foreign countries for a loan! They are a brave people, too—massacre poor, harmless missionaries when all alone and unable to defend themselves! A gallant nation—whose soldiers molest defenceless women! * * * * China does not want people of advanced ideas: she wants old fossils who know the dry as dust classics and profess supreme contempt for everything else, including the Japanese whom the Emperor insults in his reply to the Japanese declaration of war, comparing them to wild beasts as he directs his viceroys and generals to 'root them out of their lairs.' In his heart one who lives in China cannot help echoing this sentiment, for he sees that the whole country is one mass of chronic, rotten, festering, moral sores that raise a stench to the ends of the world. The missionary is here, because of the existence of this ruin, and because he knows there is a 'balm in Gilead and a physician there.'"

A letter from Newchang, dated Aug. 19th, says: "News reached us here about four days ago, that a party of Chinese soldiers, in passing through Liaoyang, attacked Mr. Wylie of the South Presbyterian Mission, in the street of that town, and had maltreated him in such a dreadful manner, that he was left for dead. * * * Intelligence reached us yesterday that the unfortunate gentleman had succumbed to his injuries. Although proclamations are posted up everywhere, warning the Chinese not to molest foreigners, and that the war was only against the Japanese, yet the ignorant populace, further inland, are unable to distinguish between Japanese and other foreigners."

Here in Shantung Province, North China, about four hundred miles from Pekin, about three hundred and fifty miles from Chefoo, we are not being disturbed in the least, but seem to have more quiet than ever. Our affairs have settled down peacefully here where there has been some opposition to our living here, and we have quiet possession. Some soldiers have passed through, but have not molested us at all. It is in rumored that the Japanese contemplate an attack on Pekin.

We do not know the outcome of this war, and cannot say whether any trouble will come to us or not. We are not at all alarmed, but go quietly on with our work. We have the assurance from the Chinese government of protection. This great nation needs the gospel more than the people at home ever realize. Will not the churches take up men approved by God and the church and send them forth to preach the everlasting gospel to these people, who are "without hope" and "without God in the world."

Truly, W. E. CROCKER.

Does This Intimate Anything?

I have just received in an official envelope the Governor's Thanksgiving Proclamation with the State seal thereon. I don't know what church Gov. Carr belongs to, but I for one want to say to him that he has no more right to advise me of my religious duty than has the humblest individual of North Carolina, and I hereby repudiate his action. He does not address me as a citizen, but as the "Pastor Baptist Church." He has exhibited neither statesmanship nor religion in this act, and seems to have been taking some lessons from the pope of Rome. [There are two personalities I never dignify with a capital letter: they are the pope and the devil.] The people of North Carolina did not elect Gov. Carr to advise them concerning religion. He has the right to issue a proclamation of thanksgiving, but he goes beyond that right when he sends it to pastors under the seal of the great State of North Carolina and in an official envelope.

The money spent for the orphans and disabled soldiers would have done more good than in printing and sending out such proclamations as this.

A VISIT TO THE TAR RIVER ASSOCIATION,

in its recent session, confirmed the opinion formed some years ago, that this is the most liberal and progressive body of Baptists in North Carolina. You will find nowhere more successful pastors or more devoted laymen than you will see at every session of this Association.

The speaking and preaching were of a high order, and would have done credit to the State Convention, or for that matter to the Southern Baptist Convention.

Bro. N. L. Shaw presided with ease, and business was dispatched with rapidity.

The raising of a special fund known as the "Hufham Associational Fund" was a graceful tribute to the man whose abundant labors and wise counsels were such important factors in bringing the Association up to its present state of efficiency.

THE SCOTLAND NECK CHURCH

with which the Association met is very nearly one's ideal of a church. Dr. Hufham there, as well as in other parts of the Association, built wisely. He realized the need of a body of trained soldiers—an imperial guard—on whom he might rely in every emergency. Such he had in Biggs, Hilliard, the McDowells, the Joseys, the Lawrences, the Shieldses, father and son, and others. It was fitting that he should be succeeded in the pastorate of this church by Bro. Vann. It was rather pleasant to observe that during the entire session no one called him by that title, which the S. C. College tried last summer to fasten on him. Some men are belittled by titles, and the world prefers to call them "Mister," or to drop even this. Solid comfort this for the great army of the untitled.

COR. SEC. DURHAM

was present and spoke well. What a voice is his! Great volume, penetrating power, and magnetism are its qualities. I have heard few voices its equal and none superior. I heard him preach last year in the grove at the King's Mountain Association, when all the atmospheric conditions were favorable for transmitting sound, and form a calculation which I made at the time. I am sure that twenty thousand people could have heard him distinctly. May I say that he appears at his best in speaking, and that any estimate of him based upon his writings would be manifestly wide of the true one? In these he sometimes appears harsh and censorious (but really he is not), and, without intending to do do, occasionally gives offence to his brethren. That was a high compliment paid him by President Winston after he had heard him speak at Fair Bluff two years ago—that he had in him the elements of the martyr.

NEW POLICY OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

meets the hearty approval of the Baptists of North Carolina, and should be more generally known. It is to require of the ministerial students that at the close of every session they give their notes payable in five years without interest, for the sum expended for their board, washing, and room rent. It is reported that the young ministers themselves are pleased with this plan, and I am sure that money will be more freely given to create this "Ministerial Loan Fund." In passing, let me say that I know no men anywhere more conservative, more painstaking than those who compose this Board of Education. They freely give their time to the great interests committed to them by the Convention, and deserve the hearty thanks of the denomination. They are ministers, teachers, lawyers, merchants, farmers, and the Corresponding Secretary is a man in whose judgment everybody has confidence.

THE FLAT RIVER ASSOCIATION

is not only not keeping pace with the other Associations of the State in the matter of contributions to the objects of the Convention, but is really retrograding; for during the last year we contributed not one-half of the sum contributed four years ago. This state of things can be accounted for on several grounds, but is due mainly to this, that for five years we have discontinued the practice of taking pledges at the sessions of the Association, supposing that to be unnecessary because of the superior organization of our churches and the efficiency of our ministry. But at our last session there was a return to the former practice, and we hope for better results.

CO-EDUCATION AT FURMAN UNIVERSITY, S. C.

"Bro. G. W. Gardner has been after the South Carolina co education, new age brethren with a good sharp stick, and they are all stirred up. Make 'em ashamed of themselves, brother."

This quotation is from the RECORDER of a recent issue. Let these be read in connection with the following which appeared in the Baptist Courier of South Carolina, on Oct. 4. 1894, from the pen of Dr. Charles Manly, the wise and judicious President of Furman University, who explains clearly the purposes of the authorities of the Institution in opening its doors to young women. The plan at Furman is substantially the plan which the present writer in the columns of the RECORDER last May advocated for Wake Forest. The plan outlined in that article for opening the doors of Wake Forest to young women desiring more extensive education than is possible to them in any Female College in North Carolina, or in all the South, met with a more favorable reception from the Baptist public of North Carolina and from the Trustees and Faculty of the College than I had expected.

But read what Dr. Manly says of co education at Furman University, bearing in mind that there is but one Board of Trustees for Furman University and the Greenville Female College, which latter is the property of the Convention in the sense in which the former is. It cannot reasonably be supposed that the Trustees feared that the opening of the doors of the Male College to young women under those limitations would injuriously affect the interests of the Female College:

"A few days more than a year ago, the faculty of the University, after earnest consideration, unanimously adopted a resolution that in case any woman wishing to pursue special studies and prepared to prosecute those required in our collegiate classes, should apply for admittance into the institution, such application would be favorably considered. This action was occasioned by inquiries, from different directions to several members of the faculty, as to allowing this privilege,—especially to those who were graduates of a female college or who had gone far towards completing the usual courses of study in such institutions; and, in announcing the action of the faculty, the hope was expressed in The Courier of September 28, 1893, 'that this movement will especially encourage post-graduate work among our young women who have already completed a college course elsewhere.'

"We did not suppose that the number applying for admission into our classes would at any time be large; but we thought there were some who would be prepared to profit by the very same instruction and discipline given to our young men, and who would do no discredit, in any respect to the institution. That we were not mistaken in either supposition, became evident very soon. In a few days, three young women became students, taking precisely the same studies and doing precisely the same work as the others in our classes, clear to the end of the session, with honor to themselves and with satisfaction to their instructors. The experiment, if one chooses to call it so, has indeed been on a comparatively small scale and for but a brief time; but, so far, the result has justified all that was expected of it. It is to the credit of both the young men and the young women that, in all their intercourse, there was kindly but dignified and considerate courtesy towards each other, that led to increased mutual respect.

* * * * *

"Will any one object to the extension of the beneficent influence of his gifts beyond the sphere for which they were originally intended, when no injury is thereby done to those for whom the provision was first made? Ought he not rather to rejoice at it, and thank God that he had been building 'wiser than he knew?'"

Board of Missions and Sunday-schools.

There will be an important meeting of the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools of the Baptist State Convention in the Mission Rooms in Raleigh, N. C., on Monday, Dec. 3rd, 1894, at 7 o'clock p. m. A full meeting is desired.

Statements from Prof. Howell.

Editor Recorder. Dear Sir:—In view of the RECORDER's criticisms of me for referring to President Taylor as having received free tuition at the University of Virginia, I doubt not you will do me the justice to publish the enclosed letter from the Secretary of the University of Virginia, substantiating what I said in this connection.

I also beg leave to deny that I am moved by any prejudice against either President Taylor or the University of Virginia. The fact of President Taylor's having attended the University, without being charged tuition fees, I have never thought or wished to intimate is any reproach to him, to that institution, or to the State of Virginia. On the contrary, it is an honorable record for that University, and the State of North Carolina, particularly the Baptist church of North Carolina, is none the less indebted to Virginia because she made it easy for President Taylor to secure an education. My only contention is for the right and expediency of North Carolina's doing the same thing. My reference to two prominent church colleges in North Carolina, whose presidents were educated at a State university, was perfectly legitimate as showing that not only State schools, but denominational schools depend largely upon State-supported universities for their officers. As to Wake Forest College, not only was President Taylor, who has been so successful in securing an endowment and enlarging the enrollment of the College, educated at a State university, but William Hooper, the father of Wake Forest College, was an alumnus of the University of North Carolina, and had been a member of its Faculty.

If denominational colleges are indebted to State universities (and nearly every denominational college in North Carolina is), it is reasonable to expect that public schools will be more so. If half the superintendents of city graded schools in North Carolina are university men, surely the bitterest enemy of our University will not hold up that as a reproach to our University, whatever reflections may be suggested thereby. That Wake Forest, however, is without representation in this list is not surprising, when we consider that the attitude of the President of that College toward public education has not been such as to influence young men to enter that profession, or to attract public school officers to Wake Forest College when in search of teachers.

Very truly, LOGAN D. HOWELL.
Goldsboro, Nov. 10, 1894.

CHAIRMAN'S OFFICE, UNIV. VIRGINIA,
Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 9th, 1894.

MR. LOGAN D. HOWELL, Goldsboro, N. C.

Dear Sir—In reply to yours of the 8th inst., I would say that Mr. Charles E Taylor, now President of Wake Forest College, N. C., was not charged tuition fees when a student at the University of Virginia, by reason of his being a candidate for the ministry. Yours truly,

JAS. B. BAKER, Secretary.

[The foregoing is published in justice to Prof. Howell. It serves to relieve him of the responsibility for the statement that Prest. Taylor received his education at the University of Virginia free of charge. It does not prove that he did receive it free of charge. Secretary Baker's statement is careless. He seems to think that Dr. Taylor was a ministerial student the whole time he was at the University. We hope to publish matter in an early issue that will clear up all of this. It is scarcely necessary to say that it makes no difference where Dr. Taylor got his learning. It is not to be denied that he did learn somewhere how to write an invincible article.

Prof. Howell may not be prejudiced. We believe he is. It is plain that he appealed to prejudice many times and artlessly in his recent article.—EDITOR RECORDER.]

Church Organised.

At the request of some brethren in the community of the Lipe school house, Rowan county, Elders W. J. Hopkins, W. J. Wyatt, J. M. Ballard, W. T. Talbirt, and A. W. Setzer, brethren Henry Eudy, J. H. Stamper, J. D. Collins and M. M. Smith, met at the Lipe school house for the purpose of constituting a Baptist church.

Elder W. J. Wyatt was made moderator, and A. W. Setzer clerk. W. J. Hopkins read the Scriptures and W. T. Talbirt led in prayer.

Five—three brethren and two sisters—presented letters of dismission from Hopewell and Mt. Pleasant churches, and fifteen presented certificates of baptism. The presbytery then recognized them as a Baptist church by extending the hand of fellowship. Rev. W. J. Wyatt delivered the charge to the church.

Bro. J. M. Ballard began to preach in that community last February. When he began preaching there were old men in that section who had never heard a Baptist preach. It is principally a Presbyterian and Lutheran community. He found a few stray Baptists and persevered in the work, and besides the twenty organized into a church, there are others who failed to get their letters in time for the organization. He held a meeting of days in the month of August, from which he baptized fifteen.

There is a bright future in that section of country for Baptists. The newly constituted church is worshiping in a school house which is too small to accommodate the people who come to hear preaching. They have the offer of several church sites, and will, in the near future, build a church house. The brethren who compose the church are mostly poor people, and any contribution would be thankfully received. Indeed, I appeal to the Baptists of the State in their behalf.

Immediately after their organization into a church, they called Bro. J. M. Ballard to be their pastor.

Bro. Ballard's postoffice is Doolie, N. C.

Greensboro Notes.

It was a pleasant privilege to be with Bro. Brown at Winston in a meeting recently. I have never had a more pleasant time anywhere, nor seen a more interesting meeting. The brethren were kind and faithful in their work, and the church will be benefitted by the meeting.

The work in Greensboro moves along slowly. The congregations are good at every service. The night service always brings a house full. Our people have recently had the pleasure of listening to Bro. John A. Wray of Broad Street church, Winston. They were much pleased with his sermons. Last Sunday we received six by letter. There are numbers of others who ought to put their letters here, but they love to keep their "religion in their trunks," or love the "dear old church" too much to leave it.

Sometimes it is not the "dear old church," but a desire to get clear of church obligations. Some Baptists come here, but are so afflicted with the "big-head" (yes, it's big but empty), that the Baptists are not "tony" enough, and they hold off, or go to some "society" church. This class of Baptists are very popular with the proselyting Pedobaptist preachers. I have but little respect for either class, and our people have seen so much of it that they know these people as soon as they get to town.

We are always glad to welcome Baptists to Greensboro. We try to help the faint-hearted and to hold up the "weak kneed"; but Greensboro is a bad place for these sickly Baptists. Those here are not strong numerically, but they are sound in the faith and are abounding in the work.

We have a promising Y. P. B. U. It is run after the plan of the Winston Society, and is entirely under the control of the church. I am not able to see the need of a State organization, and for the present do not believe the movement for a State organization wise. We are having so many meetings to take money for traveling expenses, &c., that our contributions to the general work must suffer if these meetings are increased.

like the two sides of a coin or the two poles of a battery, neither has a complete significance without the other. They must be taken together, and in a certain order, or their inner harmony is broken and their divine signification lost. Their profoundest teaching grows out of their order, as may be seen by a glance at each separately. Thus in baptism the believer is "buried with Christ." He descends into the watery grave, dead to the world: then having "risen with Christ," and "put on Christ," he publicly declares to the world his new birth, his spiritual life. As Christ's resurrection overshadowed his burial, so in baptism the emphasis is to be placed not on burial but on resurrection; not on our death but on our life. While baptism symbolizes the life of Christ's "new-born babes," in the Supper the Table is spread for the sustenance of this life. Baptism, denoting the starting point, the beginning of life, the birth, is performed but once, since we are born but once; on the other hand, the Lord's Supper, showing that Christ is the author of our life, must be repeated "oft" to continue in the symbol of the communion the life already begun in the symbol of baptism. For this reason there is one baptism, but many communions.

Reverse the order, and these ordinances will teach that the participant feasts before he lives, eats before he is born. Alter the order of letters in a word, and the meaning will be either changed or destroyed. For example, vary the letters in the word tar, and you get art or rat; arrange them rta, and you get nothing. If we may change the order of baptism and the Supper, we may also change, for instance, the order of repentance and baptism; so that instead of the inspired order, "repent and be baptised," we should have the revised arrangement, "be baptised and repent." This might suit the new theology, but it would ill comport with the old. How great a change would be foisted upon Christianity! All men—the drunkard, the train robber, the assassin, the debauchee, would alike receive the ordinance whether they afterwards repented or not. In such a case, the cry would go up from many a burdened pastor's soul, as it did from Paul's, "I thank God that I baptize none of you!" The order of the ordinances, then, is essential to their meaning, and is as much inspired as are the rites themselves.

2. Christ's example. Inasmuch as the Saviour instituted baptism before the Supper, we may believe the sequence of the latter is due to the relation it bears to the former. The rite of baptism, on the one hand, is somewhat awkward, difficult, burdensome: the Supper, on the other hand, is quite simple, and more readily administered. And since both ordinances symbolize the death of our Lord, it would seem, apart from the significance growing out of their order, that communion would naturally precede baptism; for, in our Lord's earthly history, baptism, symbolizing his death and resurrection, stands for what comes after the Supper, which symbolizes his crucifixion. As the cross antedated the sepulchre, so communion would have antedated baptism; and yet, John came baptizing, and not communing, and Jesus was buried in Jordan before he spread his Table. We can account for this only by accepting the order of the ordinances as instituted and participated in by Christ as a divine method of teaching the fundamental truth, that we must be born before we take food; we must be baptized before we commune.

3. Christ's command. Said the risen Lord: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Matt. 28: 19, 20. Here the order of the ordinances is unmistakable: 1. teach, that is, make disciples of; 2. baptize these disciples; 3. teach these baptized disciples to observe all else the Lord commanded, including the holy Supper, which he had appointed to show forth his death till he come. Surely to place baptism before teaching, or communion before either, would be an unpardonable breach of the Saviour's last command, involving the Church in endless and hopeless confusion, as we see so fully illustrated in the Roman Catholic Apostacy.

4. The practice of the Apostles. In the second chapter of the Acts we see clearly how the apostles understood and observed the order of the ordinances. They were under the direct and special influences of the Holy Spirit on the great day of Pentecost, and "began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance." Many of the people were deeply moved, and cried out, saying, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Then Peter said unto them, "Repent and be baptized." And it is added, "Then they that gladly received his word were baptised: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls. And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." Acts 2: 41, 42. In the case of these converts we see again the strictest conformity to the Saviour's example and command. Repentance came first, then baptism, and afterwards breaking of bread, or the Lord's Supper. Baptism is never mentioned in the Scriptures as following communion; for it was the uniform practice of the apostles to administer it at once upon profession of faith. Notice the following passages: "The eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptised? And he baptized him." "Then answered Peter, Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?" "And he (the jailer) took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptised, he and all his, straightway." Such is the unbroken trend of apostolic example.

5. The uniform practice of the early churches. Justin Martyr says (about A. D. 140): "This food is called among us eucharist, of which no one is allowed to partake who does not believe that what we teach is true, and has not been bathed in the bath for the remission of sins and unto regeneration, and does not live as Christ has enjoined." Jerome adds his testimony: "Catechumens cannot communicate at the Lord's Table, being unbaptized." So Augustine: "Of which (the Lord's Supper) certainly they cannot partake unless they are baptized." So speaks the illustrious historian, Neander, of the primitive custom: "No person could be present who was not a member of the Christian church and incorporated into it by the rite of baptism." The learned Doddridge, Presbyterian, writes: "It is certain that so far as our knowledge of primitive antiquity extends, no unbaptized person received the Lord's Supper." The widely quoted Dr. Wall, Episcopalian, writes: "Among all the absurdities that ever were held, none ever maintained that any person should partake of the communion before he was baptised." Dr. Adam Clark, the distinguished Methodist commentator, writes: "Among the early followers of Christ, no person was permitted to come to the eucharist till he had been baptized."

From the foregoing array of indisputable facts, we are forced to the conclusion, that, inasmuch as immersion is essential to Christian baptism, and baptism is prerequisite to the Lord's Supper, unimmersed persons cannot scripturally be invited to the communion.

6. The uniform testimony of Pedobaptist authorities. It is the concurrent testimony of recognized Pedobaptist authorities that baptism should precede the Lord's Supper, which is precisely the Baptist position. So we find remarkable harmony of view at this point of the argument. No denomination, it seems, offers the Supper to those it deems unbaptized. There is considerable diversity of view as to what constitutes baptism, but singular agreement as to the necessity of some sort of baptism before communion. At this point of the discussion, the argument hinges not on close communion, but on close baptism. It is strange that Baptists have been so persistently misrepresented on this subject, when the principle underlying their practice is universally accepted by Pedobaptist bodies. Hear them speak through their leaders.

Dr. Hibbard, Methodist, says: "It is but just to remark, that in one principle the Baptist and Pedobaptist churches agree. They both agree in rejecting from communion at the table of the Lord, and in denying the rights of church fellowship to all who have not been baptized. Valid baptism they (the Baptists) consider as essential to constitute visible church membership. This we (Pedobaptists) also hold. The only question, then, that there divides us is: 'WHAT IS ESSENTIAL TO VALID BAPTISM?'"

Richard Watson, Methodist, says: "It is obligatory on all who are convinced of the truth of Christianity to be baptised; and upon those thus baptized, frequently to partake of the Lord's Supper."

Dr. Timothy Dwight (Congregationalist), late president of "Yale College," affirms: "It is an indispensable qualification for the ordinance that the candidate for communion be a member of the visible Church of Christ in full standing. By this I intend that he should be a person of piety; that he should have made a public profession of religion; and that he should have been baptized."

The Interior, a representative Presbyterian paper, says: "We agree with them (Baptists) in saying that unbaptized persons should not partake of the Lord's Supper." Again, "Close communion, in our judgment, is a more defensible position than open communion, which is justified on the ground that baptism is not prerequisite to partaking of the Lord's Supper."

Dr. Hodge, the celebrated Presbyterian theologian and writer, says in his Theology: "The Christian church requires of those whom it receives to membership in visible communion nothing more than a credible profession of faith, the promise of obedience to Christ, and submission to baptism as the ordinance of initiation."

Dr. Wm. Wall, noted historian of the Episcopal Church of England, says: "No church ever gave the communion to any person before he was baptized."

We need not multiply witness; for the proposition that baptism is prerequisite to the Lord's Supper appears to be proved.

IV. OBJECTIONS CONSIDERED.

1. It is urged that close communion arises from prejudice, ignorance, selfishness, littleness of mind—all summed up in that one word, christened "narrow." Our Pedobaptist friends, however, should speak with care in designating as narrow a people who have contended amid perils of fire and sword for the broadest principles, who have given religious liberty to the world, and who are "not a whit behind the very chiefest apostles" of Bible religion among men. Besides, the Lord's Supper is no narrower than the Lord's command, and the Lord's baptism, and the Lord's Church. And after all, some things, from their very nature, must be narrow; and Jesus himself taught, "Narrow is the way that leadeth unto life," and "broad is the way that leadeth to destruction." Broaden the edge of your razor, and you had as well try to shave with a spoon; broaden the railroad track, and you wreck the train; broaden the New Testament, and you have Popery and Pedobaptism.

2. Some contend that it is the Lord's Table, and therefore condemn Baptist practice. Yes, it is the Lord's Table, determined by the Lord's command, placed in the Lord's Church, following the Lord's baptism. Surely, if it is the Lord's Table, it should be spread according to the Lord's will. His will is expressed in his command, "Go disciple, baptize, observe whatsoever I have commanded you," including his Table.

3. It is argued that all Christians should commune together. Now there are two kinds of communion, Christian communion and church communion. There seems to be quite as much Christian fellowship between Baptists and others as between any two Pedobaptist churches. They have often precious fellowship in worship, prayer, singing, experience, work, and social intercourse. Baptists do not have church fellowship with Pedobaptist bodies, partly because those bodies have not been baptized, and partly because they have introduced innovations so contrary to the Gospel as to render fellowship at the Table impractical. On this subject let the Apostle Paul speak: "Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which he received of us." 2 Thess. 3: 6. Baptists construe this language to be a most solemn injunction to withdraw from every brother, whether a Baptist brother or a Presbyterian or a Methodist brother, who departs from apostolic teaching. When among our brethren of other names is witnessed the introduction of infant baptism, sprinkling, baptismal regeneration, and a host of unscriptural church officers, Baptists hold that those churches are walking disorderly, receiving their doctrines from men, but not inspired men.

And after all, the communion is not intended to express fellowship with one another, but to show the "Lord's death till he come." It is the communion of the body and blood of Christ, done in remembrance of him, and not of one another; for it is in no sense a family affair. Our fellowship at the Table is only an indirect result, growing out of our common relation to Christ, just as the spokes in a wheel are related because of their union with the hub.

4. Some find an argument for open communion in the fact that the Lord has greatly blessed his various denominations practicing it. But the Lord has blessed Baptists, too, in their practice of close communion; and when it is borne in mind that they are outgrowing all other Protestant denominations in the United States in numbers, amounting to 4,000,000 church members, the argument seems to shift. Moreover, let it be especially remembered that open communion has been among Baptists a conspicuous failure, while close communion has been a signal success. Which way does the divine blessing point?

5. Yet others are concerned to know how all Christians will gather at the Lord's Supper in heaven, if they do not do so on earth. We reply that the basal idea in the Lord's Supper is communion with Christ; and we may well suppose that believers will be so fully occupied in fellowship with him that they will not greatly weary themselves about fellowship with one another. There will be, however, no such ordinance in heaven, since it is to last only "till he come." Besides, there will be multitudes, embracing, in part, infants, idiots, lunatics, and many outbreaking sinners yet to be converted, with whom we hope to have joyous fellowship in the upper kingdom, whom we cannot meet at the Lord's table now.

CONCLUSION.

Close communion is regarded by many as the weak point in Baptist faith; but, on the contrary, it is a strong and indispensable feature. Mixed communion has ever retarded the growth of Baptist churches in England. Bunyan's open communion church has passed into Pedobaptist hands. Spurgeon's church employed as assistant pastor, and later as supply, a Presbyterian minister. Results quite similar have followed open communion movements in this country, notably in New England. A Baptist church stands for a pure Gospel, and when it surrenders its communion, it at the same time surrenders its baptism, which means the surrender of every principle for which its Founder established it. Then, as long as the New Testament holds its rightful place among men, it will be the joy of loving hearts to observe the Lord's Supper in the Lord's way "till he come."

"I escaped being a confirmed dyspeptic by taking Ayer's Pills in time." This is the experience of many. Ayer's pills, whether as an after-dinner pill or as a remedy for liver complaint, indigestion, flatulency, water brash, and nausea, are invaluable.

The Biblical Recorder.

I sincerely wish that every Baptist in North Carolina were a careful reader of the RECORDER. I know it would do them good. I speak from experience: it has done me good. Not having a chance to go to school a day in my life until I was in my twenty-second year, my mother taught me to read at home. After working hard all day on the farm, I brought home a load of lightwood at night, so that I might read the RECORDER. Up to the age of twenty-two the chimney-corner was my school room, the blaze of lightwood knots was my light, and the RECORDER was my text-book and teacher.

Some people say: "It won't pay for me to take the RECORDER. I have to work so hard, I have not time to read it." I used to work as hard as anybody, and yet I read the RECORDER, the Spirit of the Age, a temperance paper, and many books besides.

No person who holds a prominent position in the church, as a deacon, or other church officer or leader, can possibly be an intelligent Christian, or as good a worker without the information given by a good religious periodical. It tells of work that needs to be done, the best way to do it, and stimulates to engage in the work.

In my long experience as a pastor, I have noticed that the churches that do the most and the best Christian work, are those that take and read the largest number of good religious periodicals. I have noticed, too, that those who are fondest of good religious literature, are those who love their Bible best, and get the greatest good from it.

But some people object to the RECORDER because two dollars a year is charged for it. Except a Bible, I never bought anything in my life that is nearer worth the price paid for it than the RECORDER. I am willing to pay the real worth of an article. If the RECORDER was five dollars a year, I could not afford to do without it. As a Baptist identified with Christian work in my own State and elsewhere, I would suffer immense loss not to take it.

If I mistake not, the present editor is the only man who has ever made a decent living by publishing the RECORDER. My impression is that all the former editors had a hard struggle to live, and that several of them lost money by the paper. I am glad that we have found a man who can give us a good, respectable paper and make it pay expenses. Dr. H. L. Wayland of Philadelphia published the National Baptist for a number of years at two dollars a year. Early in this year he stopped publishing his paper because it had brought him several thousand dollars in debt.

Years ago the Baptists of North Carolina were in dread for fear the RECORDER would be a financial failure. Now that dread has passed away, and we have a good paper on a solid financial basis. We ought to rejoice in this and give our hearty support to such a paper. If I had important work to do, requiring horse power, I would feel much safer and better satisfied to undertake it with a strong, well-fed horse, rather than with one weak and half starved. The Baptists of North Carolina have a great work to do, and they cannot do it successfully without the aid of a strong religious paper.

If all the Baptists of the State who ought to take the RECORDER would take it, and if all would pay for it promptly, then the owner of the paper would do one of two things: he would either give us a still better paper, or he could continue to give us a good paper at a lower price.

Editors of religious periodicals and preachers ought to make more than a bare support; because, perhaps there is no other class of persons called on so frequently for contributions to religious objects. If editors fail to respond to every call made, they will incur displeasure and somebody will say, "He won't help me, and I won't patronize his paper." If preachers fail to give to every object presented, people will say: "He preaches to us that we must be benevolent, but he don't practice what he preaches."

Long may the BIBLICAL RECORDER live and flourish. It is a sound, solid, safe, useful paper. J. A. STRADLEY.

In cases where dandruff, scalp diseases, falling and grayness of the hair appear, do not neglect them, but apply a proper remedy and tonic like Hall's Hair Renewer.

"Nor can I grieve for what I leave behind,
In the rich promise of eternal day,
Henceforth to me the world is dead and gone,
Its thorns unfelt, its roses cast away;
And the old pilgrim, weary and alone,
Bowed down with travel at his Master's gate,
Now sits, his task of life-long labor done,
Thankful for rest, although it comes so late,
After sore journey through this world of sin,
In hope and prayer, and usefulness to wait Until the door shall ope and let me in."

How Chinese Do Things.

The men wear skirts, and the women wear trousers.

The men wear their hair long, and the women wear it short.

The men carry on dressmaking, and the women carry burdens.

The Chinese begin dinner with dessert, and end it with soup and fish.

The Chinese compass points to the south instead of the north.

Books are read backward, and what we call footnotes are inserted at the top of the page.

The Chinese surname comes first instead of last.

The Chinese shake their own hands instead of those they would greet.

The spoken language of China is not written, and the written language is not spoken.

The Chinese dress in white at funerals and in mourning at weddings, while old women always act as bridesmaids.

When babies in China are a month old, they have their first birthday party. Their heads are shaved, and they are dressed in no end of clothing, just the same shape as grown-up people's, consisting of trousers and jacket, and a cap which so completely covers them that you can only see part of a tiny face. About four o'clock the guests arrive. All are supposed to give a present—a toy, clothing, or a piece of silver wrapped in red paper. When any of our Christians have a "party" of this kind, they invite the missionaries, and we have to eat all kinds of funny things, such as birds'-nest soup, which is very good, sharks' fins, and eggs that have been buried for years and have turned black, using, of course, not knives and forks, but chopsticks.—Children's World.

The following, from an English furniture dealer's catalogue, is significantly suggestive:

Among the colleges which sustain missionaries in the foreign field, there may be named: Ann Arbor, Amherst, Brown, Cornell, Oberlin, Wellesley, and nine Presbyterian colleges and seminaries.

When a medical missionary in Southern China went first to his station, and began his work of healing, he was called "the foreign devil." Now he is known as "the angelic healer from beyond the seas."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Watch Out.

IF in grocery stores, in cooking schools, or by peddlers in your kitchen, any baking powder is recommended or urged upon you in place of the Royal, it is because such recommendation is paid for. It is unsafe to substitute any baking powder in place of the old standby, the thoroughly tried Royal. The official reports show that all others are cheaper made powders of inferior strength, and contain either lime, alum or sulphuric acid.

Talks About Law.
A Law Book That Everybody Needs

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON, RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its massing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

PRICES: Leatherette, 50c; Cloth, 60c.

To Those Who will Attend the Convention.

All who expect to attend the Convention in Charlotte, Dec. 6th, will please forward their names to the undersigned.

Homes will be provided for the delegates, and cheap rates of board secured at the hotels for visitors.

Let us hear from you at an early day.

T. H. PRITCHARD,
L. R. PRUETT,
Committee.

Charlotte, N. C.

SPECIAL NOTICE BY THE COMMITTEE.

Permit the Committee to say that if they should not ascertain the address of the four or five brethren whose postoffices are lost, or were never sent, their names were received and homes have been assigned them, and they will be cared for when they come.

Up to date, 247 delegates have reported, and we expect at least 300, perhaps more; of these, 37 are ladies. We will send out cards notifying the delegates of the name and address of each home, and request that they will, as soon as this card reaches them, acquaint the person who is to entertain them of the day, and if possible, the hour when they will be at their homes.

The Convention of Young People will meet on Wednesday night, Dec. 5th, and the State Convention on the night of Thursday, Dec. 6 h; so, of course, we will not expect any one till Wednesday.

T. H. PRITCHARD,
L. R. PRUITT,
Committee.

A Biographical Sketch of Mrs. Eliza Howell.

This sister died at her home in Wake county in the eightieth year of her age. She was born in Chatham county, N. C., and was the daughter of Asa and Sallie Wilson. She professed religion in early life and joined the Baptist church, of which she remained a member until her death.

She was married while young to Rev. Jesse Howell, with whom she was permitted by an Alwise Providence to live for sixty-two years. Fifty-six years of this time she faithfully assumed the responsibilities of her family and made many sacrifices, little known to the world, in order that her husband might go and preach the gospel.

She met death with as much composure as if it had been only a dream. No fears seemed to cloud her mind, and no pain tortured her body. Submission was written on her face.

She was the mother of ten children, four of whom are dead. Five daughters and one son, and a large number of grandchildren and great-grandchildren mourn their loss, which is keenly felt by us all; but her husband and young est daughter, who so tenderly and affectionately administered to her every want, will realize her departure most, as they constitute the family left at the old homestead.

She was a remarkable woman, small in stature and full of life and hope. Her eyesight was almost perfect. Her dark, auburn hair retained its color only a few silver hairs until of her advanced age. She was cheerful in disposition, and energetic in her nature. She was a help-meet to her husband, and a kind and loving mother.

She was buried in the family graveyard. Revs. J. M. Holleman and William Olive conducted the funeral services. Mr. Holleman spoke of the labors of ministers' wives, especially of the great work the deceased had done, little known nor rightly appreciated by the outside world. It may well be said that she strengthened the stakes, while her husband lengthened the cords.

But mother is gone. We saw the casket covered from our sight, which contained the remains that had held the valuable life. We covered the mound with flowers, and with bleeding hearts we left the spot, hoping to meet her where parting is no more.

May the grace of God sustain the aged minister, the bereaved husband, until he shall be called to the blissful regions beyond this vale of tears. S. H. COUNCIL Program.

The Union Meeting of the Eastern Association will be held with the church at Riley's Creek, beginning Friday before the fifth Sunday in December, 1894

Introductory sermon by Rev. M. C. Walton.

First query: What is a church, and what are the objects of its organization? To be opened by Rev. S. D. Swaim and Bro. J. L. Canaday.

Second query: What is the relation between State, Home, and Foreign Missions? Rev. F. T Wooten and Bro. J. T. Bland.

Third query: How can we best advance the work within our own Association? Rev. O P. Meeks and Bro. B. L Montford.

Fourth query: What is the extent of the responsibility of the individual Christian in carrying out the great commission? Revs. W. B Oliver and R E Poole.

All the churches inclined to co-operate with the Executive Committee are affectionately asked to send a representative with a contribution for State or Associational Missions. L. R CARROLL.

Warsaw, Nov. 20. 1894.

Acknowledgments.

What Shall I Take ?

Is the anxious question asked by those who are not feeling well—have no appetite—are out of sorts—have no energy—feel tired out. Perhaps you are feeling sick yourself!

Many medicines are recommended, doctors consulted—(in many cases) much money spent in this search for health—and yet it can all be avoided.

Wise people commence at once taking and are soon made well and strong. Nearly every prescription given by physicians for such troubles contains IRON—which some people say they cannot take. Try Brown's Iron Bitters—it is warranted not to give headache, stain the teeth or cause constipation as all other Iron Medicines do.

Brown's Iron Bitters

Genuine has the crossed Red lines on the wrapper.

The Needs of Pamlico.

Dear Recorder:—I have been, for some time, intending a short article about our Master's work in this county. We as Baptists have very much neglected this portion of our fair State. While other portions of North Carolina are receiving the gospel as we believe the Bible teaches it, we are having quite a struggle in the prosecution of the Lord's work.

Why the Baptists have neglected so long many portions of Eastern North Carolina, I am unable to say; but it is a fact, nevertheless. Other denominations are occupying the territory, and we are feebly making spasmodic efforts for the salvation of these multitudes. Brethren, will not God hold us responsible for this neglect?

The people are very anxious to hear the gospel, but are having a very hard time in trying to supply this demand. The great hindrances to this work is, the pay is not sufficient to support one man, while there is work enough for three.

There are at least fifteen places that ought to be occupied now.

From these different places invitation after invitation comes to preach the gospel, and the missionary is compelled to turn them away, because he receives so very little that he must resort to some other work in order to make a living. It is, indeed, hard when one is commissioned to declare God's message to the people, and they come to him and beg him to tell the story of God's love to a dying world, and he must say to them "I can't."

The prospects are very promising. The field is now ripe unto the harvest. Will our brethren come to our rescue?

Nearly all our people are poor, but they are noble and generous. There are no people within the knowledge of the writer more hospitable and kind than the people of this section.

Unless help is given, abandonment is the inevitable.

Many people are going into other churches because of the inconvenience of Baptist churches. The people are now in a condition to receive Baptist doctrine. Just to show what work can be done, we will give the result of fifteen months' work at one point. Vandemere Baptist church was organized with five members last September, one year ago, and we now have twenty four members in fairly good working condition. This is but an illustration of what might be done.

Other places here, if occupied, I think, would prove just as fruitful. If the field could be properly worked for two consecutive years, judging from the present outlook, be would become self supporting.

Brethren, will you not heed the cries of these perishing hundreds and help us to give them the gospel? I would that every Baptist in North Carolina could behold the field as it is. Help us, brethren, to do our Master's work. Fraternally,

C. S. BURGESS

Vandemere, Nov. 20, 1894.

Yeopim Union Meeting.

This Union expects to meet with the church at Sandy Cross on Friday before the fifth Lord's day in December next, changed from Reynoldson because more central. Rev. Josiah Elliott to preach the introductory sermon, Rev. W. B. Waff, alternate. Rev. J. E. White, the missionary sermon, Rev. W. P. Jordan, alternate.

SUBJECTS FOR DISCUSSION.

1. The North Carolina Ministers' Relief Board, and our duty to it. Assigned to brethren A. W. Burfoot and J. E. White.
2. Brazil, and our work there. Brethren Ed. Pearce and M. O. Carpenter.
3. What are needed qualifications for a successful Bible teacher? W. B. Waff and W. P. Jordan.

Because of the inclement weather, very few brethren attended last meeting, and it is highly important that there be full representation at this one: first, because we are far behind in paying our missionaries; and second, because the contractor expects to complete the house of worship in Hyde county by that time, and Bro. Elliott says that $325 will then be needed to make a payment on it. JOS. T. WAFF, Clerk.

DIED.

JONES—Near Mt. Vernon Springs, Chatham county, N. C., Nov. 17th, 1894, Charlie Jones, aged forty-two years. He had been a member of Love's Creek church for twenty years. He suffered four weeks with blood poison. He did not fear to die, but regretted to leave his wife and children. May the Lord be with them in their sad bereavement.

O. T. E.

PACK—Miss Melissa L. Pack of Fork church, Davie county, N. C., who was much loved by all who knew her, and who followed the Master faithfully, died Nov. 9th, 1894. She is now happy with her many friends and loved ones gone before, forever singing praises in that land of the blest. Although she only lived twenty years, seven months and two days, she is, and will be missed by many.

CONRA.

RAY—At the residence of her father, Rev. J. W. Atkinson, Sister Lena Ray, departed this life for the life to come Nov. 1st, 1894. Sister Ray was born March 6th, 1873. She had been a consistent member of the church for eight years. She was always an obedient child, doing the will of her parents with pleasure. She was an active worker for Christ during her whole Christian life. "To live Christ is to die in Christ." This was proven by the death of Sister Ray. Her last words have much comfort to her husband and parents. Her funeral was preached at New Bethel church Nov. 11th, 1894, by the writer. May the Lord give comfort to the bereaved.

M. P. DAVIS.

DUNCAN—God in his Allwise Providence has seen fit to take from our midst Sister Margaret Duncan, wife of our beloved brother, Geo. W. Duncan of Tally Ho Baptist church. She was paralyzed Thursday morning, Nov. 1st, while she was busy at work, and only lingered till about ten that night. But few women have been blessed with strength to raise thirteen children, five sons and eight daughters, all of whom are grown, and were present at her grave. She was sixty-two years old when she died, and she leaves behind a husband and forty-two children and grandchildren. Only two little grandchildren from her family have preceded her home.

For more than forty years she has been a faithful member of our church, so kind, so generous, so Christ-like. No wonder that her children are all, with one exception, members of the church. We shall miss her so much, but her place now is in the presence of her Saviour, where she waits to welcome us home.

J. E. SMITH.

Creedmore, N. C., Nov. 6, 1894.

NIPPER—Departed this life on Feb. 16th; 1893, at his residence in Wake county, Bro. J. R. Nipper, aged fifty-three years. He was born and reared in this county, and made it, during a long life, his home. He was a farmer, possessed good judgment, was industrious and economical, and succeeded in acquiring ample means to live at ease and be useful to friends and neighbors. At various times he filled public stations, acquitting himself with satisfaction to the public. He was kind and generous, and easily touched by an appeal of sorrow or distress. He was an affectionate husband, dearly loving his home and family.

Bro. Nipper professed religion at an early age and united with the Baptist church, of which he was a member at the time of his death. His health failed him about three years before he died, and during all of this time he endured his affliction with fortitude and resignation. He was a praying man, a lover of his church, and his entire trust for salvation was in the atoning merits of the cross of Christ.

The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. J. W. Atkinson, after which the body was conveyed to its last resting place by the Masonic fraternity, together with a large concourse of his friends and neighbors.

WATSON—Mrs. Mary Tazewell Watson, wife of Rev. J. W. Watson, died at her home at Chapel Hill, October 21st, 1894, aged thirty years and twenty days. Her interesting character merits a special notice. Born at the home of her father, Bro. A. C. Parham, in Granville county, she received Christian nurture, and at an early age professed to have a religious experience,—but, when about eighteen, her sensitive conscience became exercised in regard to the reality and depth of her convictions, and she rested not until she obtained a more clearly defined sense of acceptance with God through Christ. This honest and careful self-scrutiny she seems to have maintained to the end without permitting it to run to morbid excess. Her marked natural capacity was well trained having received the benefit of the excellent course in Prof. Hobgood's school in Raleigh and then in Oxford, where she graduated when she was sixteen years old. With added years and growing experience she became a most efficient ally of the useful young servant of God to whom she gave her heart and life. Such intelligence and candor, such spiritual aspiration and practical method are not always so thoroughly enlisted and so well directed.

Her love of music was consecrated to her Master's service. She found time to do some good teaching in Sunday-school and day-school. Three children came to her home. Two of them—the last born just to die here and live forever above—preceded the mother to the heavenly rest. A bright little girl remains to cheer the desolate heart of the father.

Troubled nature will wonder why such early fruit and such gracious promise of better to come could not find their full development here in all those useful forms of service she so much loved. But she did not spend the long weeks of prostration and suffering in doubt or repining. She forbade us to cherish any hope of her recovery, and with humble faith made her dying day her company keeper. Her passing away at the midnight hour was a triumph. A celestial light irradiated her countenance and glowed through her wasted form.

At Chapel Hill church we paid her tender tribute, and after a sermon at Mt. Pleasant church by our pastor, Dr. Carroll, she was buried there in hope of a joyful resurrection.

Speaks through the Boothbay (Me.) Register, of the beneficial results he has received from a regular use of Ayer's Pills. He says: "I was feeling sick and tired and my stomach seemed all out of order. I tried a number of remedies, but none seemed to give me relief until I was induced to try the old reliable Ayer's Pills. I have taken only one box, but I feel like a new man. I think they are the most pleasant and easy to take of anything I ever used, being so finely sugar-coated that even a child will take them. I urge upon all who are in need of a laxative to try Ayer's Pills. They will do good."

Thanksgiving All the Year.

Once a year there comes a day
In the chill November weather
When from near and far away
Loving kindred meet together.

Round the old hearthstone they meet,
Young and old, in union tender,
To renew their greetings sweet
And their mutual love to render.

Thanks are given that once again
They whom distance separated,
With their hearts all free from pain,
Gather there with hearts elated.

Yet through all the changing year
We for giving thanks have reason
For the blessings that appear,
That we find in every season.

Thanks for shelter from the storm,
Thanks because no ills confound us,
Thanks for hearts that e're are warm,
Thanks for loving friends around us.

Thanks for health that day by day
With fresh pleasure comes attended,
Thanks for sorrow passed away,
Thanks for troubles that are ended.

So, for blessings we receive,
Making our lives worth the living,
Every day of joy we live
Should be to us a thanksgiving.

—New York Ledger.

"Straightway."

"Frank, when are you going to take that parcel to Mrs. Jones? You know it was left here for her over a week ago."

The speaker was Frank's mother. Mrs. Jones was a poor widow living in the neighborhood.

Frank's reply was: "Oh, I'll take it to her some time. I suppose there's no hurry."

"I don't know whether there is or not. The package may contain something that she greatly needs."

"Well, I guess it's all right. I'll leave it some time when I'm going near her house."

Grandpa sat in the room in which this conversation was being held. He had his Bible in his hand, as usual, but he looked over the top of his spectacles at Frank while the boy was answering his mother.

"Frank," said he, "there's an old fashioned word in this Book that you don't seem to pay much attention to."

"What is it, sir?" asked Frank, respectfully.

"It's 'straightway.' Have you ever noticed the places where it's found?"

"I think not, sir."

"Well, once Jesus was walking by the Sea of Galilee, and he saw two brothers, Simon and Andrew, busy fishing. He told them that, if they would follow after him, he would make them fishers of men; that is, he would show them how to persuade others to follow him, too. They didn't wait to ask him how he would do this, or how soon he wanted them, or how long it would do to wait. The Book says, 'Straightway they forsook their nets, and followed him.' There's an example of promptness, isn't there?

"Then we go on reading here in the first chapter of Mark, and we find that, after calling Simon and Andrew, Jesus saw two other brothers, James and John, also engaged in fishing. Then he didn't stop to say: 'I'll be here another day, and that will be soon enough to call these two to follow me.' The story says, 'Straightway he called them.' Then they left their nets and their servants and their father, and went after him immediately. So here we have Jesus and two of his disciples, all setting us an example of promptness.

"We go on to read, then, that they went to Capernaum. Then Jesus 'straightway, on the Sabbath day, entered into the synagogue, and taught.' You notice that he didn't say, 'Another week will do quite as well.' He did his work at once. So here we have his example again.

"Now I turn over to the Acts of the Apostles, and I find this word repeated. You remember the story of the jailer of Philippi. You know how there came an earthquake while Paul and Silas were in prison, and how the keeper was frightened when he discovered that the prisoners' fetters were loosed, and how relieved he was to find that they had not all escaped, and how he was converted through the preaching of Paul and Silas. Then here comes our word again, 'He took them the same hour of the night and washed their stripes, and was baptized, he and all his, straightway.'

"You see how prompt he was to act when he once saw what his duty was. He didn't even wait until morning. 'The same hour of the night' was the best time, he thought, and I believe that he was right.

"Now, if you're not tired of so much preaching, I'll find this word for you once more. It's in the chapter where we read about Saul in Damascus. He had lately been changed from a cruel persecutor into a devoted servant of Jesus Christ, and he was as anxious to proclaim the gospel as he had before been to prevent its being proclaimed. So 'straightway' he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he was the Son of God. There was no hesitation, no delay. This was henceforth to be his life-work, and he began it at once."

Grandpa stopped talking, and Frank said, "I see what you mean, grandpa. It is, that if it's any one's duty to do a thing, he ought to do it right away."

"That's the direction in which these examples seem to point," answered grandpa.

"Then the proper thing for me to do is to start for Widow Jones' house as soon as I can get my coat on," and Frank made an energetic move toward the door.

"It isn't always the case that one who listens to a sermon applies it to himself so promptly," said grandpa smiling. Frank's mother was the only one who heard this last remark, for Frank was out in the entry putting on his coat and hat.—Mary Jeanne Forster, in Christian Index.

The Pride of the Feast.

At a public banquet given in London within a few years one of the postprandial speakers remarked affably that the great wrong America did to England by not allowing herself to be conquered was atoned for by the noble gift of the turkey.

By that it would seem that the delicious edible bird was unknown till our colonies had the honor of introducing it to the old world.

An Englishman in Paris asked our own Franklin why his countrymen selected a stupid, uneatable eagle as their emblem when they had supplied them with such a noble bird as the turkey, which was good hot or cold and most excellent warmed over.

Recipe books are generally and very appropriately written by women, but men of all English speaking countries have written upon the proper methods of cooking a turkey. One English philosopher of peculiar views on the subject says:

A turkey roast
Is a turkey lost.
A turkey boiled
Is a turkey spoiled.
For a turkey braised
The Lord be praised.

A devout American will not admit that any method of preparing the turkey equals roasting, but braising, if well done, is worthy of all praise.

The fault of every nation but our own in roasting a turkey is the habit of giving it too little time. Slow roasting and frequent basting, with a few moments at the last of strong heat, to insure a brown crisp skin, are its needs. It goes without saying that the bird must be fat, young and tender. If it lacks these three graceful attributes then give up the roasting idea, unless you crave a "turkey lost," and treat it as Professor Matthew Williams prescribes. In other words, make a hunter's roast of it. That ameliorating process, with plenty of time to consummate it, would bring the tender grace of youth to Job's turkey.—Washington Post.

Habit.

From childhood we have heard about the "chains of habit." It is well enough to know that habits are like chains when once we have acquired them, but for the consideration of those who have yet to form their habits, another simile is more impressive.

We have all seen that picture representing a giant in the hands of Lilliputians. The latter have found him asleep and are binding him with a fine thread. If he were to waken as soon as the first few strands were wound around his limbs, he could without effort, break them and rise to his feet. But he sleeps on while innumerable meshes are made, which, as they multiply, confine more and more securely the great form. Finally, he awakens to find himself a prisoner.

Those strands of thread are like the varied influences which form habits. The first or second or twentieth impulse in any direction might be thrown off; but the thirtieth, combined with others from other directions but tending to the same point, soon carries the individual ideas. Once influenced by one series of cords he all the more easily yields to another. Before he knows it the threads of habit give direction to his life.

What we have said applies equally to good as to bad habits. And it is to be remembered that to form good habits is the best antidote against the destructive effects of bad ones.

A man is in a large degree what his habits make him.—Young Men's Era.

Children who Suffer

from scrofulous, skin or scalp diseases, ought to be given Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, for purifying the blood. For children who are puny, pale and weak, the "Discovery" is a tonic which builds up both flesh and strength. What is said of it for children applies equally to adults. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it sets at work all the processes of digestion and nutrition, rouses every organ into natural action, and brings back health and strength. In recovering from "grippe," or in convalescence from pneumonia, fevers, and other wasting diseases, it speedily and surely invigorates and builds up the whole system.

For all diseases caused by a torpid liver or impure blood, as Dyspepsia and biliousness, if it doesn't cure in every case, the money is returned.

How to be Happy.

There is an ancient legend which tells in a beautiful manner the secret of joy on earth:

Once there was a wealthy and powerful king, full of care and very unhappy. He heard of a man famed for his wisdom and piety, and found him in a cave on the border of a wilderness.

"Holy man," said the king, "I came to learn how to be happy." Without making a reply, the wise man led the king over a rough path till he brought him in front of a high rock, on the top of which an eagle had built her nest.

"Why has the eagle built her nest, yonder?"

"Doubtless," answered the king, "that it may be out of danger."

"Then imitate the bird," said the wise man; "build thy home in heaven, and thou shalt have peace and happiness."—Ram's Horn.

Where we are ignorant, God is wise; where we stand blindly in the dark, he is in the light; where we wonder, he calmly knows.—Phillips Brooks.

THE SMALLER, THE BETTER

—if you can only be sure that a small pill will do you as much good. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are smaller than any others, sugar-coated, easier to take and easier in the way they act—and yet they really do you more good. Their refined and concentrated vegetable extracts act upon the liver in a natural way that lasts. They have a peculiar strengthening effect on the intestines. They not only relieve, but permanently cure.

In every liver, stomach, and bowel disorder—Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Windy Eructations, "Risings of Food," Sick or Bilious Headaches, Sour Stomach—they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

Much shallow talk has been indulged with regard to the vanishing red man. People have written books about him, and others have wept under the doleful influence of crack-brain eloquence in his behalf. Yes, poems, that is, verse, have frequently been dedicated to him "fading before the ruthless march of ci vi li za-tion." But the Indian is still with us, and all signs point to the fact that he contemplates sharing the poets' title to be always in the way. And certainly, if the highest civilization is ability to live comfortably without working, as the wealthy social leaders undoubtedly believe, the Indian deserves rank second only to Ward MacAllister and his lackeys.

The Indian is at present a public charge. He and of political heelers and broken-down aristocrats are rewarded with appointments to well-salaried offices, which were instituted ostensibly in behalf of Poor Lo, but which, of course, being public offices, are well calculated to facilitate the cultivation of the aristocratic (active or broken down) as well as the Indian view of civilization, mentioned a moment since.

It has been said that there are more Indians living now than when Columbus landed. True or not, it is fact that more noise is made over them than they would deserve, if they were as plentiful as pine-trees. The government actually has to appropriate many hundred thousand dollars every year to keep them, and the broken-down aristocrats appointed to spend the money for them, alive and respectable. The ruthless marching pale face has also to pay taxes to educate their offspring. Really they are about as troublesome and greedy, though actually less deserving, than the pensioners. The Catholics, with their usual cunning eye for combining charity, religion and business, run Indian schools also; and, of course, they know how to save money for the government by using our taxes. Startling though it be, it is fact that Romanists are proselyting Indians and being paid with public funds to do it.

We were almost ready to suggest that the Indian ought to be expected to get an education without special appropriation; but on consideration we fear that would hurt the charitable feelings of our Romanist teachers and aristocratic agents. And we humbly beg the latter's pardon for saying that it is foolish to spend immense sums feeding able bodied Indians. No matter what, sects should not be allowed to handle government money for anybody, Indians, priests or agents. It really does seem that a great government might take care of all the Indians that ever lived without the aid of the Pope.

And that reminds us that the Pope's help is most efficient, whatever else may be said about it. The Pope carries votes in all his pockets and more besides; and political parties covet nothing so ardently as votes. Perhaps that's why the Pope has been having us pay his proselyters these many years. Romanists carry their religion into politics as a matter of course; but our esteemed neighboring aggregation of rara aves of the News and Observer refuse to see any danger in consequence either to Rome or the Nation. Queer indeed it is how people not born blind blindfold themselves upon special occasions.

This much remains to be said: A wayfaring man, though a fool, cannot but perceive (unless he's paid not to) that, if Romanists, or their Episcopalian imitators either for that matter, persist in going into politics, and other denominations persist in holding themselves too righteous to stoop to prevent them, the Romanists will have things all their way. And then the tomtit and the chickee can split their throats with chirping to the Pope.

However it be with the Indian, who never was a blessing, it is not to be denied that the struggle for survival is sacrificing many of Nature's gracious blessings, chief of which are the forests. The amount of timber that is felled every year is incomprehensible; and a great deal of it is felled to but little advantage. Since coal became the chief fuel, it has remained for the forests to be swallowed up in building. It would be cheaper far, all in all, to use bricks; for the trees have influences upon climate that are more to be valued than the mere possession of shelter. It is said that the climate of Greece has been utterly changed—and for the worse—by the extinction of its forests. One cannot conceive to how great an extent forests influence rainfall until he has seen deserts made by lumbermen.

The Buffalo and the Indian used to be accompanying one another to the happy hunting ground amid the inspiring strains of commencement music, soon to become a tradition and a myth; but somehow the buffalo got ahead; and we still have the Indian abundant and in the veritable bronze skin, while the buffalo is represented only and very poorly indeed in circuses. The Indian has the government's protection. Surely the buffalo might have been tolerated. At any rate his lorn circus representatives are a warning.

The brisk air of early morn and the promise of easy wind and comforting sun rays through the day, not to mention the oft-related achievements of the other fellows, have enticed many a man of late—yes, on Thanksgiving—to go into the fields with gun and dog. Now we are not a dyspeptic vegetarian kind of a being, and there are no objections to hunting; but we do know that it is timely to protest against the ruthless slaughter of partridges that often occurs, many huntsmen being weak minded. We might go farther and urge the State to protect the birds absolutely a year or more, not for the bird's sake, though that were enough, but for the huntsmen's sake. At the present rate a day's hunt ten years hence will barly find a covey. Hunting is a good, whole some diversion; but in excess it is horribly brutish.

Our State has a superabundance of forestry—in variety and grandeur unsurpassed, and useful too. North Carolina has never been a great State, but no one is so blind as to say the fault is Nature's, unless it be a fault to give too generously, as is sometimes hinted. North Carolina has game too; but nothing like what it once had. There are yet representatives of a lavish variety of game, but there is abundance of none; and in many districts it is deplorably scarce. Hunters, pot hunters, money hunters and pleasure hunters, armed with the most approved ordnance, and led by dogs of aristocratic breeding, have been entirely heedless of the morrow. The best armies on earth with armor and citadels and power to fight back would succumb to the helter-skelter sharp shooting that our birds have to undergo. Many of them died of cold in the winter before last. We do not know what the advancing season has in store, but we do know it will be hard enough on the birds.

Northern huntsmen have taken to our fields of recent years, shamelessly killing partridges in sport. They ought by all means to be driven out. Killing partridges to prove the excellence of dogs, which was the case near Newton last month, proves also the brutal doggishness of men. Northern huntsmen have devastated some sections in idle sport; and it is time action were taken against them. If the birds are to be killed, let them be killed by those who will appreciate them as one of God's gifts, and who will not slaughter them for the glory of dogs.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S message to the Congress about to meet, it is said, will be more concerned with finance than anything else. In fact, it is hinted that he and his party, driven to harmony by the late election, purpose employing all measures to make amends for the transactions of the last eighteen months.

There in nothing that will impress the country so favorably as a satisfactory settlement of the financial question; and the party that is in power when it is determined will likely retain the public gratitude and confidence many years.

There is no doubt but that something is really wrong when bonds have to be issued at the behest of money-lenders twice in a year. A government ought to be able to run without borrowing on ten years time. We ought to be getting ready to wipe out the war debt.

It is alleged that the bonds are issued to purchase gold with which confidence is to be maintained.

There is no bondholder in England or America that would be logically justified in withdrawing his money, if the gold reserve should be stolen to-night. Not one man in a thousand had ever thought of the gold reserve until the bankers saw the opportunity to make money out of it. If that $100,000,000 were the basis of every American investment, we apprehend American stock and bonds would never have found a market. People would not have more confidence in the government, so far as credit is concerned, if the gold reserve were several times a hundred million, or less if it were divided by ten.

Separation of Church and State

Sermon Preached in the West Washington Street Baptist Church, Greensboro, Nov. 11, 1894, by the Pastor, Rev. Chas. A. G. Thomas.

Matt 22: 21—"Then saith he unto them, Render, therefore, unto Cesar the things which are Cesar's; and unto God the things that are God's."

Acts 5: 29—"Then Peter and the other apostles answered and said, We ought to obey God rather than men."

This great principle is the child of religious liberty. It is emphasized by Christ and the apostles. Christ has issued the bill of divorcement between the Church and the State, and what God has put asunder it is sinful for man to join together. Catholicism performed the marriage ceremony between Church and State. Protestantism has borrowed the ceremony and performed the rites at every opportunity. The Baptists cried aloud that there were momentous reasons for not performing this ceremony. Their cries were not heeded, and they have never held their peace from that day to this. The union between Church and State is an adulterous union which has brought forth injustice, oppression, tortures and death to some of the world's greatest heroes. It will bring forth injustice, discord and only evil wherever it is recognized.

I. THIS ADULTEROUS UNION HAS BEEN THE SOURCE OF THE BITTEREST PERSECUTIONS THE WORLD HAS EVER KNOWN.

The annals of history are filled with records of trouble, oppression, cruelties, and blood-shed growing out of the union of Church and State. And in the great majority of cases the Baptists have been the objects of these persecutions, yet they have been patient and submissive, never seeking the power of State for any purpose whatever. It is impossible to form a complete estimate of the multitudes of its victims or to imagine the intensity and cruelty of the sufferings produced by this union. The Spanish branch of the Inquisition burnt more than 30,000 persons and subjected to other punishments less severe over 280,000. In Netherlands the estimate of the slain has been from 50,000 to 100,000. There are other memorable instances which no word can fitly describe. Thousands of methods of persecutions and forms of punishments have been established to oppress the men who dared to think for themselves. Millions met the martyr's death for protesting against this adulterous union. States and civil governments have claimed authority over the churches and have fixed penalties, tortures and death for violation of their laws. Every conceivable form of punishment has been used by the church in power to force the protesting Baptists into submission.

This union is brought about for no other purpose than to coerce. Why should any church desire civil or political power, but that they may secure patronage for the advancement of their special sectarian interests. Whenever and wherever churches have sought this power, it has been used to coerce others. This has been true of every denomination organized previous to the eighteenth century except the Baptists. The doctrines of all have been that State governments ought to support and govern the churches. This was up to one hundred years ago the universal teaching of statesmen and clergy. The Catholic church from its establishment to the present has never admitted this separation of Church and State, but has ever been its foe and its special efforts on all occasions have been to get control of the State and the patronage of the government. They have ever been foremost in persecuting those who have contended for separation. The Episcopal church kindled its fires in Smithfield. They had their Inquisition regularly commissioned in 1547 and the bloody period inaugurated at this time is a black spot upon English history.

The Presbyterian church in Scotland was no better. The Edinburgh Convention declared certain ecclesiastical offenders worthy of death. Baxter, John Knox and John Calvin were great advocates of this union, and under Calvin's rule in Geneva the cruelties were sickening, reaching a climax in the burning of Michael Servetus Oct. 27th, 1553. The Lutherans, the Independents, and Congregationalists in many respects have a fairer record, yet they, too, as they got into control of State, began to turn the thumbscrews of oppression. The Puritans crossed the waters in order to find a land of freedom, but it did not long remain free, for they in turn, as they got into power, began to coerce others. Roger Williams was banished from Massachusetts in 1636. He was driven by savage Christians to find the kindness of Christianity among savages. Obadiah Holmes was stript of his clothing and publicly whipped in Boston with a threefold cord, and two men were fined forty shillings and imprisoned because they spoke words of sympathy to the sufferer.

From 1723 to 1733 twenty eight Baptists were imprisoned at Bristol; and during that same century a poor man named Pointer was whipped like a common criminal because he would not have his child sprinkled. President Dunster of Harvard College was fined and driven from office because he expressed Baptist sentiments. Leading members of the Charlestown Baptist church, Mass., were disfranchised, and in 1680 the First Baptist church in Boston was nailed up by the marshal and services prohibited. In Virginia the Episcopal church ruled in power. A man was fined fifty pounds of tobacco for absence from the church services, and two thousand pounds if he refused to have his infant sprinkled. Baptist preachers were imprisoned and cruelly treated for preaching the gospel in Virginia and other places.

These facts are startling. They are hard to believe. Yet they are made possible in any age and place by the union of Church and State.

II. THE BAPTISTS HAVE STOOD ALONE IN THEIR STRUGGLES TO DIVORCE CHURCH AND STATE THROUGH THE AGES. THEY ALONE HAVE PROTESTED AGAINST IT, AND TO THEM ALONE BELONGS THE HONOR OF VICTORY.

The Baptist denomination is so constructed that it is impossible for it to either form or to consent to an alliance between Church and State. Through all the ages the Baptists have contended for spirituality of the church. This principle is a standing protest against the union of Church and State. Wherever the State church exists, this spirituality is dead, and the worship can only be lifeless and formal. In the early ages of New England, church membership was essential to the rights of citizenship. What a drag-net to fill the church with unconverted and unscrupulous men! In such a State Baptists could not live for one hour without protesting. The Baptists have always contended for the voluntary in religion. This principle is a standing protest against this union as is every cardinal principle of our churches. Hence it is absolutely impossible for any true Baptist to consent to the union of Church and State.

Three hundred years ago this doctrine was not advocated, nay not recognized by any civil government or organized church in the world. But this idea, radical and revolutionary, originated in the minds of humble men. They soon began to better it. They were scoffed at, ridiculed, denounced, imprisoned and burned. The idea found no welcome from statesmen, preachers, churches, or states. These humble Baptists, for such they were, contended for others—Jews, Turks, Pagans, Catholics, for men everywhere. It was a struggle for all. But they were denounced and murdered by those for whom they pleaded as they in turn came in power.

From 1732 to 1785 in Georgia the chain of testimony is complete. There are no contradictory utterances, but a solid chain without one missing link. The history of this struggle in Virginia is one of the most glorious pages in all history. Every Baptist ought to read it again and again. But it was years after this struggle before civil power was broken in Massachusetts. In 1795, nineteen years after, six Baptist preachers were imprisoned for not paying taxes to the Congregational church, yet the Baptists had sustained voluntary worship for forty years in that town (Harwich, Mass.) before there was a Congregational church there; and when the Baptists obtained judgment in the county court, the Supreme Court reversed the decision and sustained the law against the Baptists; and in 1729, twenty-three years after, a Baptist deacon's grain and hay was seized and sold to pay the parish preacher's tax, and it was not till 1833 that the Baptists finally succeeded in getting the laws repealed, and then that great man Lyman Beecher thought the State would be ruined by its repeal. And it was only in 1877 that the last coercive religious law in the United States was repealed. That law was on the statute book of New Hampshire and allowed no one but Protestants to serve as Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Senator or Representative. Thus every State in the Union has cut the bonds between Church and State.

This result stands to day as a glorious trophy of Baptists, yet the spirit of the union has been recognized by the various denominations in receiving the patronage of government for the support of their schools, especially among the Indians.

Up to 1893 the Catholics had received $3,866,416; the Presbyterians, $315,080; the Congregationalists, $208,819; the Episcopalians, $107,146; the Quakers, $150,437; Mennonites, $25,840; Unitarians, $33,750; Lutherans, $53,460; Methodists, $33 245.

Mr. Linton of Michigan on June 7th, 1894, in the House of Representatives, gives the above figures, and states that the Baptist denomination "has never accepted, but always refused this public money for their missionary work." Thus we see that the Baptists have been true to their principle. It was only in 1893 that the Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Congregationalists and Methodists passed resolutions refusing this help from public funds. Some of the contracts with the State did not close until July, 1894.

The Lake Mohonk Indian Conference recently (1894) passed a very positive resolution opposing government aid to sectarian schools. The New York Independent, Oct. 18th, 1894, in commenting on this, says: "It is a fact somewhat amusing that Lake Mohonk is a sort of Quaker headquarters, and that the only three religious denominations, we believe, which yet received government money are Quakers, the Unitarians and the Catholics."

The Catholics and some others will continue to draw on the $400,000 voted for Indian schools by the last Congress, until the people rise in protest against it. Of all the Congressmen from North Carolina, but one voted against this appropriation. The gentleman from this district honored himself and his people in casting that vote. This principle will continue to grow until we are relieved from taxes which go to give free tuition to preachers and preachers' sons at the Universities of North Carolina and Virginia and other States. The amount may be very small, but if it is only the millionth part of a cent for each taxpayer, it is the violation of this great principle for which Baptists have contended in all ages and for which they have died. The struggle has been made, the victory won, and the work before us is only the clearing away of the decaying remains left upon the battlefield.

This principle is leavening other nations. For instance, on Oct. 5th, 1894, the upper house of the Hungarian Diet passed a bill granting liberty of worship to all religious beliefs. The telegrams in the daily papers told us that the bill was stoutly resisted by the Roumanian and "Orthodox" bishops, who declared it would "ruin society and the State." We are able to account for this victory when we read that during the last year 999 were baptized in Hungary, and that since 1891 the Baptists have double their numbers in that country.

The Baptists need to advance one more step and protest against the exemption from taxation of houses of worship which have been built for the gratification of pride rather than the glory of God. To make a church pay taxes would seem to recognize this union, and the State has no right, some may say, to make a church help to support the State when its members do so as citizens. This may be true, but for myself, I believe, the State needs to make the churches pay for expending great sums on pride. I believe the State should fix a limit of exemption, say $20,000 (a lay brother suggests $3,000). Such a law would help some of our churches and keep them from shouldering such debts as they now do for building purposes.

III. THE BAPTISTS HAVE ADVOCATED THE SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE BECAUSE THEIR UNION IS CONTRARY TO GOD'S WORD, OPPOSED TO THE PRINCIPLES OF JUSTICE AND DESTRUCTIVE TO BOTH CHURCH AND STATE.

To advocate this union between Church and State would destroy every Baptist church in the world. Hence Baptists have stood firm for separation—complete separation.

This union is destructive to civil government. The testimony of the past bears us out in this declaration. If to-day we are to have union of Church and State, which church is to enjoy the union? That system carried out to-day will give us one government united to about seventy-five various denominations, and there would be about as much harmony as in a home where one man had seventy five wives. The union is impossible without destroying the government. Hence, Baptists have stood for separation—absolute separation.

This union is destructive to individual rights, hence opposed to principles of justice. The greatest injustice is that perpetrated by State churches. History abounds in examples which make the blood boil with righteous indignation. There can be no justice in compelling men to do that which Conscience and God tells them not to do. And the State church which calls in force commits a crime against God and man. Hence, Baptists have stood for separation—complete and absolute separation.

This union is opposed to the Word of God and hence dishonoring to him. Baptists have ever exalted God's Word. They have never seen anything like "non-essentials" in it. Every principle and practice set forth in that Word they have incorporated in the life of each church. They have honored God and God has honored them in letting them see the complete triumph of their principles in this land of ours. And many of our hoary heads, as they have seen these new victories, have cried with Simeon of old, "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, * * * for mine eyes have seen thy salvation."

God's kingdom is not of this world. The Christian's citizenship is in heaven. He must first of all render his obligations to that everlasting kingdom, and in so doing he fits himself for better citizenship in this world. Hence, the Baptist position of complete and absolute separation of Church and State for all generations and all nations. Upon this divine principle we stand, and for it we shall struggle until the humblest inhabitant on this globe and the remotest nation of the earth shall enjoy absolute freedom of worship, untrammeled by State, Church or clergy. For this we shall pray, and for this we shall labor. The battle is not ours, but the Lord's. He leads us to victory, honor and glory.

At the various conventions of the Missionary Alliance held during the summer, at least three hundred persons offered themselves for service, and the gifts and pledges reached an aggregate of $70,000. Rev. A. B. Simpson's sermon on the Macedonian Cry, at Old Orchard, Mass., was followed by a collection of $40,000. From one man came one fourth of that sum.

Paul thanked the Lord Jesus for putting him into the ministry. Do Christian laborers of the present day thank the Lord for the positions they hold in his work, or do they repine thereat? What say you to this question, pastor, deacon, Sunday school teacher, colporter, &c?

The evil word—and oh, remember this—is a step, a long step, beyond the evil thought, and is a step toward the precipice's edge.—F. W. Farrar.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

Is it not reassuring to know that Baptists are now many fold more numerous than the sect whose oppression once compelled them to fight for freedom's sake. There are latter day miracles.

"THEIR history for more than a century, in most of the colonies, is that of proscribed and banished men. Yet, persecuted themselves, it is their glory never to have persecuted others." That is plain history; and the historian wrote it of Baptists. No historian has ventured to make such an assertion of any other denomination.

Is it not encouraging to know that North Carolina Baptists have grown so that their jailers and whippers of the last century are pitiably out numbered now? Faith is rewarded.

God giveth the increase. God makes the weak strong. God humbles the oppressor and the proud.

YES, the Baptist Female University is still the youngest one of the most popular of the Convention's enterprises; and we are glad to know that Secretary Stringfield and the Board of Trustees feel more encouraged now than ever. The Secretary has received some handsome subscriptions recently, and there are many evidences of widening and deepening interest.

CLOSE church-life, which is nothing less than adherence to the faith once delivered, has served to do for Baptists what has been poorly done for other denominations by artificial hierarchies, "having a form of godliness, but denying (rather usurping) the power thereof." Close communion and close baptism are the two best known of many characteristic Baptist doctrines, through which God holds the denomination together, giving it strength and increase daily.

THESE words, from an address to North Carolina Baptists, written by Dr. T. E. Skinner as chairman of a committee appointed by the Convention in 1890, and incorporated in his recent compilation of sermons, addresses and reminiscences, are as pertinent as when they were first penned:—

"We may be a giant in our strength as a Christian people, and the giant may get to sleep. We must be awake, or we will be asleep. If not aggressive, we will be retrogressive; if not forward, then backward will be our tendency. We need consecrated churches, liberal brethren."

NORTH CAROLINA has been greatly honored by those whom she has sent out, and she now has some of God's choicest ones toiling at the front. These must be supported. For the half year ending September 30th North Carolina was asked to give $4 500 to Foreign Missions. During that time $2,-335 15 was received. God has, we believe, been pleased with many of the gifts that made up this amount. Many have given liberally. But much more is needed. Your missionaries, the perishing millions and the great "Lord of the Harvest" call for your help, brother. Will you not respond?

BAPTIST interference with civil affairs is ineffaceably impressed upon history—to God's glory and their credit.

Hear the authorities: Bancroft, "With greater consistency than Luther, they (Baptists) applied the doctrines of the Reformation to the social positions of life, and threatened an end to king-craft and priest-craft, spiritual dominations, titles, and vassalage. * * * During the reformation in England, through a full century and a half they struggled for liberty of conscience for all men, and in the time of Cromwell, but for the treason of Monk, they would have changed the entire system of Church and State. They never ceased to harangue the people and appeal to King and Parliament in behalf of SOUL LIBERTY." Locke: "The Baptists were from the beginning the friends of liberty; just and true liberty; equal and impartial liberty." Williams: "The share which the Baptists took in shoring up the fallen liberties of England, in infusing new vigor and liberality into the constitution of that country, is not generally known; yet to this body English liberty owes a debt it can never acknowledge."

George Washington wrote that much of the glory of the revolution was due Baptists. Baptists fought colonial church establishment. They petitioned presidents and legislators; and they impressed their love for soul liberty upon our Nation as well as England.

MISSIONS.

The work is never done. That seems discouraging; but it isn't. Without work, death would follow. In physical life paralysis is a natural result of disuse; in the spiritual it is not different.

Mission work is progressing, and the missionary spirit is growing; and we thank God for the encouragement in those two facts.

We do not doubt but that North Carolina Baptists are more alive to State, Home and Foreign Missions than ever. In a hard year, their contributions have been more than the average in better times; and missionary preaching is growing in favor. The effort has been to increase the number of givers of small amounts rather than to get large amounts from wealthy individuals, and with this view information has been extensively spread. Home and Foreign Missions have not wanted for advocates, but we would do the Secretary injustice if we should let the year close without special mention of State Missions.

Just a few days before Thanksgiving we happened to see Bro. Durham busily engaged writing orders for payment of the company of more than a hundred good and patient men whom North Carolina Baptists send into the desert places bearing the precious burden of the gospel to the poor and the unredeemed. And we knew the homes of our brethren would be cheerier and their humble hearts lighter and stronger for these orders.

It has been a year to look back upon; beginning with debt and perplexities, ending in clear sunlight. Secretary Durham had determination, and more—large faith in God and confidence in the brethren and sisters. He has carried a heavy load, but not once has he been distressed with the burden. Writing letters and articles and travelling and preaching and speaking, he ends the year in full assurance that the Lord has been with him and his work.

Much work remains. Churches are growing and adding strength to Zion; but many fields cry for help; and the workers, too, are ready.

The State Mission Board will present the best report in its history to the Convention, to be bettered we hope year by year until there are no waste places in all the State.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

The reader is not unaware of the efforts, in some localities strained and wild, in others conservative and wise, that are being made all over the land to "stir up" the young people.

The aim to make Christian workers more active and their work more efficient is a worthy one; but the means may be entirely unworthy.

We are firmly of the opinion that connection with Baptist Young People's Union of America is not only an unworthy means, but also unnecessary. Moreover it is difficult to perceive any reason why there should be a State organization of young people. State organizations among Baptists are for business purposes as a rule. Baptist zeal and inspiration comes from God, not Conventions nor celebrations nor salutes nor State yells. And Baptist churches of Christ offer the widest possible fields for work by young or old, and they cultivate Christian graces and duties as no other relations can. From a business standpoint there is not the remotest reason for organization, as it would be altogether unwise for the churches to set their younger members to disposing of funds.

State organization will alienate; it will deaden. State organization will give the young people a warped idea of their relations to their respective churches and the approved mediums of the churches, associations and conventions. State organization will divert the energies of many young church members into channels in which the training and developing power of God's churches will be set at naught. On another page is a brief article on the subject that meets our hearty endorsement.

The gathering together of two or three in Jesus' name, whether they be young or old, whether in North Carolina or Africa, is good; for God is there. Worship and study and works and growth in grace cannot be cultivated too frequently. Nor can young people be too frequently gathered together in Jesus' name for these aims.

During the year young people's meetings under church auspices have become a part of our work in many fields. The RECORDER has tried to encourage the institution of these meetings; but some who profess to be most intensely interested in the young people have seemed to be blind to the worth of anything short of State organization and National affiliation. The RECORDER has printed articles on every side of the question, most of them favoring general organization; but those that were published in favor of strictly local meetings were able and conclusive. In the year before us we hope the general effort will be for the encouragement and uplifting of the young people in their local meetings and usual church relations, instead of a prolongation of discussion.

Inasmuch as the topic will come in for no little interest this week, we publish the resolutions of the North Carolina and the Southern Baptist Conventions. It is to be observed that State organization is not commended in either.

IN 1880—which year marked the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the North Carolina Baptist State Convention—it was authoritatively stated that Baptists in North Carolina had increased twelve fold since the first Convention at Greenville, Pitt county. This is a monumental testimony to the God and the Gospel of Baptists.

In the fourteen years since 1880, the increase has been 150 000; and as the total number in 1880 was 175.000, the present number is 325 000, including negroes.

We cannot expect to maintain the ratio of increase that held in earlier years, for the simple reason that there is not room for such growth But there is room—vast, yawning room—in heathendom. North Carolina Baptists are even now doing heroic service for the Master in other parts of the general Vineyard; and as surely as the Lord God liveth the lengthening of the cords and strengthening of the stakes shall continue.

NOW THAT thanksgiving day has passed—we hope to the joyful uplifting of all our readers, and especially our orphans,—we desire to learn what the superintendent of our Orphanage intended to mean (we know well enough what the language means) by the statement in his letter to the Governor of the State to the effect that Religion and the State ought to go "hand in hand;" and and further, that the State ought to inspect religious institutions.

At any rate these are remarkable statements, coming as they do from Bro. Mills in official capacity; because Bro. Mills is himself a Baptist, and in any light his words are obnoxious to the spirit of Baptist principles. They are remarkable, also, because Bro. Mills is superintendent of an institution that had its origin (at least, in part) in opposition to the ideas to which Bro. Mills now seems committed.

We do not doubt but that the Baptists who built and who sustain our Orphanage desire to maintain it—but without the aid or inspection or intermeddling of the State or any of its officials.

IT IS said that books of North Carolina authorship and publication have seldom, if ever, met with financial success. The fact is lamentable.

It is nevertheless our candid opinion that the Baptist who will devote several years to clearing up and compiling a history of North Carolina Baptists from their first efforts to the present time, will not only be paid well for his time, but be worthily honored through time to come for his efforts. The writer of such a work must be a painstaking searcher and an unpartisan historian; and he must be well known to the denomination.

The need of such a work is apparent to every intelligent reader. In fact, the need of more reading matter about North Carolina in general is palpable.

Our Historical Society—of which Dr. Thomas Hume is president—will meet in Charlotte, an excellent program having been arranged. May we not hope that it will take decisive action toward making permanent the deeds of our fathers?

THREE streams of Baptists, each at first independent and uninfluenced by another, are united in the present main-stream of North Carolina Baptists.

The first Baptist settlers of the State came from England and Wales, settling in the Northeastern portion, and organizing their church, Shiloh, near Elizabeth City, in 1727, about twenty years after they had come over.

However, the first Association was formed by a subsequent settlement of entirely different extraction, the Shubal Stearns settlement from Massachusetts and New Jersey, settling in Chatham and Randolph, and forming the Sandy Creek Association. These were the brethren who with prophetic eye saw the promise that lay in the land to our North—now called the "sacred soil," that is, by its owners.

The third stream took its origin in Pennsylvania. The Yadkin Association, now more than a hundred years old, and many of its churches more than 125 years old, is a product of this influence.

It seems that God intended North Carolina to be strongly Baptist in population, thus early sending some of his most earnest children from divergent sources to divergent fields, that they might grow up into their mighty union of the present time.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. C. B. Justice has resigned the Rutherfordton pastorate.

....Rev. J. H. Vipman changes his address from Bethania to Culler.

....Our South Carolina brethren met in convention at Chester last week.

....Bro. J. E. Hutson is aiding Bro. J. S. Hardaway in a meeting at Oxford.

....Rev. J. B. Harrell of Mt. Olive will go to Wilmington Southside church.

....Pastors in need of assistance should consider our four months fifty cents offer.

....Every dollar devoted to State or Home Missions is a stake planted for Foreign Missions.

....Miss Emma Humphries, Gospel missionary, will sail for China, Dec. 10. God keep and direct her.

....Rev. J. J. Lansdell has been appointed United States Commissioner for the Eastern District of this State.

....Rev. W. F. Watson appears to be meeting with blessed success with Spurgeon Memorial Church, Norfolk

....Let those whom God keeps away from the Convention be with it in their prayers constantly this week.

....Rev. J. D. Betts will preach at the Asheville French-Broad church the next half year, and probably longer.

....Rev. W. R. Bradshaw has been called to Granite Falls, and Rev. J. L. Bennett to Peachland, says the N. C. Baptist

....We are very much afraid Bro. Van Deventer is about to be persuaded that the Lord needs him in far off Colorado.

....There is a narrow liberalism, and it is common; and it is so narrow that its gaseous followers can get in or out of anything.

....An esteemed contemporary is reminded that at all times honesty is preferable to courtesy; but generally they go "hand in hand."

....We thank our esteemed Bro. A. B. Covington for informing us that our church at Ramseur has called Rev. S. F. Conrad for next year.

....Rev. J. J Van Ness, editor of the Young People's Leader, was knocked down and dangerously hurt recently by Nashville foot pads.

....Our Wilson brethren and sisters held services in their new house for the first time last Sunday. Dr. Mundy is being richly blessed in his labors.

....Rev. L. G. Broughton is a member of the committee on Education of our Virginia General Association. This means that some body is to be waked up.

....The American Baptist Publication Society's publications for the first quarter of the new year have been received. As usual, they are excellently well done.

....Bro. J. F. Love is succeeding well with his work in Suffolk. More than twice as many members contribute now than did when Bro. Love took charge of the work.

....Judging by the harrowing earnestness of their appeals to subscribers, one would conclude that our Texas papers have about succeeded in clawing each other to death.

....We were glad to have Rev. W. A. Smith in to see us last week. About forty members have been added to his churches in recent months, and he looks well and happy.

....It is a fact—an historical fact, Prof. Whitsitt says—that North Carolina Baptists sent missionaries to Virginia once; but we can't get our brethren across the way to believe it.

....A correspondent of the Gastonia Gazette says Rev. J. J Payseur has taken charge of a school at Matthews station; and that Rev. D. P. Bridges will locate at Lincolnton.

....We are pleased to note that our friend and brother, Judge W. H. Eller, has become manager of Keeley Institute Greensboro, with Bro. W. C. Melton, M. D., physician in charge.

....Rev. W. S Ballard, who has been succeeded in his mission near Scotland Neck by Rev. J. A McKaughan, has gone on a visit to Southport, where Bro. Hildreth has been pastor.

...."THIS one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

....Rev. F. H Martin, late bishop of Lumberton, and much beloved by us, began work in his new field, Scottsville, Va., last Sunday. He leaves Lumberton united and strong, a pastorate fit for any man.

....Rev. W. J. Ward, known and loved by many North Carolinians, recently closed the first year of his pastorate at Moberly, Mo., during which the Lord has added ninety-nine members to his congregation.

....Rev. O. T. Edwards sends us four more subscribers, and writes: "I am at work for the RECORDER, and I want my people to read it this winter." Our fifty cents offer will carry the RECORDER to many this winter.

....The man who devises a plan by which people may be persuaded of the vanity of resolving about the number of souls wrecked by saloons, and show them the superiority of actions to words,—that man will get a crown.

....Would that something might be done to bring out a heartier support of our Ministerial Relief Board. None are more worthy of charity than God's venerable servants, none can appeal with more reason to our sympathies.

....Rev. Dr. Geo. Braxton Taylor, who recently resigned the pastorate of the First Baptist church, Macon, Ga., to which Rev. J. L. White is considering a call, has taken charge of Appomattox C. H. and Hebron churches in Virginia. His address is Nebraska, Va.

....China's Gibraltar, Port Arthur, has fallen; and Japan is having her own way. Peace, with glory to progressive, Christian Japan and disgrace to poor godless China, is an early probability. There has been slight trouble at Shanghai; but our missionaries are probably safe.

....The Caswell News says that the series of meetings at Yanceyville were discontinued on account of the illness of pastor J. B. Jones; and that Rev. D. J. Harris had to discontinue the special meetings at Kerr's Chapel on account of his wife's illness. We hope these illnesses are not serious.

....Of course Wake Forest will come in for no little of the Convention's attention. It is so closely linked with every thing Baptist in North Carolina that its interests ought to be the study of every one of us, educated or not. President Taylor contemplates large plans for the coming year.

....Rev. J. H. Lamberth of Greenville has been called to Mt. Airy and has accepted, says the News This is rather surprising. However, a good field is vacant, and a good field has a good pastor. We are glad Mt. Airy has an able, God fearing pastor; and we hope Greenville will not do without one long.

....In a conversation with Rev. W. J. W. Crowder, whose labors enable him to speak with authority, we were informed last week that the poor of Raleigh were now being better cared for than in years,—in fact, he said that none who were not too proud to accept help were suffering. Let this condition be maintained through winter.

....One hundred and twenty five or more children are now cared for at the Orphanage. So far as we can learn, all is going well with them. There is no sickness to speak of, and supplies, we believe, are more abundant than usual, though much money and miscellany—clothes, &c.—will be needed this winter. Help is never without room here.

....Last Sunday the new Baptist mission at Caraleigh Mills, near Raleigh, was dedicated Brethren Hunter and Pullen, who are laboring zealously for God in every part of Raleigh, inform us that the Caraleigh Sunday school numbers seventy five, and that the prayer meetings are well attended. A small debt—less than a hundred dollars—remains to be paid off.

....The venerable Joseph E Brown of Georgia, War Governor, Chief Justice, Senator, a man as near to the Georgia heart as Vance was to the North Carolina—none could be nearer than he—died Nov. 30th at Atlanta, aged seventy three years. He had been an active Baptist, and the erection of a beautiful Baptist church was one of the crowning acts of his days.

....Rev. H R. Moseley, a missionary of our Southern Board, who was so discourteous as to tell the whole truth about Romanist crime, cannot now labor among these people, for a ministry among whom he was especially fitted. He has also had to decline an appointment to New Mexico, U. S., on account of the Romanists. However, a man who will tell the truth vigorously can do well enough at home.

....Experience shows that there is no better month in the year than December to canvass for new subscribers. We want to introduce the RECORDER to a thousand homes by Christmas, and we will do it easily if our friends—and the reader is counted in that valued list—will say a word for the paper to one or more persons who do not get it. Remember the nineteen weeks' introduction price. Samples on application.

...."If any Methodist is troubled about the mode," says our gentle contemporary, the North Carolina Christian Advocate, commending a book on baptism, "send to Rev. T. J. Gattis & Son, Durham." If any Methodist, Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Romanist, Adventist, or Baptist is troubled about baptism, or anything else, we respectfully commend to them God and the Bible—no questions asked. The Bible doesn't lead one into doubt; men do, though.

....The beloved Secretary, Bro. John Mitchell, has reason to feel much encouraged with the prospects of the Board of Education. Nearly forty young men are now being helped. As we have observed, the new arrangement whereby the beneficiaries of the Board are required to give notes for the money advanced, will not only have a wholesome influence, but also increase the funds and the efficiency of the Board.

....Will you please answer this: If "immersion" by a Campbellite preacher, or by a schismatic Baptist preacher, (such as "Free Will," "Anti-Mission," "Anti-Baptist," "Mormon," &c.,) is valid for missionary Baptists, why not their "communion" also? Loose baptism and loose communion go together.—W. B. Harrell. As Bro. Jenkens says, we believe in One Lord, One Faith, One Baptism, One Lord's Supper, and all of them close.

....The names of the fourteen saintly men and wise, who—building better than they knew, building in simple faith in God—constituted and established the North Carolina Baptist State Convention, March 26th, 1830, in the court-house (after a preliminary meeting in a private house) at Greenville: Elders P. W. Dowd and R. M. Gufles of Raleigh; William B. Biddle of Craven county; Samuel Wait and John Armstrong of Newbern; Thomas Meredith of Edenton; James McDaniel of Cumberland; and brethren Thomas D. Mason, George Stokes and E. B. Blount of Greenville; H. Austin, P. P Lawrence and R. S Long of Tarboro; and Chas. W. Skinner of Perquimans.

....A good brother in another State, who went from North Carolina, says the pastors in the Old North State are careless about furnishing letters to members who leave the State. We think this indictment is rather a just one; however, we do not know that it is peculiar to North Carolina pastors. It is highly important that all pastors should see to it, as far as possible, that members moving away should carry their church letters with them.

....Dr. R. L. Abernethy, founder and President of Rutherford College, died at that institution the 28th ult. He was seventy two years old, and had labored earnestly and tenaciously as a teacher nearly half a century. He never said fail, and even the day of his death we were reading a plan he had devised to place Rutherford College on a firmer basis by June next; and if he had lived he would have put it into effect. His death after so many struggling years is touching indeed.

....Doubtless many of our readers were puzzled to learn from Prof. Howell that William Hooper was father of Wake Forest College. We revere the memory of this great man; but we would be unjust to another great one and untrue to history to allow any one to be called the father of Wake Forest College except Samuel Wait. Bro. Hooper was chairman of a committee that offered a report in the Convention in 1833 recommending establishment of a Baptist literary institution, but this was by no means the first of the matter. Samuel Wait was founder, and is more worthy the title of father than any other.

..., Rev. O C Horton writes from Selma, Nov. 26th, 1894: "We had Rev. C. W. Blanchard of East Durham with us at Selma from the first to the second Sunday in November. He was called away from us three nights, and then returned to gladden our hearts again with more of his good preaching. He puts so much gospel in his sermons, and delivers the message in such a manner as to make you forget as you listen, who is telling that story of God's love so sweetly. His presence in our home was a benediction, and he very much endeared himself to all who heard him preach. Smithfield, Johnston county, is offering him a home."

....Calvary Baptist church, Roanoke, Va., Rev. L G. Broughton pastor, will be dedicated next Sunday. Rev. F. C. McConnell, who made so many friends at our enjoyable Elizabeth City Convention, will preach the opening sermon for Bro. Broughton. McConnell was known far and wide as an all around cyclone until he struck Lynchburg; but we hear comparatively so little of him these days that we are in a good humor to believe Lynchburg is a cyclone pit of terrible dimensions. By the way, the Religious Herald reports Elder C. J. Thompson happy and prospered of the Lord in his work with the College Hill saints at Lynchburg.

....Elder W. H. Wilson of Madison writes and sends us the following good news: "The first Sunday in November I commenced a meeting at Sharon, which lasted eight days, and resulted in about thirty professions, with fourteen uniting with the church. Bro. C. M. Billings of Virginia was with me six days. The second Sunday night I commenced a meeting at one of my mission points which lasted twelve days, which resulted in about twenty five professions, with sixteen uniting with the church. Bro. Billings was with me three days in this meeting. Since the first of September, I have received fifty into the fellowship of the Madison church. The Lord has blessed us, and we are glad."

....Prof. Carlyle of Wake Forest was in to see us last Saturday, and he reported everything at Wake Forest as in excellent shape; 310 enrolled and the prospect good for new men in January. The general verdict is that the College secured a rare prize in Prof. Gorrell, who is proving not only an accomplished Modern Language scholar, but on several occasions has demonstrated a rounded general acquaintance that enables him to supply other Chairs when necessary. Bro. Haywood is doing just as those who knew him expected,—that is, thorough, efficient and faithful work. There is quite a gratifying degree of interest in Physical Culture under the direction of Bro. Durham.

....Every one laments the destructive fire at Marion. In looking over the lists, we have been acutely grieved to perceive that many of our brethren and friends suffered from it. Bro. B. B. Price, Clerk of the Superior Court for McDowell county, one of the RECORDER'S most valued friends, writes: "Our church has sustained a heavy loss by the fire, as several of our leading merchants were Baptists, and all were burned out, with little insurance. Also, Bro. Wm. Dellinger lost his hotel, without insurance." The entire loss is $100 000, which places it among the most destructive of North Carolina fires. May God make it clear to the sufferers that all things are working for their good.

....We are indebted to the enterprise of the Statesville Landmark for excellent daily reports of the Conference of our Methodist brethren of the West last week. There are 188 local preachers in this Conference and 34,925 members. They "baptised" (!) 2 075 children and 2 816 adults last year. They have 603½ churches valued at $652 682, and 36 parsonages valued at $118,167; other property, $42,898. The amounts raised last year for different objects were: Presiding Elders $9 888.79, preachers in charge $68,776 87, bishops $1,143 40, Conference claimants $3 011.91, foreign missions $3,169 20, domestic missions $4,756 96, church extension $1,475 49, education $1,752 10, Payne and Lane Institute $99 13, missionary debt $3,591 84, expenses of delegates to General Conference $1,63 69, Bible cause $147 89, building and repairing churches and parsonages $89 657 82, Sunday-school purposes $6,727 97, for all other objects $16 911 94—making total from all sources $166,619 46. The North Carolina Conference (East) meets at Durham this week.

....The Virginia brethren will meet in annual session at Petersburg next year. Last year they contributed $50 049 90, divided as follows: To State Missions, $10.141.95; to Home Missions, $8.167 50; to Foreign Missions, $18.792 03; to Sunday-school and Bible Board, $6 295.29; to Education Board, $5,215 73; and to Ministers' Relief Fund, $2,437 49. The aggregate falling off from last year's report was about $10,500.

....Broadway church, Louisville, revival in progress. Bro. J. L. White of North Carolina preached. Sunday was the greatest day Pastor Pickard ever saw anywhere. Not less than one hundred asked for prayer Sunday night. Seventeen were received for baptism. Bro White preaches every night. —Western Recorder, Nov. 22 Since this report there have been many more professions and forty seven additions to the church.

....Prest. Charles F. Meserve of Shaw University, the leading institution in the world for the education of the negro, Raleigh, N. C., has our thanks for a copy of his account of a Tour of Observation among Indians and Indian Schools in Arizona, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Kansas. Prest. Meserve has a thorough acquaintance with his subject, and we hope to give our readers the benefit of some of his observations in a later number. We are happy to say that Prest Meserve is succeeding excellently with the University. The various departments are well patronized, and there is every evidence that the new president is building well upon the structure left by President Tupper.

....Deacon P. C. Caddell died at his home in Moore county on the 30 h ult., aged seventy four years, after many months of ill health. Bro. Caddell was born and reared in Moore county. He had been a deacon of Bethlehem church half a century, serving ably but without ostentation. He was an unassuming man. He peformed his duties and pursued his vocation (farming) with singular zeal and faithfulness; and when he came to die, one who was competent to speak said that he had never heard any but good words for Bro. Caddell. Although uneducated himself, he was so prospered that he educated all his children, of whom seven are now living. To these, and especially to his oldest son, who represents the RECORDER, we are sure the sympathy of our readers goes out.

....We observe that the State "Normal and Industrial" statistical self glorification works have resumed operation. Dun or Bradstreet would hardly class this as an evidence of permanent revival of legitimate industry, however. Will some one kindly inform President McIver that the fathers of the young ladies at the State "Normal and Industrial" are not so much concerned to know whether they themselves are farmers or shoemakers or capitalists as whether their daughters are doing anything in the normal and industrial line or not? And, well, we must confess to a sensation of relief, since we saw the statement that the average age of the students is nineteen and a half years. That assures us that they will have time to learn how to teach after they graduate.

....The current number of the Wake Forest Student is the best, taken all in all, that has been sent out in two years. The contributions possess a tone—in their very titles—that raises one's expectations; and the reading is anything but disappointing. Judge Clark narrates curious and timely facts regarding "The Physical Napoleon the First," in an article all too short: Dr. Gorrell contributes "The Sea in Old English Poetry," the thorough finish of which bespeaks much care and research by one well-versed in Old English imagery, and gives it peculiar value. The writer of "Politics in the Palmetto State" is confessedly an ardent Tillmanite; but he shows clean grasp of some very complicated political conditions. "The Croatans," old in song and story, a tradition worth frequent retelling, is Mr. J. N. Tolar's subject. Editor Beasley translates verse from Heine, which is literal and metrical. Other contributions are "Gone to Norway" in dialect, for which Mr. Gore has unquestionable turn, "A Lullaby" that jingles well, by Mr. Leigh, a sophomore, "Was Marshal Ney Executed," which is naturally interesting, and the conclusion of a story of adventure, by one of the editors, which with Mr. Gore's contribution, serves to relieve the magazine of a stiffness otherwise unavoidable in such an array of historical, literary and speculative work.

....Prof. Howell's remarks on Prest. Taylor's "attitude toward public education" may be advantageously considered in the light of several pertinent facts. Dr. Taylor has spoken in every part of the State in the last twenty years; and it is hardly possible to persuade any who heard him that he is not a vigorously active friend of the public schools. His late articles are sound and clear on the subject. Wake Forest men, at least, know that Dr. Taylor has been running a big school agency, without charge, for years. The fact is, there are about as many Wake Forest men in public and other schools as men from any other college in this State, if not more. True, indeed, it is, and pity 'tis, the colleges have met the insuperable barrier of University and church influence in their efforts to get men in the Graded Schools. Goldsboro, for instance, is a fair example. When Prof. Joyner resigned, we are informed three Wake Forest men were advised to apply. One at least of these applied, well endorsed. At the time a prominent citizen of Goldsboro wrote: "I should be more than glad to have ..... secure the place. I shall be glad to forward his interests in any way that I can. There is one thing, however, that I should mention: I believe that the University will be more influential in this particular case than Wake Forest College." Dr. Taylor might have gone to Goldsboro and "hob nobbed his man in"; but such methods are rather distasteful to him and other educators.

The Past and Future

THE BEST YEAR'S WORK AND CONTRIBUTIONS IN THE HISTORY OF THE CONVENTION.

"The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad." The Lord hath said, "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy. He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." These words have been put to the test and found true. At Elizabeth City the Convention said, "Pay off the old debt in ninety days." It was done. It said, "Go to the next session with all missionaries of the Board paid for their year's work." This has been done. More has been done than during any one year of the sixty four of the Convention. Bold, aggressive work from the days of the Lord on earth has ever given the victory to our cause.

SPIRITUAL POWER.

The meeting of the Convention we need this year, it seems to me, is a meeting of real spiritual power. To this end, I most earnestly ask each and every one whose eye follows these lines to pray God daily, till the Convention is closed, Tuesday, Dec. 11th, to give the Holy Spirit to all the members of the Convention in great power while they meet from day to day and review the past and plan for the future. I cannot too strongly emphasize the importance of this spiritual power, as I see it, and realize it. More and more let us all humbly cry to God:

"Close to Thee, close to Thee;
All along my pilgrim journey,
Saviour, let me walk with Thee."

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

At the Atlantic Association, in October last, I heard Rev. C. A. Jenkens of Goldsboro preach on "The Lord's Supper." The sermon was, by request of the Association, published in the RECORDER of Nov. 28. I know of no better, short, Scriptural, practical presentation of "the Lord's Supper." I am anxious to serve the cause of truth and our Baptist cause, by having at least 25,000 copies of this sermon printed in tract form, in good type, and in good shape, and distributed in this State. I can have this done for one hundred dollars. I await the pleasure of some brother or sister who can enable me to do this much-needed work. Here is an opportunity to serve the Lord's cause. Who will do it? C. DURHAM.

To the Baptist State Convention.

As I think of you about to meet in the city of Charlotte, I think of two brethren closely connected with my first knowledge of Charlotte, who will not be in your meeting this year. When the Convention last met there, these two brethren both lived in Charlotte, and many a pleasant group gathered in their parlors.

Bro. R H. Griffith had just finished his canvas of the State in the interest of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, and was about entering upon his brilliant work in South Carolina in behalf of three great interests. Bro. Theo. Whitfield was in the midst of a useful pastorate of the church in Charlotte, and was laying plans for the erection of the house of worship in which the sessions of the Convention are now held. These brethren both did much foundation work in Charlotte, and the Convention this year will see something of what others have built upon their foundation. But now their work is ended. They are not now in Charlotte to greet the brethren as they come from all parts of the State; they have joined the greater Convention, and possibly are waiting to greet their fellow laborers, as one by one we are to go up after the toil to give an account of our labors.

Remembering these and others who have gone on before, and striving to emulate them in proportion as they followed the Master, we meet to talk over the work of the closing year, and to gather encouragement for those which are to come.

Absent in body, but present in spirit, I send across the lands and the seas this word of greeting, together with a few words about the state of the work in this part of China.

Here, too, some of the workers have closed their labors and entered into rest. Two of our preachers have died of consumption. One, a man of considerable preaching gifts, had not been in the employ of the missionaries for a year or two. The other had never received any salary from the mission, but received his support from friends in America. But he always worked in close connection with us. He was not a very popular preacher, but a man of unusual zeal and consecration, and a man of great power in bringing men to Christ by personal contact. The work among the women has suffered a great loss in the death of the most earnest and efficient of the Bible women, who was one of the earliest victims of the plague. Another has been forced to give up regular work to take care of her motherless grandchildren, her daughter having fallen a victim to the plague.

Sickness has weakened our force of missionaries. Early in the year Dr. and Mrs. Graves had to leave for a period of rest at home. Perhaps they will be with you in your meetings. If they are, get as much information from them as their strength will permit them to give; let them rest that they may soon come back to us. They will make very interesting talks; but to hear them at their best, you ought to hear them surrounded by the Chinese and delighting to give them needed instruction.

Miss McMinn has had a long spell of typhoid fever, and for a long time it was feared that she must go home; but she seems now to be recovering very rapidly. Bro. Simmons has been feeble part of the summer, but has kept at work. Mrs. McClay has been quite feeble for a long time, and soon she and Bro. McClay must go away for a long rest.

During the summer our work was much hindered by the scourge of "black plague," which carried off hundreds of thousands of people in the city of Canton. The enemies of foreigners made this the occasion of circulating many slanders upon all foreigners, and then passed over all south China a wave of violent anti-foreign rage. For a little while it was dangerous for a foreigner to be found away from home among the Chinese. Two ladies, physicians of another denomination, were severely stoned by a Chinese mob within a short distance of their own home. There was also some persecution of native Christians. Two of our young men, who work under my direction as colporters of the American Bible Society, were severely beaten in a market town, and also suffered the loss of most of their clothing. One native preacher, connected with the Presbyterian Mission, was killed by a Chinese mob.

During this time, almost all work ceased. The summer is the best time to preach in the chapels along the streets in the city. This work was greatly hindered, though one of our chapels was opened for preaching some days in every week, and services were held every Sunday.

During the very hot weather, it is not safe to make long country trips as we do at other times of the year. By the time the hot weather was passed, the people had grown quiet, and we now go where we will again be without molestation.

The war between China and Japan is so far away from us that it has not yet brought any danger to us as it has to our brethren in North China.

Amid all these hindrances and discouragements, there are hopeful signs. The reports are in for the third quarter of the year, and the baptisms for the year already number sixty seven. Two churches have been organized among the Hakkas, and they have now a total membership of nearly two hundred. Several other churches ought to be organized before long. These two are making earnest efforts to build houses of worship appropriate to their circumstances, and will soon succeed. Another small chapel is in progress in the Kwong Sai Province. On the other hand our preacher has been driven out of Ng Chow, the chief city of that Province. He had rented a small house for his family and fitted up a front room in which to preach to any who would hear. The officials came to his house and ordered him to leave, and a few days afterwards an official led a mob to tear down the house, although it had only been rented.

For months we have been trying to erect a small house at Shin Hing that some of us might live there most of the year. When the walls were eight feet high, the officials ordered the work to stop, and nothing has been done since. Just now we are hopeful that we may be allowed to finish, as we have greatly modified our plans to conform to their requirements.

These reverses and discouragements are not greatly unlike those which come in the work at home. The work which I thought would be finished in a few months took as many years. When done, it lacked much of being what I had hoped to see it. At another place the results more nearly accorded with my wishes. So it is here; so it probably is everywhere in this life. There are many adversaries, but there is a wide and effectual door. Many hear the gospel and have an opportunity to believe. A few believe and are saved. The yearly increase is from ten to fifteen per cent.

Sometime there will be a great turning to the Lord in China. For this let us labor and pray. We are fellow-laborers for God; we are co-workers with God. You, in Convention, are laying plans, and through the year are striving to execute them. We here are going up and down, in broken language, telling the people of Jesus and his love. God is working through us and with us to glorify the name of his Son in the salvation of souls.

Our Two Conventions on the Young People's Societies.

REPORT ADOPTED BY THE BAPTIST STATE CONVENTION, AT THE SESSION OF 1893.

Whereas, many of our churches have moved to secure the increased activity of our Baptist young people in Christian service and their instruction in the Scriptures, Baptist doctrine and history, and their enlistment in all forms of missionary work; we recommend—

1. That a committee of five be appointed by the President of this Convention to aid by letters, and newspaper articles, and in other ways, the organization of local societies of young people.

2. That we recommend to the young people's societies "The Young People's Leader," published by the Baptist Sunday school Board, at Nashville, Tenn.

Respectfully submitted,
R. VAN DEVENTER,
J. H. EDWARDS,
H. B. DUFFIE,
F. H. MARTIN,
W. A. PARHAM,
Committee.

Remarks were made by R. Van Deventer, J. B. Boone, Thomas Hume, C. W. Scarboro, G. M. Webb, C. S. Blackwell and T. H. Pritchard.

The President appointed R. Van Deventer, Thomas Hume, T. H. Pritchard, C. S. Blackwell and C. W. Scarboro as the committee provided for in the report of the Committee on Young People's Societies. [From Minutes, 1893, pp. 68, 69.]

RESOLUTIONS OF THE SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION, AT SESSION OF 1894.

WHEREAS, There is at this time a widespread movement in the direction of the organization of Christian young people into societies for various kinds of study and work; and

Whereas, This movement, so far as concerns the young people of our churches, gives promise of great good if wisely directed; therefore

Resolved, 1. That the Convention call the attention of the churches to this movement, suggesting to them the advisability of uniting the directing thereof each within itself.

Resolved, 2. That we recommend to the churches the organization, where practicable, of young people's societies, unions, or whatever they may be called, or at least the holding of young people's meetings, in which the young people shall be aided in the study of the Bible, our denominational history and doctrines, and of the work being carried on by us as a denomination; and in which they shall be stimulated to effort in the development of Christian character and activity.

Resolved, 3. We recommend that these societies, unions, or meetings, as the case may be, shall be strictly denominational, and shall be under the control and direction of the local churches, and that any contributions they shall make shall be for the objects fostered by the churches and shall pass through the church-treasury.

Resolved, 4. That all questions concerning the form these organizations shall take, and their combining into Associational, State, or more general organizations, ought to be determined entirely by the local church to which they belong, and which, under God, has the right to direct their actions, according to his Word.

Resolved, 5. That we earnestly commend to the churches the special training of the young people with regard to the specific work of this Convention as carried on by its three Boards—Foreign, Home, and Sunday-school.

Resolved, 6. That we recommend to all Young People's Societies and the churches generally the Young People's Leader, published by the Sunday School Board of this Convention at Nashville, Tenn., as peculiarly adapted to aid them in their study and work.

Resolved, 7. That we suggest to the Sunday school Board the preparation for distribution of such literature as shall be suitable for use in the organization and conduct of Young People's Societies such literature to be in accord with the above recommendations.—[From Minutes, 1894, pp. 36, 37.]

Public School Statistics.

The annual report of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction for this year shows: Receipts, $767,803 63; disbursements, $774 287 57; balance on hand in 1893, $324,228 07; balance this year, $195 769 40; number of whites of school age, 389.709; enrollment, 235 486; number of colored of school ages, 312,191; enrollment, 138 899; number of white school districts, 3 123; colored, 2 424; schools for whites, 4 811; for colored, 2,296 (not including city schools, of which thirteen are reported, all graded schools); valuation of white school property $917,146.08; colored, $301,149.08; average length of school terms, thirteen weeks; average salary of teachers of country schools—white males, $35 50; females, $33.08; colored—males, $3 08; females, $19 27. There are 4,356 white school houses and 2,010 colored.

Large demands for smokers, cutters and wrappers. Business always dispatched with promptness and accuracy and full market prices always obtained at Parrish's Warehouse.

Publisher's Announcement.

The American Baptist Publication Society has reduced the price of the Bible Lesson Pictures which have proved so popular, and hereafter they will be furnished to schools for $1 00 per quarter. The price heretofore has been $1 25 per quarter. The popular price at which they are now furnished ought to secure for them a place in many Sunday-schools.

The price of the smaller picture cards issued by the Society will remain the same as heretofore, three cents per quarter. It has been announced quite extensively that the price would be raised to four cents, but it has been found possible to retain the former price.

Charles Dickens' Son.

Charles Dickens has written for the forthcoming volume of The Youth's Companion a series of reminiscences of his famous father. The same volume will also contain an article on "Lord Tennyson Among Children," by Theodore Watts, the celebrated critic of the London Athenæum, and still another article on "Bismark's Boyhood," by Sidney Whitman, one of the few Englishmen who have the privilege of an intimate personal acquaintance with the famous German statesman.

Relation of the Church to Societies Among Her Members.

BY T. T. EATON, D. D.

I am unable to quote Scripture on this subject for I find no passages authorising the existence of such societies. Elders, deacons and saints made up the New Testament churches, and with these their organization was complete. The utmost I would venture to claim for societies in churches is that since certain work has been assigned the churches, they may organize their members for the effective doing of this work, and thus bring together those of the members who can work most efficiently together. The societies will thus be virtually committees, appointed by the church for special service and reporting to the church.

Whatever societies are in a church, they should exist by authority of the church, and do the work appointed by the church, and should have no allegiance to any organization outside of the church. If a society in a given church belongs to a body to which the church does not belong there is, necessarily, a divided allegiance, and this is a defective allegiance. Just as a man's allegiance to the United States government is defective if he owes any allegiance to the Pope of Rome.

Moreover, if the society belongs to a body to which the church does not belong, it will necessarily become more and more alienated from the District Association, the General Association, and the Southern Baptist Convention, because, regarding these as bodies for the church to be interested in, the society will regard the other body as the one for them to be interested in.

This is particularly true of young people's societies. If they have a convention or other general body to which they belong, distinct from the District Association, General Association, and Southern Baptist Convention, they will regard these as belonging to the old people while they are to take an interest in the young people's body. Their interest and their enthusiasm are thus directed away from the regular denominational churches, and, as the old people pass away, these channels will run dry. If the young people's convention does the same work as the regular bodies then we will have two organizations appealing to the same constituency for the same sort of work, which all will agree is not wise. If, however, the young people's convention undertake different work, leaving missions and benevolence to the regular bodies, then the young people's sympathies will be more and more enlisted in the work their convention is doing, and be more and more alienated from the regular mission and benevolent work of the denomination.

This has been manifest in the North. The Examiner and other papers have complained bitterly that well nigh all the interest and enthusiasm were carried to the B. Y. P. U. A. Convention at Toronto, while there was a sad lack of both at the anniversaries at Saratoga. An age line is the most unfortunate of all lines to run through the churches. And of all the societies in a church it is most important that the young people's society have no outside allegiance.

Each church can decide how her own forces can best be organized for most efficient service. If societies, which shall virtually be committees, are needed, let the church say how many there shall be, what shall be their duties, their organization and their functions. Let them do just such work as the church appoints, and train the members' sympathies and activities along regular denominational lines. Let no society have any connection with any organization of which the church is not a part, and let the society owe no sort of allegiance outside the church. Such then, it seems to me, is the proper relation of the church to societies among its members.—Seminary Magazine.

Nothing Stands as High, as a remedy for every womanly ailment, as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Here is the proof. It's the only medicine for woman so certain in its effects that it can be guaranteed. In every case, if it doesn't cure, your money is returned. Can anything else, though it may be better for a tricky dealer to sell, be "just as good" for you to buy!

"Favorite Prescription" is an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and strengthening nervine, and a complete cure for all the fundamental derangements, painful disorders and chronic weaknesses peculiar to the sex.

For young girls entering womanhood; for women at the critical "change of life"; for women approaching confinement; nursing mothers; and every woman who is "run-down," tired, or overworked—it is a special, safe, and certain help.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation, piles, biliousness, indigestion, or dyspepsia, and headaches.

I call perfect health the loveliest thing in this world, and alcohol even in small doses will take the bloom off, will injure the perfection of loveliness of health, both mental and moral. I go still further and say, alcohol is not only no helper of work, but a hinderer of work, and every man that comes to the front of a profession in London is marked by this one characteristic, that the more busy he gets the less in the shape of alcohol he takes, and his excuse is, "I am very sorry, but I cannot take it and do my work."—Sir Andrew Clark.

The Unpardonable Sin.

BY REV. M. A. JONES.

An article in a recent RECORDER on "Blaspheming the Holy Spirit," suggests some thoughts upon this dreadful sin. It is a matter that I have studied very closely for the benefit of myself as well as others. It appears to me that men frequently get this sin confounded with other sins; consequently they have no clear conception of what is really taught by the Master when he mentioned this sin.

Some have said a man may continue in sin and become so hardened that he is given over to the Devil, and there is no salvation for him. Grant this to be true; yet I do not see that is committing the unpardonable sin. It may terminate in an unpardoned sin; but there is a vast difference in dying an unpardoned sinner and being guilty of the unpardonable sin. All who die without repentance and faith, die unpardoned sinners; but it is not always true—and rarely is ever the case—that such have committed the unpardonable sin.

There must be a difference between grieving the Spirit, resisting the Spirit, and blaspheming the Spirit, for the Scriptures clearly teach this.

1. We speak of grieving the Spirit. (1) Who may grieve the Spirit? Believers may be guilty of grieving the Spirit. Eph. 4: 30. Addressed to the church at Ephesus. (b) How may we grieve the Spirit? By envy, malice, anger, hatred, &c. Eph. 4: 31, 32

2. We notice what is meant by resisting the Spirit. (1) Who resists the Spirit? The unregenerate and unbelieving. Acts 7: 51, and John 16: 8—11. (b) How do they resist the Spirit? By rejecting the gospel and its offers of mercy, as they come to us through the operations of the Spirit. Their better judgment had been reached, but their hearts were bitter against the light and the truth. Acts 7: 51—54; Isa. 65: 2, 3; Prov. 1: 25; John 5: 40.

3. Blaspheming the Holy Spirit, or the unpardonable sin. (1) When and how may we be guilty of this awful sin? We read in Matt. 12: 22, of one possessed with a demon, blind and dumb; and he healed him, insomuch that the dumb man spoke and saw, &c. Here we have a display of God's miraculous power to heal and forgive sin; yet in the face of this, they say he hath a devil and casteth out demons by Beelzebub, the prince of demons. Read carefully and mark the arguments brought forth by Jesus, and their inability to answer them. Matt. 12: 25—29. Now we turn to Mark 3: 20—30, similar to Matthew, but more explicit. The greatest difficulty is our distinguishing the difference between grieving the Spirit, resisting the Spirit, and blaspheming the Spirit, or wilfully and maliciously accusing Christ of performing his miracles through and by the power of Beelzebub, the prince of demons. Now Mark says in the third chapter, 30th verse, "because they said he hath an unclean spirit, hath never forgiveness, but is guilty of an eternal sin." For this accusation brought against the Holy Spirit in the face of light, knowledge and power, the Son of God said they hath never forgiveness, but are guilty of an eternal sin. Mark 3: 30.

I insist that all who may read this article do so with an open Bible, giving strict attention to all the references.

Our Boys.

BY ARACHNE.

The average parent takes little interest in the school duties of his children. He sends the boy to school. Now all his duty is done. He has "touched the button"—the teacher must "do the rest."

Can the teacher "do the rest?" What is the "rest?" Ah! there's the rub—and it is a rub.

In one of the school English grammars, now in use, occurs this sentence, for analysis: "It is useless to fight custom with grammar." How true! The boy is under the teacher for five, or, say, six hours a day. He is under parental control, or ought to be, the other eighteen hours. One fourth of his time under restraint at school—three-fourths of his time not at school. Where is the average boy during those eighteen hours? Give him eight hours for sleep and one more for meals; then we have nine hours left. Where does this average boy spend these hours? Does he spend two of them in study at his home? Hardly. But give him these two hours—we should give the one on trial the benefit of every reasonable doubt, as the judge says, when charging the jury,—then what becomes of the seven hours still left? Spent in lawful, honorable play? Not if this average boy can help it—and he generally helps it.

He has learned to smoke the deadly cigarette—though the law says that they shall not be sold to minors. He has learned to use profane language, though the fond mother declares that her boy is immaculate in this respect. He is an expert gambler, though doting papa asserts that his boy never heard of such a thing. He learns to drink ardent spirits, though both parents say vehemently "it is a lie!"

Again, this average youngster, remember, spends three-fourths of his time with those who think very little of grammatical accuracy of language, and care less. How then can you expect him to learn to "speak the English language correctly?"

Now, then. With nearly everything to pull him back, and very little to urge him forward to a good education, how is it possible for the average boy to be made into a reputable citizen?

Is it any wonder that our land swarms with youthful criminals and annoyers of the of the public peace? If the parents of our land do not wake up to the responsibilities that the Creator has laid upon them, they may live to mourn for a country "disordered, discordant, belligerent."

Song for the Shut-in. Compiled by Mary Craig Yarrow. 18mo, printed in red and black and bound in artistic cloth. Price 75 cents, postpaid. Thomas Whittaker, Publisher, 2 and 3 Bible House, New York.

Only a few persons perhaps know of the society called the "Shut-in-Society." It was organized a few years ago and now numbers over a thousand members. "To be a sufferer, shut in from the outside world, constitutes one a proper candidate for membership." Associate members are persons who, by writing letters, sending papers and books, and little presents, cause some brightness to shine into the hard, dull lives of those who on account of sickness spend their days indoors, often in one room.

This collection of songs dedicated to this society, has been selected with much care from a variety of sources and from the best authors, with special reference to the severe trials of these our suffering brethren. We hope that all who know of any who are spending their lives in pain, often in poverty and unutterable loneliness of heart, will send a copy of this collection of verses to them, and thus in some degree make lighter their heavy crosses, and put a little sunshine into their dark lives, and help them to learn the lesson in the lines of Ugo Bassi:

"And while we suffer, let us set our souls
To suffer perfectly; since thus alone,
The suffering, which is this world's special grace,
May here be perfected and left behind."

An Outline Handbook of the Life of Christ. This Handbook has been prepared by Profs. W. A. Stevens and E. DeWitt Burton as an aid to the historical study of the Four Gospels, and is intended for use not only in colleges and theological schools, but in clubs for private study and in Bible classes of all grades. The scope and plan of the book is indicated by the following table of its contents: Map of Palestine in the Time of Christ. Principal Divisions of the Life of Christ. Analytical Outline of the Life of Christ. Index to the Analytical Outline. Sayings of Christ assigned by the Evangelist to more than one occasion. Method of Study. Principle Divisions, with Calendar dates. Leading events of Jewish History from 536 B. C. to A. D. 70. Diagram of the History of Palestine from 37 B. C. to A. D. 66. It may be used with no other accompaniment than the New Testament, or the study may be facilitated by the employment of the companion volume, A Harmony of the Gospels, for historical study, by the same authors. This Handbook is the product of years of experience in teaching the Life of Christ to classes of varied attainments, and is confidently recommended to teachers. Silver Burdett & Company, Publishers, Boston. Price, 50 cents.

Peloubet's Select Notes. A commentary on the Sunday-school Lessons for 1895, by Rev. F. N. Peloubet, D. D., and M. A. Peloubet, 346 pp. Illustrated, $1.25. W. A. Wilde & Co., 25 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.

Geo. Macdonald's affirmation, "Age is not decay; it is the ripening of the fresh life within," comes forcibly to one's mind as he scans the 21st annual volume of Dr. Peloubet's unrivalled Select Notes. The present volume clearly indicates the "ripening of the fresh life within," as in breadth of thought, clearness of illustration, and remarkable putting of essential truths, Dr. Peloubet has surely outdone himself and this is really praise enough. The Select Notes have, for many years, been the constant companion of thousands of leading Christian workers, who have found in them just the condensed matter that they desired when it was not wise or convenient to consult the more elaborate standard commentaries, and the popularity of the book the world over has been steadily increasing, because both the editor and publishers have in every respect sought out and furnished only the best things. This year the first six months completes the study of the Life of Christ, and the Notes supply an abundance of the most helpful and interesting material regarding both the action and aim of the last years of our Master. In July the International Lessons go back to the Old Testament, and with great skill the editor has garnered such facts, illustrations, and explanations as will so illumine the text as to make it intelligible and profitable to every teacher and scholar. The whole volume is freely illustrated, and with its finely drawn, accurate maps and beautifully printed pages is a delight to possess, both for its external beauty and its positive helpfulness to every student of the Bible.

The Christian Sanctified by the Lord's Prayer. By the author of "The Hidden Life of the Soul." Translated from the French. Pages 118 bound in white leatherette, price 25 cents postpaid. Published by Thomas Whittaker, 2 and 3 Bible House, New York.

This is a very beautiful devotional commentary of the Lord's Prayer, written a hundred years ago by that godly Frenchman, Pere Grou. It contains eleven chapters of instructions, remarkable for their directness, thoroughness and simplicity. Indeed, the author appears to have been one of those rare spirits to whom it is given to discover in solitude and prayer things hidden from others. We feel that all who love the Lord's Prayer will welcome this remarkable exposition of its several petitions will and find it an aid to a higher and holier life. The cheapness of the little book ought to insure for it a wide circulation.

The suggestion that farmers whose daughters remain at home and do the work of hired help—as is often the case—should pay them wages, is a good one. If the girls would serve half so faithfully in any other than the house of their father, they would receive good wages.

A good corn crop will produce not less than two tons of actual digestible food material per acre, or more than twice as much as a heavy hay crop.

Resolutions to Those Bereaved by Diphtheria.

Resolved, 1st, That the Sunday-school of Eaton's church extend heartfelt sympathy to those of our members who have been bereaved by the loss of their little ones.

Resolved, 2nd, That we lament the loss of eight of our scholars—six from the primary class and two from the intermediate.

Resolved, 3rd, That we praise the Lord for the assurance of their resting in peace with our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. All were children under the age of six years, save two, and those two were respectively eleven and fourteen years of age. The latter—a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Eaton—had been received into Eaton's church three weeks previous to her death. "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me; for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 19: 14. "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them." Eccle. 12: 1.

Resolved, 4th, That we thank the Lord for discontinuing his afflictions in the form of diphtheria.

Resolved, 5th, That we extend thanks to those churches and friends who made special prayer for our bereaved community in the time of need.

Resolved, 6th, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our minutes; that a copy be sent to each of those churches and friends who made special prayer for us, and that one each be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER and Charity and Children for publication.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

An Indian Woman's Sketch.

Several pressed their need of a holy house; but the speech of the occasion was made by an Indian woman, who said: "I am not a gifted speaker, but in the gladness of my heart to-day when I saw you coming, I cried, 'Oh, would to God, that he would give me words that may do good! I remembered 'The meek and lowly, they shall be exalted,' and so I tried to be quiet and do my duty. But I saw the birds, though they have no hands, they make their nests in which to lay their eggs and rear their young, and I thought perhaps, we, too, though weak, can make for ourselves a house. With this mind of having a church, we women worked and raised money, and with this mind we went to convocation, and when you took our sixty dollars, we came away glad at heart."

And again, protesting with an embarrassed air that she had no gifts as a speaker, and had forgotten half her speech, she sat down. To fame, too, she was a shabby Indian! There was neither paint nor feathers, only a human heart.—Indian Advocate.

The Christian religion is the only religion which cares much for children. Somehow it has always been thought that children are too small to be thought much about by great religious teachers. You remember that it was so with Christ's own disciples, for when the mothers brought their little ones to him these disciples were very much disturbed and rebuked the mothers sharply. Jesus taught them a lesson then that they did not soon forget, that he loved and cared for the little ones. A Moslem child once showed much regard for the Christians near here, and was asked why it was so. She answered: "I like your Jesus because he likes little girls. Our Mohammed did not like little girls." The same may be said about all other religious teachers other than Jesus and those who have learned of him. Ought we not to try to spread the religion of him who likes little children?

While treasuries were straitened, the Lord's hand were not straitened in the missions. For the first time, the Free Church of Scotland had more Christian workers (of all kinds) employed in her foreign fields than in her churches in Scotland. The Scotch United Presbyterian Missions reaped their largest harvest. The American Baptists report 4 886 baptisms in Asia and Africa and 6,564 at European stations.

The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Japan is a Christian, and engages actively in Christian work in Tokio, where he lives. He is president of the Tokio Y. M. C. Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON, RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its massing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

PRICES: Leatherette, 50c; Cloth, 80c.

State News.

The Schoolfield meetings at Charlotte were largely attended.——Raleigh pastors have been preaching on Sanctification of late. Quite a deal of interest and no little fanaticism was excited on the subject by Dr. Carradine in a recent "revival."——It is expected that daily papers will be established at Greensboro and Raleigh, the former Republican, the latter Populist.——There are so far at least a dozen candidates for the North Carolina seats in the Senate. Butler has the call for the long term, and Pritchard and Mott are leading for Jarvis' seat.——150 000 pounds of sea products were recently shipped from Newbern in one cargo.——A company of eighty immigrants of desirable qualities are coming to Onslow county from Pensylvania. Others are coming to various parts of the State from the West and particularly Nebraska.——The work of the State Canvassing Board revealed last week that the vote at the late election was very great and the "Stay-at-home" idea is baseless. Faircloth received 148,434 votes for chief-Justice, Sheppard 127,593. The average co-operation majority is a little more than 20000.——Maj Jno. C. Winder has resigned the vice presidency of the Seaboard Air Line. He was an efficent and valued officer and his resignation is voluntary. The railway public will miss the presence of this courteous gentleman.——A boiler bursted at Concord the 1st with probable fatal result.——Vanderbilt has bought $75 000 worth more of our mountains.——A man drunk on the track was run over and killed at Thickety station 30th ult.——Hoke Secrest, murderer and pretended maniac, who was in the Marion jail at the time of the fire, is now in the Rutherford jail.——Alex. Clark, engineer for the Raleigh & Augusta Air Line, jumped from his cab at the sight of red lights and a locomotive ahead on a side track, with fatal result. There was no danger.——Wilmington's Welcome Week occured last week successfully.——Three negroes, who had been arrested the evening preceding, were burned to death in an attempt (supposed) to burn their way out of jail. They stole a cow.——Not less than six people were injured and two killed by accidental firing of guns in North Carolina last week.

A Miracle in Oregon.

A Wonderful Manner In Which A Man Was Cured Of Paralysis.

A Case That Almost Surpasses the Miracles of Old.

(From the Rural Spirit, Portland, Oregon.)

Upon the Calapooia River, at the edge of the Cascade range, in the town of Holly, Linn Co., Oregon, lives W. H. Henderson, a man with an interesting history. It is most interesting as told by himself to a reporter.

"My native place is Brockville, Canada," said Mr. Henderson, "where I have always made my home up to 1880, with the exception of a few years that I was a resident of Oswego, N. Y., New York City, and Chicago. In 1885 I came to Oregon. I am a carpenter by trade, and in the summer of 1889 was working at Cornalea, county-seat of Benton Co., Oregon. I did not feel well all summer: my knees, elbows and shoulders ached so badly that I concluded to go home the last of August. One day, after reaching home, my wife was leading the horses by the house and called me to see them. While looking at the horses I felt my knees getting weak. I went into the house and fell on the floor. When I came to my senses I was on the lounge and my wife crying. John McDaniels, our nearest neighbor, was there. I recovered somewhat through the day, and in the evening I walked to my bed. That night about ten o'clock I had another stroke of paralysis. The torture that I went through is too horrible for me to describe. I was helpless. The neighbors came in, Dr. Henrey, of Brownsville, was sent for, and I made my will, but could not sign it so it was legible. The back of my neck swelled up; Dr. Henrey had them put mustard plasters on my neck and down my back and down the side of my right leg, and on the bottom of my feet. The skin came off the bottom of my right foot. I was covered with sores from head to foot. If I had to be lifted up in bed it took two or three men to do it. There was a gathering in my left ear and it broke and discharged matter twice. My wife had to move my legs when they were moved. I had watchers at night for weeks. Mr. Michael Baragen, owner of the lumber mills on Hamilton Creek, was one of them. His post office address is Lebanon, Linn Co., Oregon, Mr. William White, head Sawyer for the same, and Mr. James N Rice, ex-member of the legislature of Oregon. Weeks went by and months, and I lay in bed helpless. When my bed was changed another bed had to be brought alongside and me slid across on to it. I do not remember sleeping a wink for months. They used galvanic battery for months, but it gave me no relief. I had them write to Dr. Mosier, specialist, Grand Street, New York, stating my case. He wrote me he could not help me, after which I concluded that I must die. I had given up all hope. In reading my eastern papers I saw the miracles that a medicine called Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were performing, but that itself would not have induced me to try them, had I not seen the name of Mr G. T. Fulford of Brockville, Ont., connected with them. They gave me hope. I had known him from a little boy, and I knew that money would not induce him to deceive his fellow man. I wrote Mr. Fulford to send me some Pink Pills, and before I had used the first lot I noticed an improvement. I sent for more, and in a little time I was on my crutches, and walking around the house. The last boxes that I got are doing the business. The pains left my head altogether six weeks ago, and it is now as clear as a bell. The swelling on my neck is gone, and my right ankle is much better. I can get around now without any assistance, and am heavier than I ever was in my life. There are a hundred people about here who will testify to my sickness and cure if any one doubts it."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not a patent medicine, in the sense that name implies. They were first compounded as a prescription, and used as such in general practice by an eminent physician. So great was their efficacy that it was deemed wise to place them within the reach of all. They are now manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and Brockville, Ont., and are sold in boxes (never in loose form by the dozen or hundred, and the public are cautioned against numerous imitations sold in this shape) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2 50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. from either address. The price at which these pills are sold makes a course of treatment inexpensive as compared with other remedies or medical treatment.

Literary Announcement.

It is impossible to even summarize in a single paragraph the many and varied attractions which The Youth's Companion announces for the coming year. In the first place, Mr. Gladstone has written an article for it; then two daughters of Queen Victoria (Princess Helena and Princess Louise) describe their favorite hobbies, and the Secretary of the Navy shows what a boy's opportunities are on board Uncle Sam's ships.

Sir Edwin Arnold has gathered together many striking instances of "Maternal Love in the Animal World" and Mark Twain undertakes to show young people "How to Tell a Story."

Beside him, famous story-writers are represented by Robert Louis Stevenson, Frank R. Stockton, Rudyard Kipling, J. M. Barrie, W. D. Howells and J. T. Trowbridge. Four admirals describe picturesque incidents in their careers, among them being Admiral Worden, who for the first time describes the trip of the Monitor from New York to Hampton Roads.

DIED.

COVINGTON—Died at the Soldier's Home, Nov. 18th, Mr. W. P. Covington, aged seventy-six years. He was a member of Co. H., Forty third Regiment. His remains were sent to Lilesville for interment.

HANKS—Died at Soldier's Home, Saturday, Nov. 17th, Mr. B. F. Hanks, aged fifty-two years. He belonged to Co. I., Fortieth Regiment, N. C. T. His remains were taken to Tarboro for interment by his brother.

PRICE—Died at Mrs. Abram Jenkins', in the sixty-fourth year of her age, Mrs. Mary W. Price entered into rest. Sister Price had been a member of Conaritas Baptist church for about fifty years. Her funeral was conducted by the writer. L. M. CURTIS.

HILL—At his home in Hertford county, N. C., Mr. Jordan Hill died suddenly in the eighty-ninth year of his age. Bro. Hill was a member of Bethlehem Baptist church at the time of his departure. His funeral was conducted by his pastor. He leaves a widow and several children to mourn their loss.
L. M. CURTIS.

HILL—Entered into rest, Mrs. Caroline Hill, relict of John Hill, passed calmly to her reward on March 14th, 1894, in the sixty-fifth year of her age. Sister Hill was a consistent and devoted member of Bethlehem Baptist church, Hertford county, N. C. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." The funeral was conducted by the pastor.
L. M. CURTIS.

WRENN—Near Mt. Vernon Springs, Chatham county, N. C., Nov. 13th, 1894, Wm. P. Wrenn, aged about seventy-two years. He had been a citizen of this vicinity and a member of this church nearly fifty years. He has been a faithful friend of the RECORDER, and an attendant at sessions of the Sandy Creek Association for forty-five years. He suffered intensely from cancer for the last eight months. He suffered patiently, and died in the triumphs of a Christian's faith.
O. T. E.

COOK—The death angel again visited the home of the already bereaved family of our community, Nov. 26th, 1894, and gently bore away to a brighter and happier home one of our most beloved friends and Sunday school scholars, Bob Cook. He was just in the bloom of life, being only eighteen years old, and was loved by all who knew him. 'Tis sad to give him up, but so consoling to feel that he is now numbered among the blest, and can rejoice around the throne with his father, who passed away just three months ago. May we all live such a life that when we are called forth we can join our friends that have gone before.
HELEN EDWARDS.

LINDSEY—On November 13th, 1894, in Matthews, N. C., in her forty-seventh year, Mrs. Alice O. Lindsey, wife of W. H. Lindsey. Sister Lindsey was for near thirty years one of these humble, unassuming, patient, and consecrated Christians which show a life hid with Christ in God. As her pastor for ten I ever found her strong in faith and doctrine, whether in sickness or health. The Bible was her guide in all things, and its promises her stay and comfort. As a wife, mother, friend and neighbor her life was that of the true Christian. Thus living and leaning on the promises of God her end was most triumphant, longing to depart and be with Christ, where, as she expressed herself, she could more fully drink the sweet water of life. With words of comfort and prayer she left many loved ones besides her own dear family. May her prayers for them be granted.
PASTOR.

BORDEAUX—Died in Bladen county, Sept. 8th, 1894, Lucy Ellen Bordeaux, wife of Rev. A. J. Bordeaux, aged forty years, eleven months and thirteen days.

She lived a consistent Christian life and died in full hope of an everlasting life with God, her Heavenly Father. Before her death she called her husband, step children and mother to her bedside and told them not to grieve for her, but to prepare to meet her in heaven. She was a faithful and consistent member of Frenches Creek Baptist church. She certainly was a model woman for a minister's wife, always giving him cheer and encouragement in his ministerial work. A great and good woman has left us, but she is now resting beyond the river with him that hath said, "Inasmuch as you have been faithful in a few things, I will make you ruler over many things."

Tributes of Respect.

At a meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society the third Sunday in October, the following resolutions were presented and accepted:

Resolved 1. Whereas it has pleased the All-wise Disposer of events to remove from our midst, after a long and painful illness, our sister, Selma Cohoon, and while to us the death of such a friend and faithful, consecrated child of God, with the promise of so much usefulness, is an unseen problem, yet, believing that our Heavenly Father knows best, we bow submissively to his will.

Resolved 2. That we tender to the husband of our deceased sister our heartfelt sympathy, and commend him to the God of all grace, who is the only comfort in the hour of affliction.

Resolved 3. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Missionary Society, a copy be sent to Bro. Cohoon, and also to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

INFLUENZA,

Or La Grippe, though occasionally epidemic, is always more or less prevalent. The best remedy for this complaint is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"Last Spring, I was taken down with La Grippe. At times I was completely prostrated, and so difficult was my breathing that my breast seemed as if confined in an iron cage. I procured a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and no sooner had I began taking it than relief followed. I could not believe that the effect would be so rapid and the cure so complete. It is truly a wonderful medicine."—W. H. WILLIAMS, Creek City, S. D.

The Home Circle.

The Shepherd and the Lambs.

Upon the margin of a flowing river
The Eastern shepherd leads his timid sheep,
He calls them on, but they stand still and shiver;
To them the stream seems wide and swift and deep.

He calls them on, but they in fear are standing;
He calls them on, but on they dare not go;
They heed not now the voice of his commanding,
They only hear the river's fearful flow.

Then, from the side of one protecting mother,
A lamb the shepherd takes unto his breast;
And them he gently bends, and takes another,
And in his arms the two lambs lie, at rest.

They lie at rest, and, as he close enfolds them,
He bears them safely o'er the river wide;
The little lambs know well the arm that holds them,
They nestle warmly and are satisfied.

Then like fond mothers, with maternal longing,
Look on beyond the river's fearful flow,
They can but follow, and, behind them thronging,
Their fleecy comrades are in haste to go.

Drawn by a love stronger than any shrinking,
Their lambs they follow over any tide;
They heed not now the swimming or the sinking,
They brave the stream, and reach the farther side.

And while the tender shepherd kindly feeds them,
They think no longer upon what hath been;
He gives them back their lambs, and then he leads them
By the still waters and the pastures green.

So shall it be with you, O weeping mother,
Whose lamb the Lord hath taken from your sight;
'Tis He hath done it—He, and not another,
Your lamb lies in His arms, clasped close and tight.

Across the stream your little one is taken,
That you may fear no more its quick, dark flow,
But that, with steadfast heart and faith unshaken,
You may be ready after it to go.

This is the tender Shepherd's loving pleasure,
To take at once the little one and you;
He knows that when with Him is your best treasure,
There, fixed forever, will your heart be, too.

—From "The Angelus."

"Two are Better Than One."

Dwight was very anxious to start to school.

"I wish I could go now," he said; "Sanford has just gone by."

"O, well!" said his mother, "you know the way as well as Sanford does."

"Yes, mother; but 'two are better than one,' you know. What if Sanford should fall down, and have no one to lift him up?"

Mrs. Crawford laughed. She understood this somewhat bewildering sentence. Dwight had been learning his "junior" verse for the day, and had repeated it to her in wonderment: he had known there was such a verse in the Bible: "Two are better than one; because they have a good reward for their labor. For if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow: but woe to him that is alone when he falleth; for he hath not another to help him up."

"Very well," said Mrs. Crawford, after a moment; "if the case is urgent, go ahead; you can do the errands at noon. Only see to it that it is not you who fall instead of Sanford."

Then Dwight kissed his mother and made a rush for the door. It was easy to overtake Sanford. They jogged on together after that at an easy pace. They were just entering the school grounds when Sanford nudged his friend's elbow.

"Look there," he said, "up in that tree. I'll bet you a cookie that that is Joe Burke's paper, with his corrected sentences on, that he made such a fuss about. They blew out of the window when he opened it yesterday, and have lodged in that hollow. Let's get a look at them."

The boys made a dash for the tree. Sanford went up its bare branches like a squirrel. "Yes, sir!" he called out; "these are the very papers. Good for him—mean scamp! He is always cheating or doing an ill turn of some sort to a fellow. I wouldn't steal his papers, though he glared at me as if he thought I did; but I'm awful glad he hasn't got 'em. It's the only lesson he is sharp in; he won't beat me now."

"I'm glad, to," began Dwight. "Isn't it a lucky thing he had the window open when he ought not to have had? We'll come off with flying colors this morning, if he hasn't written them out again, and I don't believe he could get anybody to dictate for him to copy. We'll keep dark until after"—and here Dwight came to a sudden pause. "For if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow." Were they two on the very edge of a tumble? It looked like it. And what was that his mother said?

"Look here, Sanford," he said; "don't let's do it. That would be putting ourselves on a level with Joe for meanness. Let's take them in and tell him where we found them; they were all wet and muddy, but he can copy them before class."

There was a short argument, but Dwight prevailed, and the two marched into school, rescued papers in hand.

"I wouldn't be a bit surprised if you put them there yourselves," was Joe's ungracious reply to this kindness.

"There's gratitude for you," said Sanford, as he moved away.

"Never mind," said Dwight, "we know we didn't; but, do you know, old fellow, you came pretty near a tumble this morning."

"What; from that tree? Nonsense! I never thought of such a thing as tumbling."

Dwight laughed. He knew what he meant, and he said to himself that mother would understand, but boys weren't so quick as mothers.—Pansy.

How Some Famous People Got Their Start in Life.

How many men have succeeded in life to whom not a single circumstance was kind! How often we hear people say of some worthless fellow: "Ah, well, he never had half a chance!" But there are plenty of boys who have come to the front in life's battle who never had even a quarter of a chance. Take Thomas Ball, the sculptor, for instance, says the Youth's Companion. He was but twelve years old when his father died. The poor widow, Thomas's mother, young herself and far from strong, had five children. There was no more school for Thomas after his father's death; he must go to work and help to support the rest. He got a place in a grocery store, where they gave him $1 a week. Not much that, but what a difference it made to the poor little family. From the time he was twelve young Ball had always to work for the others until they were grown up. He had little instruction even in his art, and he never had that little until after he had earned the money to pay for it. But he succeeded.

Then there was that other sculptor, Hiram Powers. Hiram was the eighth of nine children, and he was a very small boy when his father died, and like Ball he had to go to work for the family. He had been born in Vermont, for his parents had moved out to Ohio in that way poor people have of roaming hither and yon after better luck. It was in Ohio that the father died, and in Ohio that Hiram fought his youthful battle. For seven years he had charge of the wax figures in a Cincinnati museum, and it was while there that he felt an impulse toward his future art and tried his "prentice" hand at modeling clay. But it was not until he was thirty years old that he was at liberty to strike out for himself, and he was thirty-two before he had money enough to go to Italy. Yet he was to be the sculptor of the "Greek Slave."

Peter Cooper, who founded the Cooper Institute, had a still harder struggle, because as a boy his health was of the frailest. He went to school but one year of his life, and during that year he could only go every other day. But when he was eight years old he was earning his living by pulling hair from the skins of rabbits his father shot to make hat pulp. He had not "half a chance." It seemed almost literally that he had no chance at all. He went to New York when he was seventeen years old to make his fortune. He walked the streets for days before he got a place, and then apprenticed himself to a carriage maker for five years for his board and $3 a month. He had neither time nor money for what people call pleasure, but he had the pleasure of hope. While he was working for fifty cents a week he said to himself: "If I ever get rich, I will build a place where the poor boys and girls of New York may have an education free." And he did it.

William Hunt, the painter, used to say: "Don't talk of what you want to do; do it."—Chicago Weekly News.

Cried in English.

Fritz, a German lad, and little Tom were fond of each other, although neither could understand what was said.

"Why, Tommy," said his father, "your playmate doesn't speak a word of English, does he?"

"No," said Tommy; "but when a bumble-bee stung him yesterday he cried in English."—Ex.

Florence Nightingale.

Florence Nightingale, who is now seventy-four years of age, is said to be in very poor health. She lives in a very quiet spot in the west of London, but even her neighbors do not know her. To an American who recently visited her she expressed her thanks for the many kind letters that she is constantly receiving from America, and she mentioned especially the testimonial presented to her by the American Government in return for her advice with regard to improving our hospital service at the time of the civil war. She has a similar testimonial from France, and has tributes from individuals all over the world. Her rooms are fairly filled with pictures, books, medals, and bits of bric-a-brac that have been presented to her from time to time. "I am constantly being remembered by kind friends who are personally unknown to me, but whose kindness touches me more than I can say. I wish you would thank my American friends for their kind words that are constantly coming to me. If I have done good in my life, I am being fully rewarded now. What gratifies me above all is that all my hopes have been fulfilled. But it still horrifies me when I think of how our men were treated when they were ill or wounded at the time of the Crimean war. To day, what with improved hospital service, with trained nurses, with such organizations as the Red Cross and others, our system is well nigh perfect."—The Outlook.

Remittances must be sent by Registered Letter, Postal Order, Express or Draft, payable to the order of the Publisher.

Do not send stamps.

IF YOU would be a successful editor, young man, learn how to fill your reading columns with "funny" letters from Bill Nye and his numerous imitators, minute descriptions of Vanderbilt's building projects, the Ainu people, and other matter that cannot possibly be disagreeable to "our wealthy friend," his railway, or the party, fill up your editorial space with harmless copied discussions of the question "Are our Poets Unitarians?" or "Is Oratory on the Wane?" and shriek wild denunciations of the modern game of foot-ball. Paint the agonies of the dying half-back so that the reader will groan in sympathy, curse the plunging tackle until he sickens with the sulphurous atmosphere, implore the heartless, witless college presidents until their hardened souls are melting, repeat the process daily and double lead it; and retire, young man, to spend your remaining days in luxurious enjoyment of well-won laurels, in the shape of a government office made for the purpose. But O, young man, on your life, dare not say that saloons are destroying lives and souls, give no hint that railways or other corporations are pressing the blood out of the poor, never make so great a mistake as to believe that there are election frauds, never say schools are inadequate just before an election; be a "respectable" young man, and when a man of wealth or standing gets drunk or steals money, call him a gentleman or say nothing at all, approve lewd dens and lewd theatres, at any rate do not denounce them, tell those in power that they have greatness and good looks, be a lick-spittle, but do not get out of sympathy with "the folks," the respectables, the better classes—they and their lackeys name themselves. This lesson in editing is taught by example variously.

Foot-ball is a small affair at best or worst. If every one who knows how to play the game should die because of that knowledge, foot ball would not then be as destructive as the saloon or as dangerous as the greed of corporations. But foot-ball has no government offices to dispense, no revenue to buy with; it devotees are college men for the most part, and college men are a small item in the support of a paper; and so their enterprises, their pleasures and ambitions may be denounced and misrepresented with impunity. But the saloons, never, oh no! They advertise, they subscribe, they vote, they buy. And the railways kill and make alive; and the Trusts do too. So, young man, if you make the terrible mistake of not denouncing foot-ball and forget to pander to a gang of manipulating potentates, but instead, actually do speak your mind, calling a fraud a fraud, giving bribery its proper name, exposing corruption and the designs of villanous ambition, fighting the sellers of liquor and refusing to bow to the respectable, i. e., well-dressed tipplers, shielding the body politic from demagogues and ambitious, designing wealth, if you do these things, you cannot say that you were not told better, and you have only your impertinent, foolish self to blame. And if you are kicked about the earth for a fool, do not try to excuse yourself; for you might have gotten at least a government clerkship if you had done "right."

IT DOES not palliate the harmfulness of foot-ball to say that editors who pander to wealth and power use the game for a scapegoat, upon which all their pent up wrath is vented. That saloons or political corruption are more inimical to general interests than an army of foot-ball players could be, is not saying anything for foot-ball.

However, foot-ball is a wholesome game. So is water wholesome, but people are gotten into the habit, before they know it, of not drinking water to excess and of insisting on pure water. Pure foot-ball is good; but too much of it is wholly bad. And, you know, a college boy does everything excessively. If he has a turn for books, he ruins his eyes reading unless he has a watchful friend; if he falls in love, he goes crazy; if he gets mad, he fights; if he plays, he plays as hard as he can, that is, if he has anything in him. This is probably why old people are so fond of youthful reminiscences, why mothers' pies are best, and holidays of childhood the happiest under heaven to look back upon: they get more of the best out of everything they go into, because no future nor past divides their thoughts and energies. No future dyspepsia in those early pies.

The foot-ball man goes in to win. To play a losing game of foot-ball is gloomiest, grewsomest torture. Foot-ball itself is not attractive. (This writer has been in the line once or twice, merely to fill up a gap, not for glory.) The boys play the game, not for the fun or excitement, but for the glory of their college, for the yells behind their backs and the smiles. Men have to be urged into a practice game, when the yells and smiles and glory are in the distance. Training deprives them of a great many pleasures, and imposes a vast deal of hard work. And it requires a man of moral vigor to forego the former just as it requires a strong physique to measure up to the latter. All the while there is no fun. There is only hope of glory, ambition to get on the team, then ambition to plunge through the opposing line or make an heroic tackle. This writer has never known a man who really enjoyed the playing; but he has seen men with bloody heads, and wrenched joints, bandaged and padded, struggling, as for life, for a yard of ground, when they would have been groaning and rolling in pain, did not the glory of their college and the yells of their fellows demand—nay, inspire them to stand to the last ditch.

Foot ball needs modification, Youth needs restraining; but it will not pay you to split your lungs about it.

SAY what one may, the writer of the history of Education in America cannot omit the influence of foot-ball. The game has made some institutions famous. Ask any one the name of a professor or a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania; then ask him to name Pennsylvania's foot ball captain,—and the lunging figure of one Snipes will be immediately pictured in the mind that was quite at a loss the moment before. This institution has long been favorably known as an excellent institution for the study of medicine, but since its foot-ball team began to take rank with Yale, Harvard and Princeton, its place in the popular mind as one of the four greatest institutions in America has been almost established. The president of our State University was not unappreciative of the influence of a Southern trip by a successful team from that institution. Foot ball has been a considerable factor in the life and progress of many institutions.

IF WE were a college president and the institution were in sore need, we would not be doubtful of friends, if we knew the men who played foot-ball when they were students,—not the men who didn't do anything but play, but the manly students who did not neglect their books, although they did play foot-ball. The man who as a student kept to his room and worked on asymptotes and ground out dry translations would look up slowly to us appealing, chew hard on a splinter as he recounted the number of his children and examined a memorandum of the doctor's and the milliner's bills, and sighing miserably, write us a check for two dollars. But the boy, the smallest of the twenty-two, whom once we saw dart out from the line and lay his body prone before the ponderously moving mass, that its members might stumble and fall in a heap upon him,—that man would give us all he could and cheerfully request us to let him know if more were necessary. There are people who consider only themselves; and there are others who cannot consider themselves: the former have larger houses and families, and perhaps more money, but the latter have heartiness and joy in living.

A CANDIDATE who takes an office through a typographical error when he is aware that the majority of the people preferred his opponent, is hard put to for his living. He has no self-respect. He doesn't know what honor is. He has no hope of future political success, for he knows the people do not forgive such acts. He commits treason just as the man who usurps the sceptre of a king; for the majority is king in this land. The men who help such a man to frustrate the popular will, they are by him as highwaymen are to their chief.

We do not not believe that the men who prepared, the publishers who contracted for, or the printers who "set up" the tickets in the late election, were any of them fools. Great care is always used in such work; but in this instance many thousand tickets are said to have been wrongly printed. Names well known are alleged to have been misspelled, the initials of men of repute are alleged to have been wrong. It is hard to be believed. But if it were so, the opposing candidates could not doubt whom the voters desired; nor can honorable men persuade themselves, not even if they be starving, to take an office when their only title to it is a typographical error.

The Rules of Controversy.

"Truth's like a torch: the more 'tis shook, the more it shines."

I believe in discussion. Facts are sifted thereby, inferences are challenged, error is exposed, and truth is vindicated. But it may work great disaster. When prejudice is aroused and passion inflamed, discussion will obscure rather than illumine. When the aim is for victory rather than for truth, the blind lead the blind, and the ditch is before them. When one turns from the facts and principles involved to reflect upon the ability, motives, or character of an opponent, discussion in the true sense has ceased and vituperation has begun.

Those who have followed the long continued controversy between the two masters in dialectics, Herbert Spencer and Professor Weissman, would have been amazed if either had sought to settle a difficult question in Biology by personal allusions to the other.

Even if one had believed that Lord Bacon actually was, as he has been called, "the meanest of mankind," would this belief affect in the slightest degree the truth and value of the Novum Organon? When it is necessary to prove or disprove statements of facts, the credibility of witnesses may be tested by investigation of motive and character. But nothing is gained by an attack upon the attorney who builds an argument upon admitted facts

The following rules, promulgated many years ago by a professor in one of the English Universities, may be found in some of the older treatises on Logic, both English and American. The brief introduction is from the pen of the late Prof. Hedge of Harvard. The rules themselves are merely a statement, in concise form, of principles which are more or less generally recognized everywhere. I do not claim for myself that I have always followed them. If I have ever failed therein, I am ready to sue for the pardon of my readers. But the fact that I have tried to do so may serve as a warrant for the appeal which I now make to all writers on unsettled questions to read and abide by these rules of controversy:

"From the limited extent of human knowledge, and the different points of view in which the same subjects may be contemplated by different minds, it follows of necessity that a diversity of opinions must be entertained on many subjects of speculation. In whatever manner people are first led to form their opinions, they are usually disposed to defend them afterwards with zeal and pertinacity. Hence arise controversies and disputes which are often conducted with such intemperate and such misguided zeal as to inflame animosities by which the comfort and harmony of society are impaired.

"These are the worst fruits of controversy. They are, however, merely incidental effects, and are counterbalanced by others of an opposite character, and of high importance to the interests of truth and virtue.

"As controversy, especially when carried on from motives of victory or reputation, is liable to be productive of evil rather than good, it is incumbent on all who engage in it, from whatever motives, to observe rigorously those laws and principles by which the former may be avoided and the latter secured. The following rules, sometimes called the Canons of Controversy, have been highly approved by writers of learning and discernment:

"Rule I. (The Importance of Definition of Terms.)

"Rule II. The parties should mutually consider each other as a standing on a footing of equality in respect to the subject in debate. Each should regard the other as possessing equal talents, knowledge, and desire for truth with himself; and that it is possible, therefore, that he may be in the wrong and his adversary in the right. In the heat of controversy, men are apt to forget the numberless sources of error which exist in every controverted subject. * * Hence arise presumption, confidence, and arrogant language, all which obstruct the discovery of truth.

"Rule III. (In regard to unmeaning expressions.)

"Rule IV. Personal reflections on an adversary should in no instance be indulged. Whatever be his private character, his foibles are not to be named or alluded to in a controversy. Personal reflections are not only destitute of effect in respect of the question in discussion, but they are productive of real evil. They obstruct mental improvement and are prejudicial to public morals. They indicate in him who uses them a mind hostile to the truth, for they prevent even solid arguments from receiving the attention to which they are justly entitled.

"Rule V. No one has a right to accuse his adversary of indirect motives. Arguments are to be answered whether he who offers them be sincere or not, especially as his want of sincerity, if real, could not be ascertained. To enquire into his motives, therefore, is useless. To ascribe indirect motives to him is worse than useless; it is hurtful.

"Rule VI. The consequences of any doctrine are not to be charged on him who maintains it, unless he expressly avows them. If an absurd consequence be fairly deducible from any doctrine, it is rightly concluded that the doctrine itself is false, but it is not rightly concluded that he who advances it supports the absurd consequence. The charitable presumption in such case would be that he had never made the deduction; and that, if he had made it, he would have abandoned the original doctrine.

"Rule VII. As Truth, and not victory, is the professed end of controversy, whatever proofs may be advanced on either side should be examined with fairness and candor, and any attempt to ensnare an adversary by the arts of sophistry, or to lessen the force of his reasoning by wit, cavilling, or ridicule, is a violation of the rule of honorable controversy."

The Sunday-school a Remedy.*

We all believe and recognize the truth and depth of the principle so familiar to Sunday-school workers, To save the nation, we must save the children.

Jesus gave it to us when he said to Simon Peter, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord, thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my lambs."

A Colorado shepherd was asked why his flock was in such excellent condition. He answered, because I take care of the lambs.

The Father of his Country uttered the same truth when he declared that the perpetuity of the nation depends upon the moral and religious education of the youth of the nation.

This principle means that if all North Carolina is to be for Jesus, then all the children in North Carolina must be for Jesus.

Statistics also prove the truth of the statement, to save the nation, we must save the children. Eighty-five per cent. of Christian people were converted under the age of twenty-one. When a man has passed the age of his youth unconverted, he has almost passed the dead line, and is apt to be forever and eternally lost to himself, to his country, and to his God.

It is not the will of your Father which is in heaven that one of these little ones should perish (Matt. 18: 14). If they perish, they perish against God's will. It is his will that they should not perish. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." (Matt. 8: 21.) Let us do his will. Let us save the children in his name.

It is a practical question to ask, From what shall we save them and how? Save them from everything that can damn a soul. Counteract damning influence by something God like and divine.

If I should ask different ones of you from what peril we must save our young people, I should doubtless receive as many different answers as persons asked. Hence I cannot hope to answer the question satisfactorily in your estimation, for every one of you has his own opinion which I may not mention. But if I shall have impressed you with the wonderful, far-reaching, deep searching influence of the Sunday-school, that it is a powerful mechanism, full of stored-up, latent energy, ready to be fired and sent over our whole State, illuminating and sweetening the sad hearts and homes of young and old with the silent, sweet graces of the Spirit of the living God, then I shall have done well.

To the question, What is the greatest peril of our young people? some one of you would doubtless say unhesitatingly, confidently, "Surely, it is intemperance."

True, intemperance is a great peril. It stalks abroad throughout our land and gulps down over a billion of gallons a year, destroying sixty thousand souls annually and consuming in its fiery passion four times as much as our people pay for insurance on their lives and property. The latter means protection, comfort, safety; the former means misery, wretchedness, danger, desolation. Every home is threatened, every boy is tempted. Will he yield? Let us see.

Suppose that in the evil hour of temptation when angels weep and when devils grin, before that boy's mind there flashes the picture of his Sunday-school room, his teacher's face, his own seat: on one side the picture of Belshazzar's feast. How the letters on the wall glow and fasten themselves in his mind, "Mene, mene, tekel, upharsin—thou art weighed in the balances and art found wanting." No, he says, I cannot, I will not.

If our legislators, and our people, too, are too subservient to whiskey's beck and call to crush the demon drink by law, I say let the Sunday-schools of our State crush it by saving the boys from its grasp by destroying its patronage.

Another will say dancing is the danger of our girls, and so it is. I care not who may try to quiet a disturbing conscience with the biblical quotation, "There is a time to dance." Verily, the ball-room where the lights dazzle, where unclothed beauty blushes, where youth is impassioned, and evil imaginations fire the brain, certainly is not the time to dance.

I care not who may try to justify dancing by declaring "There is no harm to be seen in it." The influence is on the side of worldliness, and the command is, "Come ye out from among them and be ye separate—I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

Suppose the girl who is tempted to dance has learned in the Sunday school of the dance of Herod's daughter before drunken Herod. The head of him, of whom Christ the Judge testified that not a greater hath arisen among those born of women, was demanded as the not unnatural result of this mad dance of death. Trust that girl not to yield.

Another will say that pernicious literature does more to poison the imagination, to dim the conscience and to damn the soul than any other evil influence. Let us draw the veil of modesty upon the vile and contaminating scenes which therein confront the clean, clear bright mind of enquiring youth, depicted with all the candor and freedom with which a gloating vulture tears and plucks the entrails from the decaying carcass.

Teacher, give the Bible a chance. It will hold its own. Insist upon the daily home readings, and morning and evening prayer. The flaming sword of the Spirit can pierce and disperse the Devil's darkness, and God's Word shall accomplish that whereunto it was sent.

Another will say that a child is in peril if his associates are evil. That is sure, too. It is practically impossible for a child of twelve to be better than his playmates. The apostle's declaration on evil communications is familiar to you all.

What are you going to do with that child? Keep him at home away from his old associates? That is good. But far better to put him in the Sunday-school where he may form new and better associates. Let him be Jesus' companion as he went about in Palestine doing good. Such companionship as this will resist for good upon the child's life and character.

Father and mother, let me say a word to you. If you want your boy or girl to be better than you are now, you must be better yourself. A child is wonderfully imitative. His father is his ideal hero. The life that father leads is good enough for him. O, how we pity the children of a godless home! How hard to reach the boys and girls of that home if neither father nor mother is a believer. The best service a godless man can render his country is not to become a father of a family until he can teach his child to say, "Our Father, which art in heaven."

The best service you can render a godless home is to get the child of that home into the Sunday school. Teach it to know the way of life; that a little child shall lead them.

Another will say that the greatest peril of our youth is a lack of interest in something beside self—is aimlessness, purposelessness, a drifting hither and thither, to and fro, without a goal in view. It is evident that a ship without a rudder, or without a port in view, will never cross the ocean. Give the drifting, floating, tossing, wavering boat a rudder. Give the thoughtless child a purpose, something to live for besides its own pleasure. Get it interested in the Sunday-school. Give it saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and direct it towards heaven's gate with Jesus as its guide.

I know of no better place than the Sunday-school to thus equip the young voyager in the early morn of life, when its day is just dawning and no cloud in the sky, and there is no light nor buoy to betoken the breakers ahead. I know of no better place than the Sunday-school to exchange purposeless selfishness, which ends in hopelessness and despair, for cheerful serviceableness which ends in hopefulness and glory.

Another will say that formal religion, without power, without personal experience as the compelling motive is the great hindrance to the Christian world to-day, and that the tendency to follow in the same track, diverging further and further from personal experience is the greatest peril of our young people.

That is why our churches to-day are crowded with ungodly members, and which fact is a constant and never-failing, though invalid excuse to non-believers for not believing. Singing, hearing, praying without God's Spirit in our devotions—from habit, not from the sense of inward emptiness and a desire to be filled.

What can the Sunday-school do here? It can and must give emphasis to the great fundamental truths of religion, the sinfulness of man, the atonement, the new birth, justification by faith, the witness of the Spirit. God is a Spirit and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth.

Let us realize the vital religion between the Sunday school and church. It is the arm of the church, the gate, the doorway. The lambs are left here, and when they grow up, they are admitted into the fold of the Good Shepherd with the sheep. Let us continue to emphasize (as I have no doubt we do) personal responsibility, personal accountability and the need of a personal experience with a personal Saviour.

There is a tendency to-day to educate the head at the expense of the heart. In furnishing the brain, men are losing sight of the Bible. The education of the heart, the eternal, the immortal, the everlasting spirit of man is essental. The purifying of the motive power behind the intellect is more important than the intellect itself. It has been said that the education of the head alone means infidelity, the education of the heart alone means fanaticism, but the education of head and heart means a true Christian. Here is one of our perils, that our young people have their heads educated to the exclusion of their hearts, and it is my duty and yours, fellow workers, to see that the boy or girl who develops the intellect to

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

IT IS significant that some of the advocates of State aid are making pretences and propositions to answer questions upon which their silence shamed the tombs for months.

There is no concealing that the vast majority of the people in North Carolina are opposed to the principle of State-aid to higher education. But that doesn't signify by any means that the advocates of State-aid are going to be less ardent. They know how and where to hope.

IN THE twelvemonth that ends this week the Baptists of North Carolina have been subjected to the public scrutiny as they have seldom been in this State; and we have no fear of over-stepping the mark in saying that that scrutiny has revealed them favorably to a large number of people who have been accustomed not to take Baptists into account, has made Baptists prize their own strength, encouraged them to use it, and compelled the respects of all respecters of strength or character.

WE trust this is sufficient for Prof. Howell and all the other advocates of State aid who have used insinuating personalities where argument was impossible. The chairman of the Faculty of the University of Virginia is our authority for the statement that Prest. C. E. Taylor paid his tuition ("fees in full") at the University of Virginia in the session 1865-'66. Moreover, Chairman Thornton states that Secretary Baker's incorrect certificate was for private, not newspaper, use; and that all statements coming from official sources to the effect that Prest. Taylor did not pay tuition in the year mentioned are withdrawn.

WE have another year before us, one in which we cannot afford to retrench any better than we could a year ago. There is no debt weighing upon us and compelling struggles to remove it, but there is great and worthy need. The wildernesses are not all blossoming.

The religion of Jesus Christ is the religion of self-sacrifice, of giving. Much will always be required of Christians; and as we start another year let us be mindful that God's love is the best measure of our gifts. Let us not seek large gifts, rather enlist the prayers and the interest of every man, woman and child in the churches.

IN ONE of his last letters before sailing Brother Bryan urged the importance of diffusing information. He knows the conditions as few know them. He has studied China and America; and is thus unusually well qualified to speak on the relations of the saved to the heathen. The RECORDER endeavors to be the medium of Baptist information in North Carolina. None doubt but that it will be helpful to have it more widely distributed; and we earnestly urge our friends everywhere to make an effort to have it sent into more homes this year than ever before. Information relative to home work is as requisite to progress as it is in foreign work. Pastors whose people read proper literature are well supported. Lend a hand, brother; help yourself, us, the subscriber and the cause.

DR. CHAS. E. TAYLOR'S contribution on the first page of this paper is something that has been badly needed in these regions many years. It might be published all over the State with wholesome effect.

We do not know when we saw a debate in which the effort was to arrive at the Truth, in most cases ambition to beat the other fellow being the undisguised aim. And insinuations, appeals to prejudice, ribaldry and the like usually supersede argument. Logic is an unknown element in latter-day controversy.

But this is not all. If a public question is decided by the people after it has been debated in the usual way, the matter is by no means determined. The man who resorted to ridicule and prejudice is not at a loss when these fail. Hope is yet alive—in the lobby. Lobbyists have led many a forlorn hope to successful issue in spite of the voice of the people. They often achieve what demagogues fail to accomplish. There is remedy, however. Representatives know what they are chosen to do. They usually desire to be chosen again; and they know that their constituents have that in their own hands. Then the duty of the people is to keep both eyes open and insist on being represented.

PROGRESS AND PROMISES.

God's promises are plain enough. They are so plain that people who have desired to pervert them have found the task difficult. The most any one can do is to create distrust in those promises by discrediting God. No one can destroy or conceal them; the gates of hell itself cannot. With all their questionings of Scripture, those parts of God's Word which promise have not been harmed, except as doubt of one part reflects doubt upon another.

Nevertheless the professor of religion who takes God at his word is an unusual object, that is, practically speaking. It sounds very well to sing, "Trusting, Trusting;" but it seems hypocritical if the singer be known to be weighed down with care for the morrow; it seems a great deal worse than hypocritical—it is blasphemous,—if the singer be known to place most of his trust in his bank account or real estate, or if he be known to distrust other Christians who have no bank account. There is something hideously wrong with such a one.

To profess religion is nothing short of a declaration that the professor is born again, and born into a kingdom of which Jesus is Lord, and enlisted in his service. Yes, God has a standing army—standing, alas, alas! A regenerate one is not sordid, no matter whether he was so in his former condition or not. He still has to contend with his sordid propensities, his baser self is not buried. But God promises that strength shall be given to those who ask. If God promises that and if Christians fall into evil ways, then, there is something wrong. Yes, Christians may fall; but that doesn't signify that all who fall ever were Christians. It is hard for a regenerate one to become as cold and sinful as some church members are. Is it not hard for a Christian to forget to ask help of him, in whom he has professed faith, and under whose orders one professes to be marching upward to Zion? Is it not hard for a Christian to desire not to seek to know God's will and aid? Brethren,-it discredits Almighty God to say that the cold and lifeless condition of some churches is due to the falling away of Christians; but of church members, well, that's another matter.

Church members have to fall considerably in this day and time before their fall is brought against them. The sins of omission are often overlooked, although there is no sin more deadly than a sin of omission oft-repeated. To turn a church member out because he dances or gambles or lies, and allow another to sit in conference who is unwilling to follow Christ in and out among the poor and afflicted, unwilling to preach the gospel to every creature with his daily actions, with his hands and tongue and purse, is, to say the least, inconsistent. Both show an unwillingness to follow Christ that contradicts their profession, calls them both liars. But they are human. Yes; but that does not excuse them, when God has promised to deliver them from temptation whenever they really wish and pray with faith to be delivered. Christians may fall by such small temptations, but the generality of those who fall thus are church members—merely. When one is born again, Christ holds the citadel of the heart, until it becomes deathly cold. But it should not become so; and it will not if the regenerated trusts Christ and asks his aid.

There are church members who do contribute to pastor's salary, to missions and other objects, who read religious literature occasionally, and always sit in a good seat at church Sundays, but who are so automatic, so dead in their works, that they also must be catalogued in God's standing army.

If evangelization were left to them, the voice crying in the wilderness would never be heard. They can give, but giving without sympathetic interest and earnest prayer, is like dead faith. These need awakening; but it is a reproach to say that there is a large army of God's followers sleeping,—sleeping when every soldier is sorely needed. What would Jackson have done with sleepers? Christ needs live workers worse than ever human did.

There are by actual count 3,496,988 members of Baptist churches in the United States; there are 38,139 Baptist churches; there are 25,354 Baptist preachers—these all in good standing. Ah, that word—standing—it will assert itself, standing! Those members ought to be a marvellous witness of the almighty power of God. A Christian who is not a witness, he is a new kind of follower of Jesus Christ. It does seem to us that, with the promises of God, "I am with you alway," "Ask, and it shall be given," three million Baptists ought to take this country for God in a month. Three million soldiers under Napoleon would take it in ten days, and Baptists—are they not under one who made Napoleon, even God; and have they not the promises of the living Son of that God, while Napoleon had only his star? But Napoleon's army was never a standing one. He would not tolerate useless followers. He could not afford to. Can Christ? Did not Christ curse the barren fig tree. Does not the Father take away "every branch that is in me that beareth not fruit?"

It is not enough to say something is wrong. There is a feeling in many quarters that the army of the living God is not making the conquest that it ought to be making. It is not enough to lay it all to lack of unity. The united factions are not doing much better than the contending creed-wranglers. There is apathy, there is indifference, there is selfishness in every denomination. Vigorous preaching may overcome the first, diffusion of information will relieve the second, but regeneration alone can overcome the third. Unfaith there is, but self-love comes before unfaith. There are so many people who will not see because it is disagreeable.

While it is true that there is a load of barren branches in the churches, sowers of discord, selfish, sleeping or standing, while it is true that such progress as ought to be made is not being made, we cannot refrain from saying that God's witnesses are not scarce in Zion. The outlook is not at all disheartening. God's own are following Christ more steadily than ever; and the pruning-hook needs only to be judiciously used to show that the work of the faithful is really marvellous; some must be taken away, some purged.

"Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain; that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you."

THE unusually good reports presented the Convention are the more gratifying because the kill-joys and creakers who have been hovering about all loaded to shout "We told you so," are thus deprived of that opportunity after all. As it is, we can enter the year full of courage and assured of the power and the presence of the Master. "To the work, to the work."

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Pastors in need of assistance should consider our four months fifty cents offer.

....Dr. Pritchard preached the thanksgiving sermon before the South Carolina Convention.

....The man who seeks the "golden mean" between two views generally has "an axe to grind."

....Have you made an effort on our special offer? If not, you yet have a chance to grasp a good thing.

....Rev. A. D. Hunter of Raleigh desires to thank the members of his churches for sending him to the Convention.

....Rev. F. H. Martin writes from Portsmouth: "I am well pleased with my work. I think a grand work is to be done here."

....Rev. R. A. Hedgpeth's address will be Cedar Fork hereafter instead of Leesville, where he enters on his new pastoral work.

....The feeble young men of the News & Observer have our condolence in their desperate efforts to make a newspaper without brains.

....Rev. Jno. A. Mason, a Wake Forest man, was ordained to the ministry at Gibson's Station, Dec. 1st. He will enter the Seminary.

....Rev. A. J. Taylor is working zealously. He writes from Cedar Grove that he baptized four Methodists last Friday. Keep up the good work.

....Rev. Duncan McLeod has resumed building on our church at Washington, having collected enough money on a recent extended trip to encourage him.

....Rev. C. H. Usley of Wake Forest College delivered his introductory sermon at Piny Grove on Dec. 2d. Bro. Ballentine writes: "We are delighted with him."

....The illness and death of Bro. Caddell's father has prevented him from writing an account of the Robeson Association. If we do not publish it this week, we will next.

....We are much obliged to our friends who have replied to our recent requests. Many on whom we are counting have not yet been heard from; but we hope they will help us quickly.

....The Union Meeting Western Section Raleigh Association will convene with Swift Creek church Saturday before the fifth Sunday this month. Program later. Churches and Sunday-schools be sure to attend.

....Bro. W. J. Willis informs us that our church at Kernersville has restored its building. It will be remembered that the former one was blown down. The church is nearly out of debt.

....Bro. F. S. Biggs and wife, late of the First church, Raleigh, have returned to Baltimore. They made many warm friends while here, who will follow them to Baltimore with best wishes.

....We print this week the third of three excellent articles that were brought out at the last Sunday-school Chautauqua. Bro. Horne, we believe, is a candidate for the ministry, being at present a student at the University, his home being at Clayton. He is a young man of indisputable gifts, as is shown in our columns this week.

....Bro. J. F. White recently delivered a sermon on the President's thanksgiving proclamation. The editor of the Fisherman & Farmer showed his appreciation of it by placing it on the editorial page.

....We have heretofore taken occasion to commend Turner's North Carolina Almanac. It is all that it claims—reliable, valuable, interesting, and worth the money. There is an announcement of it in this paper.

....Rev. John A. Wray of Broad Street church, Winston, had a very good meeting recently. Preaching was continued only five nights and there were thirteen professions and a goodly number of reclamations. The church was much revived.

....Rev. W. T. Jordan, one of our North Carolina men in the far west, has recently taken charge of the First church at Alameda, California, a city of 15 000 inhabitants. He seems very happy and hopeful, and sends much love to his North Carolina brethren.

....Bro. Greaves of Wake Forest occupied the Raleigh Tabernacle pulpit on Sunday night last. The young brother preached a good sermon from the text, "What think ye of Christ?" After the close of the sermon, Deacon J. M. Broughton conducted an after-meeting.

....Note that a motion in the South Carolina Convention endorsing the action of the trustees of Furman University in opening that institution to females, was killed; and a committee was appointed to consider the matter and report next Convention. They are learning better.

....The Winston Sentinel is responsible for the following: "It is learned that Rev. J. L. White, pastor of the First Baptist church in Asheville, has accepted a call to Macon, Ga. Mr. White is a native of this city and is an able divine." Our people would be reluctant to see Bro. White to leave the State.

....The funeral services of the late Bro. G. L. Watson of Raleigh, who met such an untimely death in the recent collision near Rockingham, N. C., were conducted on Sunday a. m. last at 11 o'clock by Pastor A. M. Sims at the Raleigh Baptist Tabernacle. Our sympathy goes out to Sister Watson and children in their sad affliction.

....Bro. A. U. Daniel of Wilson wrote the 3rd: "Held services in our new church yesterday for first time; worked until ten o'clock Saturday night in order to get in. Dr. Mundy, with a few others working with their own hands, nailed boards up to the windows and went in. The church is yet far from being completed. It is a mystery to me how the work has been done, and Dr. Mundy alone can explain that mystery. To Him the praise."

....The Baptist Union, organ of the B. Y. P. U. A. might be getting ready to crusade against that organization. In a recent issue is the following: "Look out for the man who argues much about religion but has no 'Thus saith the Lord' for his 'views.'" It also urges its readers to "Live louder than you shout," which, remembering the report of the late Toronto meeting, we submit is physically impossible, unless the B. Y. P. U. A. has a special apparatus for living loud.

....The Seminary Magazine for November contains articles by E. C. Dargan, G. W. Greene, T. T. Eaton and W. R. Rothwell, and others. Although this periodical is edited by young men, its pages contain matter from our best known Southern leaders, and we are always instructed by it. J. D. Robertson, brother to A. T., who graduated with honor from Wake Forest last June, appears in the capacity of editor of a department of the Magazine, and of course he does his work well.

....Grand total contributed last year, $124,307 36; this year, $126,487 18. For State Missions last year, $13,309.87; Foreign Missions, $7,017 27; for Home Missions, $3,553 19; for Education (W. F. C.), $3,235 69; Orphanage, $11,169 12; Sunday-schools, $5,659 80; ministerial relief, $598 61; church extension, $72 297 70; Centennial Fund, $5,152 05. Compare these figures with those in the reports in another column; and bear in mind that we had no Centennial Fund this year.

....The health of Rev. G. M. Tolson, now located at Crisfield, Md., is not good, owing to the prevalence of malaria in that section of country. As a consequence, he has decided, as soon as possible, to move to a more healthful clime. Churches in this State or South Carolina, without pastors, have now an excellent opportunity to secure a good pastor. Bro. Tolson has done a good work at Crisfield, and all his pastorates have been successful. He is a good preacher, and correspondents can address him at Crisfield, Maryland.

....Rev. W. R. Gwaltney writes: "The meeting at Wake Forest closed last week. Many good results are visible. All the Christians here were greatly helped, and the church is made stronger. Many of the young men were greatly revived and strengthened. There were several professions of faith. Bro. T. J. Taylor preached the Word with great power, and made the way of salvation so plain that none could possibly misunderstand him. I have never heard the gospel more faithfully preached: it is bringing, and will continue to bring forth fruit."

....Our South Carolina brethren did not largely attend their Convention last week, says the Courier. It was strictly a business meeting, and harmonious. Rev. W. T. Derieux preached the sermon. Bro. R. W. Sanders was chosen president. Their State Mission Board set out to raise $15 000 this year; but the unreasonable conditions cut the amount down to about $11,843 69. They have 34 State missionaries covering 146 stations. There are thirty-nine ministerial students at Furman University. Sixteen of them receive aid other than tuition. The Central Committee of Women's Missionary Societies received $5,989 49 during the year; $8,626 51 was contributed for Connie Maxwell Orphanage. They meet at Greenville next year.

....Not content with its unparalleled record for misrepresentation and making votes for the opposition in the late campaign, our esteemed aggregation of rara avis of the News & Observer are now getting in their deadly work against appropriations to higher education by chirping for State aid. Last week President Winston came down to Raleigh, and next morning the usual flow of misrepresentation pertained to the RECORDER instead of politics. Anything for a change, brother; and we will not bother you so long as you do not let it be known that you are really helping us cut off appropriations.

....Mistakes will get in their work once in a while, and generally they produce cruel misunderstanding and lamentable waste of life. Last week a letter sent to the RECORDER enclosing one dollar on subscription was found underneath a postoffice drawer, where it had lain since 1881. The money is good yet; but if it were of much greater value than it is, it could not recompense the trouble that hasty, unkind judgment might have caused. We have no record of the matter, but if the case is not an exception, the mail men, the RECORDER men and the complaining brother (if he did complain), all, were subjected to a deal of undeserved—thoughts, if not worse. It was nobody's fault. True, drawers should not be made so that letters will slip under them, but as only two have slipped under this one in fourteen years, we cannot blame its maker. And our Raleigh postoffice men are clever and efficient to a gratifying degree. Moral: Send money by postal order; and, in any event, be slow to think evil of any one.

SIXTY-FOURTH BAPTIST STATE CONVENTION.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—There was a brother ready to say, "Providence is against us," every time the train seemed to slow up; and when in truth we found ourselves waiting at Concord, from 10 p. m. till 6 a. m., for a train of flat cars to get out of the ditch into which a loose rail had thrown them, it did seem that a Jonah was along. The fact that the brethren who came by the Monroe route were also delayed six hours, was occasion for more burdening of Providence, when the real reason was the effort of North Carolina trains to run at New York rates. Delays are bad enough at best, but when they occur in circumstances, e. g., a talking woman and a drinking man, that keep one awake all night, it is time to suggest to the railways that little less speed and some more certainty would be desirable.

At Greensboro the kindly face of the only North Carolina Baptist whom it would profit financially to turn Episcopalian, since in that event he would be made bishop, not merely of Greensboro but of all North Carolina—and with a white garment and a big B, too. We were glad to see also Rev. R. W. Weaver, who between preaching the gospel to growing congregations at High Point and teaching at Greensboro, could not make it convenient to attend the Convention.

It ought to have been mentioned hitherto that that good friend of every man, Rev. C. W. Scarboro of Murfreesboro, had waited too late to preach the Convention sermon, in order that he might carry three fatherless children to the Thomasville Orphanage. He argued that the Convention had Bro. T. J. Taylor, who was able to be relied on, while the orphans had no one to take them on the cars except himself. They were bright, sunny-hearted children; and though the eldest was only eight, they made themselves agreeable all the way. The widowed mother, Bro. Scarboro said had to support three more, all younger than these.

Bro. Curtis—well remembered for his kindness on the way to the Southern Baptist Convention—was more than welcome on the way to Charlotte. Bro. C. A. Jenkens, Dr. Kerfoot, Rev. Rufus Ford and Bro. Geo. W. Blount were with us, helping to make tolerable the dragging hours and the "circumstances."

AT CHARLOTTE.

Too late for sermon which, in Bro. Scarboro's absence, was preached by Bro. Taylor, who had been given time to prepare an able discourse. It will probably be published in these columns. Text, 2 Cor. 10: 4—"For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds."

After the sermon, reorganization was effected, Dr. Marsh being for the fourth time elected President of the body; N. B. Broughton and N. B. Cobb, Secretaries; Vice-Presidents—M. H. Justice, E. K. Proctor, C. S. Blackwell; Treasurer—J. D. Boushall; Auditor—W. N. Jones; Corresponding Secretary—C. Durham. Trustees of the body are C. Durham, C. M. Cooke, W. T. Faircloth, T. H. Briggs, L. R. Mills.

The following committees were appointed:

State Missions—Rev. J. B. Boone, E. T. Aydlett, R. D. Carroll, Rev. G. M. Dake, T. B. Boushall.

Foreign Missions—H. C. Dockery, Rev. J. B. Richardson, W. C. Dowd, Prof. Collier Cobb, R. H. Jordan.

Periodicals—Rev. W. C. Tyree, Prof. W. L. Poteat, N. L. Shaw, Rev. L. Johnson, Rev. C. B. Justice.

The usual address of welcome was made in handsome phrase by Rev. L. E. Pruitt, who, by the way, is making himself very useful to the brethren in many ways. The response was gracefully delivered by Rev. W. B. Oliver.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S MEETING.

The Young People's meeting was held at announced. The program was carried out, and an interesting occasion was reported. We will write at more length on this subject next week.

FRIDAY MORNING.

After Bro. Tyree had conducted religious exercises in the Y. M. C. A. hall, the Convention seemed ready for a quick business session. But the temperature of the auditorium made it advisable to go back to the commodious and well-heated church, which the night previous had seemed inadequate to the crowd.

As one looks upon the earnest faces of the men now gathered in the church, an appearance of unusual brightness, vigor and life is easily detected. The number of delegates is quite double that of last year, that is, about 250; and they are all of them cheerful in the consciousness of having put the past twelve months on record as the best for work in many years. The State Mission work (of which there is a report in this issue) was never in better condition; and Dr. Willingham says North Carolina is as near, if not nearer, up to the amount asked of it as any State. In fact, it is probable that the brethren now growing up will look back to this year and argue that hard times promote rather than hinder Christian giving. Some one hinted that there is logical connection between the payment in full of all the State missionaries and the good (quality and quantity) attendance.

The house is all awake, as that most "bumptious" of bumptious Baptists, Dr Hufham, calls attention to the leading editorial in the Charlotte Observer, this morning. It is evident that Editor Caldwell, whose sincerity and motives are not to be questioned, has been misinformed; and a committee is appointed to confer with him, before more is said.

The report on Ministerial Education is the special order, and the beloved John Mitchell rises nobly to it. The debt of $891 on the Board last January has been reduced to $500, thirty-three boys having been aided in the mean time. The primary object of the Convention is the education of young ministers. A large number of young men without aid are seeking it. Dr. Taylor says he gets many letters asking help. They ought in most cases to be favorably answered, but without larger collections this is impossible.

Dr. Taylor: "North Carolina is to day one of the great plant beds for Baptist preachers on this continent. There is no more worthy object than Bro. Mitchell's."

A collection is taken, aggregating about $250, of which Wilmington church pledges ninety dollars.

Dr. Durham strikes a keynote when he says: "Brethren, the thing to do is to have faith in God and determine to support a certain number of young men at college." He offers a resolution setting that number at forty five, which is adopted. Bro. Mitchell's countenance is cheerier as he takes his seat.

The following committees are announced: Sunday-schools, Colportage, etc.—J. O. Alderman, A. L Stough, J. C. Turner, J. C. Woodward, Eldridge Lee.

Orphanage—J. A. Mundy, J. B. Long, W. V. Tucker, A. D Dumas.

Home Missions—J Q Adams, S. P. Smith, W. B. Oliver, T. T. Speight, I. W. Durham.

Obituaries—H. A. Brown, P. A. Dunn, D. P. Bridges, G. W. Blount.

Committees are also appointed to nominate Board of Missions, Board of Education, and Board of Ministerial Relief.

STATE MISSIONS.

Dr. Durham was so happy when he wrote "The Past and the Future," in the last RECORDER, that he raised a hymn right in the midst of a paragraph; but he has found room to get happier and happier, and now he is in too good a humor to make a speech. But the report is speech enough. Bro. J. B. Boone is chairman of the committee on State Missions, and his report urges that we go forward with $15,000 as next year's basis. There is no suggestion of retrenchment. Bro. Gwaltney makes a good point, rejoicing not only in the lifting of the debt, but in the many evidences of good work done, the number of churches organized, houses built, repaired, etc. Bro. N. L. Shaw of Warrenton, Dr. T. T. Speight, Dr. T. E. Skinner make feeling remarks; and Dr. Speight offers a deeply earnest prayer of gratitude to God.

An effort is made to get brethren to buy windows for our new church at Wilson. The building cost $4,000, of which all but $100 was raised in Wilson. These windows ought to be bought. Brethren Bitting, J. E. White, G. H. Church and Dr. Hume add remarks. Revs. C. S. Blackwell and C. C Haymore speak on specially needy points.

The Trustees of the Convention recommend that the church at Bayboro be given a deed to the property the Convention has been holding until the church became self-sustaining. The Trustees report that they hold the bond of the Treasurer for $10,000. They ask and receive authority to buy property in Raleigh for the obvious uses of the Convention, provided it can be conveniently done.

Dr. Bitting gives us the first long speech of the Convention. He speaks ably in behalf of the American Baptist Publication Society.

FRIDAY NIGHT.

Rev. C. A. Jenkens leads the religious exercises. The subject is Foreign Missions. Bro. H. C. Dockery reads the report, recommending that we endeavor to raise $9,000 this year, which is adopted. Brethren H. C. Mosely (from Mexico), Dr. R. H. Graves of China, missionary McCallum of Japan, and Dr. Willingham speak.

Bro. H. B. Dunn of Newbern, full of energy and faith, volunteers to pay one fifth the expenses of a missionary to Japan five years; and after some good work the balance is raised. Dr. Willingham offers to answer any question. Bro Van Deventer, our efficient Vice-President of the F. M. Board, introduces the speakers.

The Board of Trustees of Wake Forest College disposed of routine business this evening and authorized Dr. Taylor to make canvass for $20,000, to which the American Baptist Education Society promises to add $5,000. So far, all hopeful and zealous.

[The remainder of the proceedings will appear next week.]

Sixty-fourth Annual Report of the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools.

[Condensed.]

THE DEAD.

The number of our brethren called to their reward during the past year has not been large; but some of the choice ones among us have fallen on sleep.

Ministers of the Gospel.—John W. Gore of Columbus county, Dec 6, 1893, in his 82nd year.

T. M. Leary of Morehead City, Jan. 14, 1894, in his 29th year.

R. M. Sessoms of Robeson county, Jan. 28, 1894, in his 77th year.

G. W. Rollins of Forest City, Feb. 16, 1894, in his 65th year.

W. B. Woodruff of Elkin, June 1, 1894, in his 79th year.

J. C. Wilson of Chatham county, July 1, 1894, in his 74th year.

T. J. Leary of Morehead City, July 18, 1894, in his 62nd year.

W. C. West of Cumberland county, Nov. 26, 1894, in his 78th year.

Missionaries among the Heathen—Mrs. M. T. Yates of Shanghai, China, March 24, 1894, in her 72nd year. She was buried by the side of her late husband, Dr. M. T. Yates, in Shanghai, China.

C. C. Newton of Lagos, Africa, July 26, 1894, in his 51st year. He was buried at sea about three hundred miles out from Lagos.

Mrs. C. C. Newton of Lagos, Africa, July 9, 1894, in her 50th year. She was buried in the Lagos cemetery.

Members of our Board—J. M. Heck of Raleigh, Feb. 10, 1894, in his 62nd year. Member of the Board 1868—1893. President of the Convention 1874.

L O. Lougee of Raleigh, Nov. 10, 1894, in his 47th year. Member of the Board 1889—1894.

"To depart and to be with Christ."

THE DEBT OF 1893.

In the conclusion of the Board's report to the Convention a year ago, the debt on State Missions was stated to be $3,097 10, and on Sunday schools was $2,086 64.

On April 2nd the Treasurer was able to send checks to every missionary for the full amount due on the past year's work; and to pay, also, five hundred dollars of the debt on the Sunday school department. This special effort to secure money, under all the circumstances, was most remarkably successful; and without it the Convention's work must have been greatly crippled for many years to come. It is but just to say that had it not been for the free use of the BIBLICAL RECORDER, and the hearty co operation of brethren and sisters throughout the State, this result would not have been secured.

Every missionary of our Board has been paid in full for the Conventional year ending November 1, 1894.

STATE MISSIONS.

The names of the missionaries and the Associations in which they have done their work are as follows, viz:

HOME MISSIONS.

In the early part of the year our Board of Missions and Sunday-schools was oppressed by the debt then upon it. The Board was unanimous in the opinion that there was a real crisis in our work, and to fail to aid many places this year, which it seemed could not be aided, would cripple the Baptist cause at these places for many years to come.

Under these circumstances it put the facts before our Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, and asked them to co-operate with us in sustaining missionary pastors in five county towns in our Convention, viz, Washington, Tarboro, Concord, Newton, and at Olivet church in Charlotte. After careful consideration, the Home Board wisely, we think, determined to aid us at these places.

At Washington substantial progress has been made, and the little, faithful church, with a total of twenty-nine members (only six males), is rebuilding their house of worship. This is greatly needed and they richly merit the aid of all in this effort to secure a better house of worship.

At Tarboro the house of worship with a pastor's home, was dedicated (Dec. 31, 1893,) free of debt since our last Convention. This property cost about $13,000. Here there are twenty-three members, and it is confidently hoped that in a few years there will be at this place a strong Baptist church.

At Concord the membership is about one hundred, and the prospects are good for growth. Here there is a debt of $800 on the house of worship, but it is hoped this can and will be paid during the incoming year.

At Newton the membership is thirty one. Here the work has been specially prospered. The new house of worship has been erected and is being used, though not completed. Here, too, there is a debt of $500 on the house of worship, which it is thought will be paid and the house completed during the next year.

At Olivet church in Charlotte the blessings of the Lord have been upon the labors of pastor and church, and soon, it now seems, they will be strong in numbers and financial ability, as they are now in faith and good works.

The amount paid by the Home Board to date to these five places is $583.33. The timely aid rendered by the Home Board to these important but weak and struggling churches in our Convention in this, the year of greatest need, should commend the work of this Board to our people, and lead to larger contributions to Home Missions by all of our churches.

What the State Mission Board does for North Carolina, the Home Mission Board is trying to do for the territory covered by the Southern Baptist Convention.

THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY UNION.

During the past year these sisters rendered faithful, self sacrificing effective and gratuitous services to the Board. They directed their efforts toward the dissemination of literature; the support of female missionaries among the Chinese, Mexicans and Germans; the forwarding of food and clothing to our missionaries on the frontiers; the equipment of schools and hospitals in Cuba, and the raising of regular contributions. The sum raised by them in cash last year was $31,613.60, of which amount $1,612 36 was raised in North Carolina.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

In the report last year it was said: "This department has, during the past year, received more than the usual attention of the Board, and the results are encouraging." Two brethren in each Association, one a Pastor and the other a Superintendent of a Sunday-school, have been selected by the Board and asked to represent the Sunday-school interest in their Union Meetings and in their annual Association. The plan has worked well, and favorable practical results have followed. Much fuller information will, it is hoped, be published in the Associational Minutes this year than ever before. There is no work in which we are engaged where the progress is more marked. It is now given a prominent place in the discussions at most of the Associations. The improvement in work from year to year is in keeping with the development of all other departments.

SUPPLY STORE.

The Supply Store, in obedience to the instructions of the Convention, was begun in 1882. The stock was bought on time, and through all the years the debt for the stock was kept as the running account. The Convention a year ago instructed the Board to pay cash for all goods and to sell for cash, and to make special and persistent efforts to liquidate the indebtedness of the store. These instructions have been obeyed. The success attained will be seen in the following statement of facts:

At the Convention of 1890 the following was adopted:

"Resolved, That the Convention instruct the Board of Missions and Sunday schools to employ a suitable brother as Secretary, who shall have charge of the Sunday-school and Colportage department and the Sunday-school Supply Store."

The report of the Board that year had given the following statement of facts about the Supply Store:

"Assets	$2,527 95
Liabilities	627 34
(Assets over liabilities	$1,900 61."

By the above resolution the Corresponding Secretary of the Convention was relieved of all responsibility for this department, and was in no way connected with it till January 12, 1892.

On January 12, 1892, by a resolution of the Board, the Corresponding Secretary was again charged with the Sunday school work and the Supply Store. At this time, as shown by a statement of the bookkeeper then rendered, the liabilities of the Supply Store were $3,970.08, and its assets were $1,669 89. The liabilities were then $300 19 more than the assets.

The rerort to the Convention last year showed the assets to be $2 976 91, and the liabilities to be $2, 734 94. The assets were then $241 97 more than the liabilities. The report this year shows the assets are $2,650 61, and the liabilities are $1,174.08. The assets are now $1,476 53 more than the liabilities. The donations by the store have been $200.71. The total amount of business of the store for the year ending December 1, 1893, was $5 491 62, and the total amount for the year ending December 1, 1894, $6,115 62. Paid on the old debt during 1894, $1.400.

The Sunday-school Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, Nashville, Tenn., from the profits on its business, sent a check for $350 to aid the Sunday school mission work in the State, and the Bible Department of the American Baptist Publication Society donated five hundred cheap Bibles and one thousand cheap Testaments to be distributed to the indigent and destitute.

COLPORTAGE.

Much good work has been done in this department by brethren who are reported in the State Mission department as "missionaries." State Missions and Colportage are so united in men, in the fields occupied, in the work done, and results wrought, that it is almost impossible in the work of many, to separate the work into two men, two fields, or two departments of work. For many years to come much of the most helpful and successful colportage work done must be done by the missionaries of the Board and the pastors of the churches.

But, in addition to the colportage work done by the ninety-five missionaries whose names are given in another part of this report, in some Associations special colporters have been at work, viz: Bladen Association, J. L. Hall; Pilot Mountain Association, S. F. Conrad; Robeson Association, R. A. Moore; Sandy Creek Association, William Rogers; Little River Association, J. A. Campbell.

CONCLUSION

With thankful hearts for the success of the past year's work, and in the hope that the Lord will guide the Convention in all of its plans for the incoming year, we, your servants, put this imperfect report of your work for the past year in your hands.

J. D. BOUSHALL, Treasurer.

I hereby certify that I have examined the books of J. D. Boushall, Treasurer of the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina, for the past Conventional year, comparing the same with the acknowledgments in the BIBLICAL RECORDER. I find all accounts with the various objects of the Convention to be correct, and disbursements supported by proper vouchers.

W. N. JONES, Auditor.

From President Taylor.

NULLIUS ADDICTUS JURARE IN VERBIS MAGISTRI.

A writer in the last number of the RECORDER says that he considers the fact that no tuition fees were charged to a certain young minister nearly a generation ago to be no reproach to him.

Neither do I. Ninety-nine out of a hundred of the students for the ministry in the United States for the last fifty years have been charged no tuition fees by any institution of learning. Nor do I blame any other man, who is not a minister, for accepting such remission of fees when offered. And, as a matter of fact, no student at any well-endowed college pays in tuition fees one-third of what his tuition actually costs. Not a word can be found in my writings which implies such blame. I have ventured, however, to express the opinion that the higher education, both in support and control, would be more wisely managed on the voluntary system.

If there be no reproach in having fallen in with an almost universal custom, why is such notoriety given to the fact? (See Charlotte Observer of Sept. 4 and RECORDER of Nov. 7.) Is it because in doing so, I forever relinquished the right of free thought and expression on any educational question? I can conceive of no other reason. Is it true, then, that a man or woman in accepting a scholarship, is estopped, after the lapse of many years, from opposing (as I do not) a system of scholarships? Does such acceptance involve the surrender of independance and the sale of manhood? I trow not. In the name of the thousands of men and women who have accepted aid from State and private institutions and from various Boards and Funds, I protest against the idea.

The opinions of men change in the growing light of passing years. Calhoun once said, "The man who never changes his opinions is either infallible or an idiot." The man whose ideas are exactly coincident with those held by him thirty years ago is to be pitied. Still more to be pitied is the man who in securing his education has sold his birthright of freedom of thought and utterance.

Martin Luther was educated in Catholic schools and received Catholic aid. Had he no right, therefore, to believe and preach the doctrines of the Reformation?

If I have the free and indisputable right, not having sold my manhood, to express my opinions, my critics referred to above might have spared me this disagreeable sort of notoriety and themselves the violation of the laws of controversy.

If, on the other hand, this right is denied to me, it must also be denied to every other man who has ever accepted assistance from any quarter. If any one, in blaming me, has taken this position, he has suggested, it may be unawares, a most overwhelming argument against the whole system of free tuition. For myself and for others I repudiate this conception of the results of this system. But if this conception be the true one, the system is pernicious and is doomed. Yet this seems to be the opinion of some of my critics. Else why should they trouble themselves to print what "is reported" concerning my private affairs?

I am glad to avail myself of this opportunity to say that, so far from feeling ingratitude to my own Alma Mater, it will be a matter of lifelong gratitude with me that it was my privilege to sit at the feet of the noble and learned men who were my instructors there. Although, with many others of her sons, I have regretted the lowering of some of her standards of entrance and graduation, I have rejoiced in the increase of her endowment and in her usefulness. No man read with more pleasure the following statement, made last spring by the wise and scholarly Chairman of the Faculty of that institution. "For the last session we were able to say that the receipts from fees and endowment funds paid all the expenses of instruction, administration, and scholarships." The annual appropriation of the State is used entirely for the payment of an old debt, for which, of course, the State is responsible. The endowment is now very large, and one cannot but think that the institution is in a state of transition toward support on the Voluntary System.

CHAS. E. TAYLOR.
Wake Forest, Nov. 30, 1894.

As this may not be positive enough, we take occasion to say that Dr. Taylor did pay tuition at the University of Virginia in 1865-66 session, which is shown on the books of the proctor of the University of Virginia.

six days in the week in the schools, also cultivates the heart on the seventh day in the Sunday school; that he who acquires the power to criticise the Book from the exterior, may also have the heart changed and go into the Book and know that the secret of the Lord is with them that fear him.

Let not our young people grow up a nation of unbelievers and skeptics, developed in intellect and dwarfed in heart, spiritually cold and indigent, which throws the younger element of the church into worldliness. Let the Sunday school do its work, let the Bible be taught as God's Word revealing Christ as the same and only Saviour he has ever been. Thus teaching from the heart to the heart we may hope to have a nation whose God indeed is the Lord.

But there is a peril to which the others are of minor importance, for they are all included in this one. And if it is necessary to forget what has been said in order to remember this, then forget it all. This supreme peril is the loss of the soul. What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul, or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? The soul outweighs all other considerations. Can the Sunday school do anything here? Blessed be God, it can and does.

The rifle-barrel one yard long directs the ball a thousand yards. The influence of the Sunday-school on a man's youth lasts him throughout his life. The close companionship with Jesus, the most companionable of men, must and does react upon the Sunday-school pupil just as it did upon the two disciples on the way to Emmaus.

I would not make the Sunday school a panacea, else we would have no need of other Christian organizations; but let us give it due credit for teaching the word of God, which is a panacea, the sword of the Spirit which is the only and all sufficient weapon with which to fight the foe and come off more than conquerors, through him who loved us and gave himself for us.

Faithfulness Before Gentleness.

I for the first time beg space in the RECORDER for a few lines, in reference to a remark made sometime since, viz: "Deal gently, or they will leave the church. You must not be too rigid or severe in insisting upon the claims of duty and benevolence, or you will drive some of the members away from the church."

Such is the kind advice which a cautious church member sometimes volunteers to his minister.

In this day, faithfulness is often called severity, and telling the truth plainly, scolding. I hate scolding, both in its term and in its tones. But I utterly loathe timeserving, or the policy that conceals or palliates truth, from dread of giving offence. I would hear the truth spoken in love. The idea of glossing truth and thereby keeping on the church roll a lot of indifferent, worthless members, who feel no interest and will bear no responsibility in promoting the welfare and usefulness of the church, is abhorrent to good policy, true piety, and sincere integrity.

"But you will hurt their feelings," says one. They ought to be hurt. I would see truth poured scorching hot upon their consciences until it burnt out their indifference. They are greatly hurting the church by their worldliness, and why should we scruple in wounding them? Ulcers must be sometimes painfully probed, or they will never heal. But some very good people say, "Deal gently with such, or they will leave the church." Well, what good do they do in it? What would the church lose if they were all gone? Is their association with it so very desirable and beneficial, that we should tenderly implore their stay? What strength or efficiency would a thousand such add to the church? What right have they in it, if they have no sympathy with it, no interest in it, no affinity with the spirit of Jesus Christ, thereby being "none of His"? If the church is designed to be a living body, why desire to retain in it a mass of diseased or dead members? Trim off the dead branches, and the vine will be the more flourishing.

Leave the church! What a blessing that would be! If it is impossible to draw from them any manifestation of spiritual life, any expression of devotion and zeal; if they obstinately repudiate in their lives all that is positive and practical in Christianity, then their leaving will be a speedy relief.

Leave the church! Let them go to the world to which they belong, or to some worldly church where their consciences may be lulled by the form of godliness without the power thereof.

The Bible recognizes no such Christianity as theirs: it knows not piety that does not bear good fruit. If they bring forth only thorns and thistles, then they are only thorns and thistles.

There ought to be no tenderness wasted upon such professors of religion—none felt except such as we feel for all the ungodly in common with them as unregenerate sinners. They should be exhorted to repent and believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, lest they be found knocking at the closed door of heaven at last, saying "Lord, Lord, open unto us," and wailing at the fearful answer, "Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity, I never knew you." A Visit to Yadkin.

It was my privilege and pleasure to visit Yadkin county, and spend some ten or twelve days at Booneville and Union Grove.

A memorial service was held by the church at Booneville of Bro. Thomas Cadstephens, a faithful and worthy minister, who had died some time ago, and who held his membership here. Bro. Cadstephens was a very useful man in the Yadkin Association, and planted the cause of Christ at several places which developed into vigorous and active churches.

Yadkin is a Baptist country. They seem to grow and multiply in numbers rapidly in this county. While they are not aggressive in some respects, they are very much so in other respects. They love the truth and delight to hear the ring of pure gospel coin.

At Booneville I spent eight days in a meeting assisting Bro. Beamer, the pastor, with Bro. McKaughan who has recently moved to Scotland Neck. We divided the time between us in preaching, and it was delightful to be among brethren like those who live at Booneville and vicinity.

Booneville is no mean village, as it has three stores, a buggy factory, saw mill, tan yard, a high school, three churches, two doctors, and a daily mail.

The high school here, conducted by Professors Horn and Allen, is in a flourishing condition and growing in numbers constantly. The people here have built an excellent Academy, which they have dedicated to the cause of Christian education. Our meeting reached quite a number of the pupils, and a goodly number of them made an open profession of faith in Christ.

Twenty persons were received during the meeting for baptism.

On the third Sunday night I went down to Union Grove to aid Bro. Thomas C. Myers, who is pastor here, and who also has quite recently entered the work of the ministry. Bro. Myers is thoroughly consecrated to his work, and is doing much good in building up the Master's cause.

A large number of the Yadkin people are plain and unlettered, but a better type of humanity will be hard to find. I love them for their native worth, and there are among them some of the truest Baptists I ever saw.

At Boonville, Bro. McCoin and myself concluded to "rousicate" the brethren a little on the matter of building a new house of worship, and succeeded in getting $730 subscribed. I think they will build a house costing about $1,500. They very much need it and are fully able to build. Dr. Speese, a Wake Forest boy, is a leading spirit in this community, and headed the list with two hundred dollars. Boonville church has in it some splendid brethren and sisters; but, like many other churches, has a large element which is not as aggressive as they ought to be.

The Woodhouse Brothers are helping to solve the financial problem for this country by making our buggies here at home. They are doing a fine business and winning a wide reputation for their work.

While it is a digression in my letter, I would say that Bro. Wray has just closed a successful meeting here conducted by himself. His physical strength is not equal to his mental vigor, or he would have continued longer.

Broad Street is losing some valuable members by removal.

Bro. Stallings has resigned at Mocksville, and I learn will probably vacate His Davie field.

More anon. Yours fraternally,

S. F. CONRAD.

Letter of Sympathy to Rev J. W. F. Watson, Whose Wife God has Taken.

Dear Bro. Watson:—In this sad hour of bereavement, the members of Lystra Sunday-school send this as a token of their sympathy for you.

The death of Sister Watson calls up vividly to our minds what anxious care for us she always manifested. Whether in the church, the mission meeting, the Sunday-school, or at her own home,—her very life showed such a keen interest in our social and eternal welfare, that we, too, are sorely bereaved; and, sorrowing for our own loss and sympathizing with you in your loss, we would pray God to teach us how this sad dispensation of an unerring, just and merciful Father is to "work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

She is gone; she cannot return; but O! what a comfort, what a real joy to contemplate the fact that "she is not dead, but sleepeth." In view of this fact—the happy release from trouble and care—and the blessed awaking to see and know and be like her own dear Saviour whom she loved and honored while in the body; and, trusting that God will one day gather us home to himself where Sister Watson is waiting with Jesus to welcome you and us, we would rejoice with you; for in such meditations there must be joy to you, even in this dark hour. May her life, exemplifying Christian living, and her death, exemplifying the Christian's hope after death, draw you and us nearer the Saviour whose life and death made such a life and death as hers possible.

Pentecostal Hymns, a winnowed collection of 300 songs by best authors, for Evangelistic Services, Young People's Societies and Sunday schools. Edited by Henry Date. Music editors: E. A. Hoffman, W. H. Ogden and J. H. Tenny. 224 pages. Board covers. Price, $30 per hundred. Sample copy, 35 cents, prepaid. Hope Publishing Co., 56 Fifth Ave., Chicago.

Of Such is the Kingdom, and other Poems, by Anna Olcott Commelin. 8vo, 110 pages. Fancy cloth, gilt. Price, $1 50. Fowler & Wells Co., publishers, N. Y.

An exceedingly well made book so far as the publisher's art goes, and attractive at first sight to even the casual reader. But its dainty covers are merely an expression of the verse within them. The first poem gives its title to the volume, and that is charmingly set off by the beaming child faces of the really beautiful design of the frontispiece. The topics that represent the author's muse are various, now expressive of liveliness, hope, and sunny joyfulness, anon reflecting some phase of sadness that is common enough among our home life. The "Poems of Sorrow" are sweet, and to the sorrowful can not but be acceptable. They breathe a gentle spirit that is replete with consolation. It is even a pleasure to dwell on such verses as "How shall it be?" or "A Star in the Night."

Among the miscellaneous poems the ascriptive to the golden rod as "A National Flower" is one of the most finished productions of the volume. "Summer Friends" is a very delicate bit of work. "The Poet's Gift," "The Light Within" are to be mentioned also, while "My Valentine" is a charming feature of school-girl prankish zeal.

The November Annals of the American Academy contains the following papers: "Why Had Roscher so Little Influence in England?" by Rev. William Cunningham, the English economist; "Reasonable Railway Rates," by H. T. Newcomb, of the Auditor's Department of the Interstate Commerce Commission; "The Economic Function of Woman," by Dr. Edw. T. Devine of the American Society for the Extension of University Teaching; "Relief Work at the Wells Memorial Institute," by Miss Helena S. Dudley, of the Boston College Settlement; "Utility, Economics and Sociology," by Prof. F. H. Giddings, of Columbia College; "Organic Concept of Society," by Prof. S. N. Patten, of the University of Pennsylvania, and "Clark's Use of 'Rent' and 'Profits,'" by Prof. J. H. Hollander, of Johns Hopkins University. The Personal Notes and Book Department are up to the usual standard. The Department of Miscellany contains a report of the recent "International Congress of Hygiene and Demography," held at Budha Pesth. And a new feature is inaugurated in a series of Notes on Municipal Government, by Dr. Leo S. Rowe. A translation of the Italian Constitution, by Dr. S. M. Lindsay and Dr. L. S. Rowe, of the University of Pennsylvania, is sent as a supplement to this number. (Station B, Phila. $1 50.)

Thanksgiving Sermons and Outline Addresses. Compiled and edited by William E. Ketcham, D. D. Wilbur E. Ketcham, publisher, 2 Cooper Union, New York.

We are confident this volume will be welcomed by the clergy throughout the country. The Sermons and Outlines of Sermons are by prominent preachers of the day, and have been selected by the editor with discriminating care. The work will be found most suggestive to all who are engaged in the work of the ministry, and especially to those who are entering upon its arduous and important duties. Various are the legitimate ways the Christian minister may secure the needful preparation upon the fruitful theme of Thanksgiving. His primary resource must be God's own word. He is, however, lacking in research and ill qualified for this duty who fails to glean and appropriate from every field with prayerful care all help available. Those who have often traversed the fields in search of themes and material, and, therefore, whose skill and wisdom in selection is matured, can well render to those of lesser experience wholesome aid. A single suggestion may open in the reader's mind an unexpected fountain of thought from which shall flow healthful reflection and appropriate discourse. The work is evangelical, unsectarian, and thoroughly practical. 12mo, cloth, 330 pages, $1.50 postpaid.

Union Meeting of the Flat River Association.

A Wonderful Cure for Cancer.

There is no further need to cut cancers out with knives or burn them out with plasters. Dr. Scott Mason of Richmond, Va., has a cure for this dreadful affliction that supercedes all other methods in positive cure and rapid healing. Not only this, but it is painless when used and the only cure suitable for old people. It seeks out the diseased growths and destroys their vitality, causing the cancer to pass away leaving only an ordinary healthy sore which rapidly heals. The cure is specially favorable for cancer of mouth, nose, ear, and other delicate parts on account of high sensitiveness and great difficulty to use present remedies. Cases heretofore considered incurable are being turned over to Dr. Mason from all parts of the country and are rapidly cured.

Dr. Mason's cure is sent by express everywhere and applied at home without further cost. Those afflicted should write to Dr. Scott Mason, Richmond, Va., giving full description of case and get his price for a cure.

For programs for the Christmas Offering for enlargement of the work in China, for the Week of Prayer for Missions, and Offering Envelopes, send to Miss Fannie E. Heck, Raleigh, N. C.

Appeal for the Christmas Offering.

The preparation for the yearly observance by Woman's Missionary Union, auxiliary to the Southern Baptist Convention, of making a Christmas offering to Foreign Missions, is now complete. The program to be used at the ingathering of Christmas Envelopes will be sent with the envelopes all over our Southland, together with a series of topics designed to be helpful in leading the devotions of the Week of Prayer, January 6th to 13th. What will be the result remains with those to whom the programs and envelopes go. Let me ask all who receive them to read the program carefully and prayerfully, asking for God's enabling grace to forget self and listen to this appeal for China from Rev. R. T. Bryan, one of our most honored and consecrated missionaries.

The eyes of all the world are now upon China, concerned in the war that is going on in that land. What will be the outcome no human being can foretell. In any event, the call for Christians to send the Word of Life is more urgent than it has ever been, because the barriers which have kept foreigners out of that country have been removed, and the body of officials who have charge of foreign affairs have offered protection to all foreigners living in China, urging them not to leave their fields of labor. This is something that has never been heard of before. "Some have said that China wants the Gospel, but I tell you it is just the opposite—she does not want the Gospel." So writes one of our missionaries. We all know that the intelligent Chinese pride themselves in the knowledge of their own literature, which they think superior to all others. In fact, according to authentic history, their existence was 750 years prior to that of the Hebrew nation from which Christ was born; and, of course, they consider their religion superior to ours. Therefore they have looked upon us as presumptuous to come there thinking we can teach them anything. Let us remember, although it may be possible for an entire nation to be converted, it must come to pass by the conversion of each individual of that nation; so each one of the 400,000,000 lost souls, of whom our brother, Rev. R. T. Bryan, tells us in his appeal for China, has to be brought to Christ individually. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."

Can we not learn something of self sacrifice and devotion to our duty from them, in their earnest and faithful devotion to what they believe to be right. From the Methodist Review of Missions we take the following as to the worship of ancestry: "A missionary in China says the people in that land spend annually $3 000 000 for the worship of their ancestry. Add to this the support of the Buddhist and Taoist priests, and an estimate can be formed of the immense cost of the false religions in that nation. All share the cost. The poorest man in the Empire bears a part of the burden. When the people of Christian lands give with equal liberality for the spread of the kingdom of Christ, how soon will the knowledge of Christ be known among the nations!"

Shall we whose souls are lighted
By wisdom from on high,
Shall we to man benighted
The light of life deny?

Seeing, therefore, the responsibility which is resting on us as individuals, let us search our hearts and see if there is any evil in them; and pray to our Father to enable each one of us to realize the responsibility which is placed upon us to give of our means, according as God has prospered us, for the support of those who have gone as our substitutes. God deals with individuals; and we as Christians here at home are individually responsible for the conversion of the heathen. "None of us liveth to himself." "We shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ. For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God." So, then, every one of us shall give account of himself to God.

A. M. GWATHMEY,
Pres Woman's Missionary Union.

A Gateway to Spanish America.

"Evidences point strongly to the fact that Cuba is a strategic point. Let us be wise in the army of the Lord. The influence of the work in Cuba is coming back to Florida, giving new impetus to the work there, reaching many of the Cubans of Southern Florida, never before touched by that influence. Nay, more,—there are signs that Spanish America and Spain itself will be reached through the portal of Cuba."

The programs for the Christmas Offering and Week of Prayer, arranged by the Womans' Missionary Union, are now ready. Order at once. Last year our Christmas Offering was small; last year the Week of Prayer was observed in few Societies. Let it not be so this year. Make the Christmastide happy by keeping God in your thoughts. Thank him in this time of gifts for his "unspeakable gift." Bring as an offering of thanks some gift to the Giver. Begin the year with prayer. Every day for a week go to God in prayer for missions, in little neighborhood circles, in the whole Society, or alone in your own home. Request that the weekly prayer-mission be on mission topics, and ask your pastor to make the first sermon of the year a missionary sermon.

None But Royal

BAKING POWDER is absolutely pure. No other equals it, or approaches it in leavening strength, purity, or wholesomeness. (See U. S. Gov't Reports.) No other is made from cream of tartar specially refined for it and chemically pure. No other makes such light, sweet, finely-flavored, and wholesome food. No other will maintain its strength without loss until used, or will make bread or cake that will keep fresh so long, or that can be eaten hot with impunity, even by dyspeptics. No other is so economical.

The Baking Powders now being offered in this vicinity, with the statement that they are "as good as Royal," have been shown by the official analyses to be composed of alum and detrimental to health.

The official chemists of the United States and Canada, State analysts, municipal boards of health, and physicians indorse the great qualities of the Royal Baking Powder.

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs.

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON, RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its messing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

PRICES: Leatherette, 50c; Cloth, 60c.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

It is thought the next Legislature will establish "a reformatory" for youthful criminals.

A press dispatch says a colony of Pennsylvania Scandinavians will locate in the eastern part of the State.

Associate Justice Walter Clark published simultaneously in the leading dailies of the State, an article advocating "the non-partisan" idea in politics.

Mrs. J. A. Haulman of Cleveland county committed suicide on Thanksgiving day by hanging herself. It is thought that her mind was temporarily deranged.

The State Canvassing Board, composed of the Governor and council, and two State Senators, is now in session canvassing the returns of the recent election.

Three prisoners, charged with petty larceny, in attempting to burn their way out of the jail at Polkton, lost control of the fire and were consumed in the flames.

Warshaw has been annoyed of late with incendiaries. Recently, J. M. Price, Jr., a merchant, was arrested, being charged with an attempt to burn his own store in order to secure the insurance.

Maj. J. C. Winder, who has been actively "the head" of the R. & G. R. R. for the past twenty years, and more recently of the Seaboard Air Line System, has resigned. E. St. John of Chicago succeeds him.

Mr. J. P. H. Adams, who was elected sheriff of Wake county by the fusionists, was unable to give a satisfactory bond to the Board of County Commissioners, and Mr. Page, the present incumbent, was chosen by the Board.

Wednesday night, near Heckingham, two freight trains collided running at the speed of thirty miles an hour, which resulted in the death of Engineers Wells and Waters, and the complete demolishment of the two engines and several cars.

Since Marion was destroyed by fire, many of the smaller towns of the State without protection and facilities necessary to control fires, have bestirred themselves and are agitating the question of equiping their fire departments with modern and sufficient appliances.

Last week, Methodists of Western North Carolina were in session at Statesville, the Eastern Conference was held at Durham, the Christians met at Raleigh, and our Baptist State Convention at Charlotte. Truly, this was a week of religious gatherings in North Carolina.

General News.

Bandits recently held up an Express train in Texas, securing probably $140,000.

The latest news from the war in the East is to the effect that China will probably ask Japan's terms for a cessation of hostilities.

Congress convened on Monday and received President Cleveland's annual message, which eclipsed all previous efforts for lengthiness.

The Democrats of the Senate have refused to adopt the cloture rule. This practically gives the opposition power to defeat any objectionable legislation at this session of Congress.

The representation of four generations of the English monarchy at Windsor—the Queen, Prince of Wales, Duke of York and his young son—is a notable fact, never before occurring.

The Legislature of South Carolina has defeated by one vote a bill to reduce the legal rate of interest to seven per cent. A bill has been framed to reduce the salaries of State officers twenty per cent.

The wholesale slaughter of 10,000 Armenians by Turks, which was at first doubted, has been confirmed. Such an outrage for atrocity and barbarity has never been equaled in the civilized world.

De Lesseps, the eminent French engineer who made possible and successfully completed the Suez canal, died Friday last. He was also interested in the Panama canal, about which so many scandals have arisen.

The recent reports of the torturing of the two Japanese students by the Chinese in the most revolting and sickening manner possible has attracted the attention of the press throughout the country. Our government, which originally gave them refuge, has received even condemnation for delivering them to Chinese authorities as spies.

The Cotton States and International Exposition to be held in Atlanta next year, promises to surpass anything of the kind heretofore inaugurated in the South. The nations of the world will be officially represented, and various States are making extensive preparations to display their resources.

Kolb, late populist candidate for Governor of Alabama, who claims that he was twice defeated out of the governorship, took the oath before a small gathering of his admirers on the outside of the Capitol. His much advertised 50,000 constituents failed to materialize. Oates, Democrat, was officially sworn in, there being no disturbance at all.

A CELEBRATED MOUNTAIN CLIMBER.—W. M. Conway, who recently reached a greater height than had ever before been attained by any mountain climber, has described his adventures "Among Highest Himalayas" in an article which The Youth's Companion announces among many other attraction for the coming year.

Parrish's Warehouse, Durham, N. C.

Headquarters for the sale of Leaf Tobacco. It is no doubt the largest and the best lighted Warehouse in North Carolina.

You will always find the best accommodations for man and horses, as well as get full market prices for all grades of your tobacco.

Capt. E. J. Parrish has been in the Warehouse business for more than twenty-one years, and always works hard to get every cent he can for his customers.

Mr. John W. Pope who was manager of the Alliance Warehouse is now with the Parrish Warehouse as General Manager and will look after your interest, and hopes his friends will come to see him.

You can do as well at Parrish's Warehouse as you can anywhere, and none will appreciate your patronage more than Capt. Parrish. Try him with your next load.

Large demands for smokers, cutters and wrappers. Business always dispatched with promptness and accuracy and full market prices always obtained at Parrish's Warehouse.

Faith takes up the cross, love binds it to the soul, patience bears it to the end.—Sel.

The Youths Companion promises to be exceptionally strong in its fiction during the coming year. Among the famous story-writers who will contribute to it are Robert Louis Stevenson, J. M. Barrie, Rudyard Kipling, W. D. Howells, J. T. Trowbridge, Clark Russel, Harold Fredric and C. A. Stephens.

Justification by faith on the side of man, a justification by grace on the side of God.—Timothy Dwight.

DOWNES—WILLIAMS—On Nov. 29th, at the residence of Mr. M. W. Doggett in Asheville, N. C., by Rev. G. L. Finch of Biltmore, N. C., Mr. Albert S. Downes and Miss Mayfield Williams, both of Northampton county, Virginia.

DIED.

SORRELL—Died on November 29th, 1894, of heart disease, Sophronia E., daughter of J. P. and M. E. Sorrell, of Wake county. She was four years and eight months old. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. W. H. Chappell.

YOUNG—Sister Priscilla Young was born Dec. 24th, 1830, and died Oct. 3d, 1894. She was blind from her birth, and never saw with her natural eyes; but spiritual sight was given her twenty-three years ago when she gave her heart to Christ. Her life afterwards was one of patient, loving trust in him who had healed her. She was a member of Youngsville Baptist church. R.

CAMP—Carrie Lea Camp, the subject of this little sketch, was the eldest daughter of James L. and Carrie F. Camp, and was born in Hertford county, N. C., Oct. 12th, 1886, and fell asleep at her home in Franklin, Va., Nov. 13th, 1894, having brightened the home, gladdened the hearts and blessed the lives of our brother and sister just eight years, one month and a day; not very long it is true, only a child's life, and yet it was long enough for the child's life so to entwine itself about the hearts of those who loved her, that when she went away the hearts seemed to go with her. And the light from the child's life was so warm and bright that it was cold and dark when the light went out.

Hers was a nature which engenders favoritism, obedient, gentle and affectionate, she was easily a favorite at home and in school; generous, self-denying and brimming over with life and spirit she was a leader among children; attractive in person and winning in manner she was loved by all who knew her, and the tears and sadness of the great throng at her funeral were not so much from sympathy with the family as they were the expression of a personal loss and a common bereavement.

Even during the brief scope of her little life was deep spirituality developed under the pious training of godly parents, as the following incident will show. Some months ago she came to her mother one day in great perplexity with this question, "Mama, what does 'being a Christian' mean?" "Nothing, darling," said her mother, "but to love the Lord and trust in Jesus." And then all the trouble left the little face as she replied, "Why, mama, I have been doing that a long time."

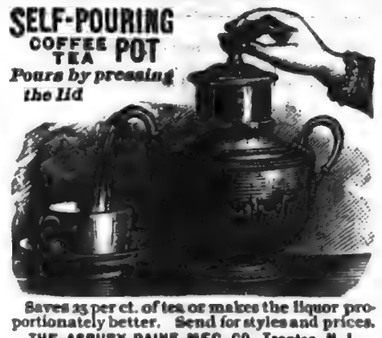
There were peculiar reasons which made the dear little one doubly dear to the writer; in person, disposition, and manner she was the exact image of her mother, who as his oldest sister was his constant companion and playmate, and the dearest tie that binds him to the recollection of his childhood, and many a time while visiting the family and watching little Lea and her brother at play the years seemed to roll back, and it was no longer "Lea and Buddie Rob," but it was "Carrie and Buddie." God grant that in the years to come the memory of the little sister who has passed away may prove the benediction to her brother that the influence of that other sister has been to me.

It was hard, hard, to give thee up, little one, and that none know so well or feel so keenly as the bleeding hearts of thy father and mother, but the God who called thee to himself is a Father too, and he knows what it is to give up a child, and he will heal the wounds he has inflicted.

After all there is something to be envied in a life like hers. The bud was plucked ere it was open, it is true, but it is also true that it was with the dew of its freshness and purity still upon it, with ne'er a petal soiled or withered and was plucked but to ope in a more genial clime.

The stream met the ocean close to its source it is true, but it was with its waters as pure and sparkling as they came from the fount—unpolluted by wandering through the mire of a sinful world.

Its mission was done. What though it was done early? It was done well.



As we turned away from her little grave the words of Dickens on the death of little Nell came to me with a new meaning, and I add them here not only because they are apt, but because in my heart I believe they are true: "Oh! it is hard to take to heart the lesson that such deaths will teach; but let no man reject it, for it is one that all must learn, and is a mighty, universal truth. When Death strikes down the innocent and young, for every fragile form from which he lets the panting spirit free, a hundred virtues rise in shapes of mercy, charity and love, to walk the world and bless it. Of every tear that sorrowing mortals shed on such green graves, some good is born, some gentler nature comes. In the Destroyer's steps there spring up brighter creations that defy his power, and his dark path becomes a way of light to heaven."

Even so shall it be with the life and death of our darling little Lea.

M. Hammerly, a well-known business man of Hillsboro, Va., sends this testimony to the merits of Ayer's Sarsaparilla: "Several years ago, I hurt my leg, the injury leaving a sore which led to erysipelas. My sufferings were extreme, my leg, from the knee to the ankle, being a solid sore, which began to extend to other parts of the body. After trying various remedies, I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, before I had finished the first bottle, I experienced great relief; the second bottle effected a complete cure."

COTTOLENE.

You Will

never need another dose of Dyspepsia Medicine after a meal, if your food is cooked with Cottolene, the new vegetable shortening, instead of lard. Cottolene aids the digestive powers—lard destroys them, which will you choose? The genuine Cottolene is identified by this trade mark—steer's head in cotton-plant wreath—on every pail.

The Home Circle.

The Sifting of Peter.

In St. Luke's gospel we are told
How Peter in the days of old
Was sifted:
And now, though ages intervene,
Sin is the same, while time in scene
Are shifted.

Satan desires us great and small,
As wheat to sift us, and we all
Are tempted;
Not one, however rich and great,
Is by his station or estate
Exempted.

No house so safely guarded is
But he by some device of his,
Can enter;
No heart hath armor so compete,
But he can pierce with arrow's fleet
Its center.

For all at last the cock will crow,
Who hear the warning voice, but go
Unheeding;
Till thrice and more they have denied
The Man of Sorrows, crucified
And bleeding.

One look of that pale, suffering face
Will make us feel the deep disgrace
Of weakness;
We shall be sifted till the strength
Of self-conceit be changed at length
To meekness.

Wounds of the soul, though healed will accuse,
The reddening scars remain, and make Confession;
Lost innocence returns no more;
We are not what we were before
Transgression.

But noble souls, through dust and heat,
Rise from disaster and defeat
The stronger;
And conscious still of the divine
Within them, lie on earth supine
No longer.

—H. W. Longfellow.

Pleasing Mother.

Mothers are usually pleased with the success of their children. This is especially true in their life after leaving home. A mother watches the successive steps and efforts of her children as only a mother can. If they succeed in their callings, she rejoices as no one else can. If children appreciate the concern that is felt for them, and the earnest desire for their success that follows them everywhere by their mothers, they would care vastly more about pleasing them than is often the case.

Pleasing mother should be a habit with children. Early in life they should begin the cultivation of thought and effort with reference to the gratification of her wishes and of making her happy. If they would do this they would find daily opportunities for speaking kind words and rendering such helpful services, and showing such noble traits of character in dealings with others, as would gladden the heart and lighten the cares of mother in a way too often little thought of. If boys, if girls, could realize their indebtedness to their mothers they certainly would generally be very much more anxious about pleasing them.

The great men of the world, like John Quincy Adams, James A. Garfield, and others, who have acknowledged their great indebtedness to their mothers, took great delight in pleasing them. But most of all their noble lives, their courage in doing right, and their honorable achievements in public life were especially pleasing to their noble mothers. Hardly a higher tribute can be paid to any young man's success in life than that "it pleased his mother."—Religious Telescope.

Contrast Between Paris and London.

In the streets French traffic all goes to the right; London coachman drive to the left. Parisians live together in large houses like barracks; Londoners have one family in a house. They have a latch key; the Frenchman, a concierge. Paris has its cafes; London, its clubs. Parisian beds are up in an alcove of the wall; Londoners sleep in the middle of the room. London takes three or four meals a day; Paris, two. Paris dines; London eats. Paris loaves are long; London, square. Paris drinks wine; London, beer. Paris takes coffee; London, tea. Frenchman while drinking talk to their neighbor and enjoy each other's company; Britons sit alone at table and don't say much, but enjoy their food. London workman work in their ordinary clothes, call each other "mate," smoke clay pipes, and punch each other's heads occassionally; Parisian workmen do their business in blouses, call their friend "citizen," or "sir," smoke cigarettes, take their hats off to each other, and do their fighting with their feet.—Tidbits' Guide to Paris.

A Useful Idea.

I remember that in the autum following the war, a gentleman said to me, in a confident tone, in the presence of several other persons, "I have lost all my faith in Providence, sir, since the war turned out all wrong." I thought it right to reply, "Beg a thousand pardons, I don't believe you ever had any faith in Providence to lose. You thought Providence might be a useful idea if it would work to suit you."—Broadus.

He lives long that lives well; and time misspent is not lived, but lost.—Fuller.

A Struggle for Appearance.

A St. Louis paper relates an instance of the pride of a child who struggled to keep up appearances in a way that was touching to witness. The hopelessness of the endeavor was made painfully manifest by the well-meant action of her teacher, and the facts are these:

Just before the close of the last session of the public schools of that city, an incident took place which, as an illustration, is more than touching. At one of the schools, numbers of pupils were in the habit of bringing a luncheon with them, which at noon they ate together. Among those who did not go home to dinner, the teacher in a particular room noticed a little girl who always sat looking wistfully at her playmates when they went out with their luncheon, but who never brought any herself.

The child was always neatly but very poorly clad, and one of the closest students in school hours. This odd action of the child's lasted for some time, when one day the teacher noticed that the little thing had apparently brought her dinner with her. The noon hour came, and the children took their lunch as usual and went out to eat it, the little girl referred to alone remaining in the room, with her dinner wrapped up in a paper on her desk before her. The teacher advanced to the child and asked her why she didn't go out with the rest, at the same time putting out her hand toward the package on the desk. Quick as thought the little girl clasped her hands over it and exclaimed, sobbing: "Don't touch it, teacher, and don't tell, please! It's only blocks!" And that was the fact. Having no dinner to bring, and too proud to reveal the poverty of her family the child had carefully wrapped up a number of small blocks in paper and brought the package to present the appearance of a lunch! It was nothing, a mere ridiculous incident in school life; but it was sufficient to make wiser and older hearts than hers sad.—Young People's Leader.

The Weather.

When you wish to know what the weather is to be, go and select the smallest cloud you see; keep your eye upon it, and if it decreases and disappears it shows a state of the air which will be sure to be followed by fair weather; but if it increases in size, falling weather will not be far off. The reason is this: When the air is becoming charged with electricity you will see every cloud attracting all less ones toward it until it gathers into a shower. And, on contrary, when the fluid is passing off or diffusing itself, even a large cloud will be seen breaking to pieces and dissolving.—Young People's Leader.

Make Yourself Heard.

This little clipping is good, though homely:

The men who prosper in this world are the men who mind their own business and keep on minding it. An exchange furnishes an example:

"'Tatoes!' cried a colored peddler in Richmond.

"'Hush dat racket! You distracts de whole neighborhood!' responded a colored woman from a doorway.

"'You kin hear me, kin you?'

"'Hear you? I kin hear you a mile!'

"'Tanks! I's hollerin' to be heard! Tatoes!'"

Ill humor is but the inward feeling of our own want of merit.—Goethe.

GOOD SPIRITS

follow good health while low spirits, melancholia, impaired memory, morose, or irritable temper, fear of impending calamity and a thousand and one derangements of body and mind, result from pernicious, solitary practices, often indulged in by the young, through ignorance of their ruinous consequences. Nervous debility, and loss of manly power, not infrequently result from such unnatural habits.

To reach, reclaim and restore such unfortunates to health and happiness, is the aim of an association of medical gentlemen, who have prepared a treatise, written in plain but chaste language and treating of the nature, symptoms and curability, by home treatment, of such diseases.

A copy of this useful book will, on receipt of this notice, with 10 cents in stamps, for postage, be mailed securely sealed in a plain envelope. Address, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE CENTURY
IN 1895.

Taking advantage of the general revival of interest in the Great Emperor, THE CENTURY will print during 1895

A NEW LIFE OF NAPOLEON,
Magnificently Illustrated.

THE CENTURY is famous for its great historical serials, and never in its history has a greater one been projected than this new "Life of Napoleon," written by Prof. William M. Sloane of Princeton, who has spent many years in preparation for his work. Thus far no biography of "the man of destiny" has appeared in either English or French that is free from rancor and attentive to the laws of historical criticism. THE CENTURY has secured it the great, all-round, complete and interesting history of the life of one of the most marvelous of men. No matter how much you already know of Napoleon, you will want to read this; here is the concentration of all the lives and memoirs. The illustrations will be magnificent—the wealth of THE CENTURY'S art department will be lavished upon them. Two members of the staff have just returned from Paris, where they have been securing all that is best of Napoleonic material. New portraits will be printed, great historical paintings reproduced, and Castaigne and other modern artists have drawn anew some of the great scenes of Napoleon's life for this history.

In addition to this there will be

A New Novel By
MARION CRAWFORD.

The title is "Casa Braccio," and it is a romance of Italy, full of human passion and exciting episode.

A New Novel By
MRS. BURTON HARRISON

will be published during the year. It is called "An Errant Wooing," and is a tale of wandering (and love) among new scenes of travel in Northern Africa and Southern Spain.

OTHER FEATURES

will be several familiar papers on "Washington in Lincoln's Time," by Noah Brooks, who was on terms of unusual intimacy with the War President; "The Cathedrals of France," by Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer, with illustrations by Joseph Pennell. Many more serials will be announced later.

RUDYARD KIPLING

contributes his First American Story to the December number of THE CENTURY.

THE PRICE of THE CENTURY is $4.00 a year. "No home is complete without it." Begin subscriptions with November number. Whatever other magazines you may take, you must have THE CENTURY. All agents and dealers take subscriptions, or remittance may be made directly to

We venture to remark that it will seem inconsistent if the people who have been shouting "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," go to sleep before Christmas. The word eternal is something considerable; it implies considerably more than six or eight or a dozen weeks or months or years. Think about it, and watch. If Vigilance detected corrupt practices two years or ten years or twenty years ago, Vigilance now will detect tempters and agents of corruption, if not the very practices. Corruption does not sleep, nor does it discriminate between parties; and, though oft defeated, it is never vanquished.

Of course there is any amount of speculation with regard to the approaching session of the Legislature. Indeed not a few have had themselves delivered of their foreknowledge in the matter. This one informs the public who are the Senators about to-be, that one kindly assures us of the body's action upon the State-aid to higher education question, another upon the common schools, another the election law, and yet others upon the county government question. Well, any one may guess; and there's no objection if no one takes it seriously. But unfortunately there are good people who do take almost everything seriously, even local politicians' opinions.

Immediately after the result of the late election became evident, an editor in another State saw fit to write at some length to show that North Carolina is in "sorry plight politically;" and, to make matters worse (at least, that might have been their design), several of our State contemporaries reproduced the editorial. Now the saying is, "every one has a right to his own opinion;" but we beg to question any one's right to count chickens two months aforetime. And the more wrong is it, if to do so injures the entire barnyard. People would live longer and die with fewer gray hairs, anyway, if they would only go slow when they feel inclined to think ill of any one—even though he be a political opponent and by nature unpromising. Let's wait until the Legislature has adjourned before we become wholly disconsolate.

One can do worse than guess evil—a great deal worse; but those who do, seldom get any one of consequence to take them seriously. And this is well. The second day after election a daily paper was making much capital of the fact that North Carolina bonds had lost a point or two the day after election. The daily was to all appearances very much elated. "We told you so," was the gleeful refrain of the gloating announcement. But the daily had overlooked the fact that it itself had announced, "The State is safe," the day after election, and the New York papers all had similar announcements. So according to our daily's reasoning, the safety of the State was the cause of the drop in price of bonds. But our daily's reasoning, like its probable wishes, was bad.

At present the price of the bonds is steady. If it falls or rises, either may be the result of a thousand influences other than political. But the last thing any one has a right to do, is to gleefully talk them down.

THE RECORDER has had on hand quite four months a few remarks relating to some features of the income tax law; but it seems really useless to say anything about it. There are not enough of $4,000 incomes in these parts to bother; and not only this, but also it is now most probable that the income tax law will not amount to anything. Appearances go to show that it was a great big bluff. If it was, it was the biggest on record, judging from the dismal wails and fierce protestations provoked by its enactment.

It is probably a good idea to begin now and advise future legislators that, when they get into the position of desiring not to vote for a bill, because to vote for it costs votes, and at the same time feel impelled to vote for it on principle, the only way out is to vote for the bill and forget to vote for any appropriations for carrying the law into action. Scarcely anything has been said lately in regard to the income tax. The campaign is over, you know; and there's no use talking now, that is, if the income tax bill was a bluff. And we have been told that less than $30,000 was appropriated to collect it, when such collection is calculated to cost at least $200,000. The law goes into effect, if it goes at all, January 1st, 1895; and we will see about it then.

Meanwhile it may be consoling to know that if the law should be upheld, all persons whose incomes amounted to $4,000 or less would escape the income tax gatherer, though indeed every one whose income is as much as $3,500 has to have the fact put on record. And there may be one or two readers who will be pleased to know that according to the bill officers of States, counties and municipalities would not be required to pay tax on their salaries, which is wrong. A tax of two per cent. would be levied on an income in excess of $4,000, except that of purely benevolent institutions and that derived from United States bonds. If, however, one has an income of $4,000 and makes his home supplies, he would not be taxed for the money value of the latter, as he would be, if he were paid in produce. On the other hand, if one owns any amount, one dollar or a million dollars, of stock in a corporation, the aggregate profit of which is more than $4,000 he has to pay income tax; for the income of corporations would be taxed before the dividends are declared.

If the law does not die of neglect or counter legislation, it will expire by limitation January 1st, 1900.

A LAWYER, who had had reason to investigate, informed us not long ago that a correct copy of the Constitution of North Carolina has not been printed in a considerable number of years. One who has followed the discussion of the question of State-aid to higher education must be painfully conscious of actual differences, not merely of opinion, but of statement as to what the Constitution does or does not say.

Now Constitutions are made to be read and understood. That is said easily enough; but the fact that meets us squarely is that the school children of North Carolina are scarcely aware that such an instrument as a Constitution is extant in North Carolina. And, what is worse, those who are out of school and before the world are not so well acquainted with the document as to be entirely assured in their opinions relative to it. It is doubtlessly difficult to make a constitution interesting, either to children or men; but we might print some copies for distribution, so that it could be said that any one who might wish to undertake to read it, could do so at will. Copies are printed with the biennial enactments, but an eminent authority has informed us that they are incorrect; and at best they cannot be procured as they could be if they were printed in separate pamphlet form.

It is the opinion of this writer that the Constitution of the United States, and more especially that of North Carolina, ought to be text books in our schools. This present ignorance of an instrument so vital to the State ought not to be. And there ought to be a place where any one can get a copy of the Constitution for the asking.

A RECENT incident of the Japan-China hostilities is particularly interesting to North Carolinians. The United States had accepted charge of Japanese subjects in China and of Chinese subjects in Japan—a considerable charge, to be sure. The Chinese government became suspicious and demanded the surrender of two Japanese students residing in China, on the ground that they were spies. The United States, represented by Consul General Jernigan, and Mr. Denby for our minister at Pekin, undertook to delay action until the students might be brought before a tolerably just tribunal for trial. Messrs. Jernigan and Denby were getting on successfully until an order came from Secretary Gresham at Washington instructing them to surrender the students to the Chinese; and, though they were ever so willing and probably able to protect the students there was no alternative. The students were taken by the Chinese authorities, horribly tortured and gradually put to death. If they had a trial, it was by Chinese, and therefore biased justices; but we have not heard that they had a trial.

Now all this is on the other side of the world, and rather a small matter, comparatively; but it touches home folks and involves our nation. First, it is said, China takes the surrender of the students as a confession that the United States cannot live up to the protecting attitude that it has assumed; and, if this is true, the Chinese soldiers may not be so studiously respectful of our brethren and friends in their kingdom. Second, the Chinese authorities pledged that they would not kill the students, but merely hold them prisoners. This pledge to the United States appears to have been broken; and if it has been, China will have to make reparation not only to victorious Japan, but to threatening America.

Close Communion from a Church Standpoint.

BY REV. J. J. LANSDELL.

I have just read Bro. Jenkens' contribution on this subject in the RECORDER of Nov. 28th, and extend to him my hearty congratulations for it. There is one point that he emphasizes which is too much overlooked by Baptist writers, and that is the church. That there is such an institution recognized in the New Testament is beyond question, but what it is, is frequently overlooked; and when ascertained in its component parts too many fail to recognize its binding authority in all time. Our Lord said, "the kingdom of heaven cometh not with observation." Luke 17: 20. By this I understand show and parade, such as accompany earthly kingdoms and governments; on the contrary, Christ's kingdom is simple, plain, without outward show and display, and well adapted to the common mass of mankind. But such as it is, is the output of divine wisdom, and as such we should cherish and magnify it. The church, as a New Testament institution, is divine and of perpetual authority, and no human has the right to change it from its original pattern, for if changed it ceases to be a New Testament church.

I give a few quotations from Mosheim, who is often quoted: 1st cent., chap. 2, sec. 5, "As to the external form of the church, and the mode of governing it, neither Christ himself nor his apostles gave any express precepts. We are therefore to understand that this matter is left chiefly to be regulated as circumstances from time to time may require, and as the discretion of civil and ecclesiastical rulers shall judge expedient." Here the learned author adroitly paves the way for the statement of facts which follows. He speaks of "express precepts," so as to break the force of recorded example, and recognizes the authority of civil rulers in church matters—a union of Church and State. This was necessary to avoid ruling out, as proper churches, such ecclesiastical harlots as had connected themselves with civil government, and were in other respects unlike the apostolic churches. Hear him further: "If, however—what no Christian can doubt, the apostles of Jesus Christ acted by divine command and guidance, then that form of the primitive churches which they derived from the church at Jerusalem, erected and organized by the apostles themselves, must be accounted divine." But hear him again, as though writhing under the force of the facts about to be written down: "But still it will not follow that this form of the church was to be perpetual and unalterable." If that which "must be accounted divine" is not to be "perpetual and unalterable," then I would like to know what is! Now for his facts. "In those primitive times each Christian church was composed of the people, the presiding officers, and the assistants or deacons. These must be the component parts of every society. The principle voice was that of the people, or of the whole body of Christians." Sec. 14: "All the churches, in those primitive times, were independent bodies; or none of them subject to the jurisdiction of any other." Sec. 12: "In this century and the next, a bishop had charge of a single church, which might be ordinarily contained in a private house; nor was he its lord, but was in reality its minister or servant." Book 1, Cent. 1, Part 2, ch. 3, sec. 5: "At the first promulgation of the gospel, all who professed firmly to believe that Jesus was the only redeemer of mankind, and who promised to lead a holy life conformable to the religion he taught, were received immediately among the disciples of Christ; nor did a more full instruction in the principles of Christianity precede their baptism, but followed after it." Chap. 4, sec. 8: "In this century baptism was administered in convenient places, without the public assemblies, and by immersing the candidates wholly in water." Not a word is said about baptizing infants.

The foregoing extracts from Moshiem, whose History is in nearly every Pedobaptist preacher's library who has a library, show most conclusively that the churches of the first century—the apostolic churches—were just such as are now called Baptist churches, and that such a church organization was divine. Now, if that is so—and Moshiem says it is—then all other church organizations are necessarily of human origin, and should be treated as such. A New Testament church organization is entirely destitute of anything like show and parade and ostentation. There is nothing in it to catch a popular worldly gaze, but it is a fit home for the spiritually-minded. It is the divine casket into which it was the design of the Great Head of the church that the jewels of his grace should be set. Those who have been enabled by divine grace to see it should prize it as a heritage from the Lord. It is perfect because it is divine. It is adapted to all ages, to all countries, to all conditions of society, and to all forms of civil government. It sheds light on all, but borrows from none. Christ is the head, the New Testament the charter, and the Holy Spirit the light of this organization. If the historical statements of Mosheim are true—not his opinions—then it follows that the Baptist organization is the only New Testament church organization on earth, and the only one that exists by divine authority.

I have thought for some time that the communion question ought to be presented from a church standpoint as well as from the baptismal standpoint. Let it be distinctly stated that we do not recognize sprinkled organizations as New Testament churches. While we may regard individual members of such organizations as converted people, yet we do not recognize them as church members. And let it also be as distinctly stated that it is not we who have made the New Testament organization, but Christ and the apostles by the light and guidance of the Holy Spirit, as testified to abundantly by the most learned writers of Christian antiquity; and if converted people are members of post-apostolic organizations, (I mean as to form,) it is their misfortune, not our fault.

I would like to see Bro. Jenkens' article put in tract form or in leaflets and generally distributed.

New Testament Studies—No. 12

BY RIGHT G. MOORE.

EPISTLE TO THE GALATIANS.

1. Galatia. Deriving its name from its Gallic settlers, Galatia was also known as Gallo-Grecia because of the Greek colonists who intermingled with the Gauls. It was a small mountainous district lying in central Asia Minor, bounded on the north by Bythinia and Paphlagonia, on the east by Pontus and Cappadocia, on the south and west by Phrygia. The river Halys flowed through its boundaries, promoting its fertility and productiveness. It is first mentioned in the New Testament by the writer of Acts (16: 6) and known throughout as a Roman province whose exact limits are difficult to determine.

2. The Galatians. The great and migratory stock which overran western Europe poured into Greece in the third century before the Christian era. When this Celtic torrent appeared on the shores of the Hellespont and Bosporus, Nicomedes I, King of Bythinia, was engaged in civil war. He immediately secured them as allies and paid them for their services the district thenceforward known as Galatia. Here the Gauls settled about 280 B. C. They fell under the power of Rome about 189 B. C., and later became a Roman province under Augustus (26 B. C.)

Though Greek was the prevailing language of these eastern Gauls, they yet retained something of their ancient tongue. The people were but partly civilized, and while, according to Cesar, "the whole race was excessively devoted to religious observances," their system of idolatry was extremely gross and debasing. In common with their ancestors the Galatians were fickle and impulsive, "soft and sensual, prompt to learn, prompt to despise, and greedy of new things." "Drunkenness, niggardliness, vanity and quarrelsomeness, impressibility and quickness of apprehension, an inquisitive, eager and fickle disposition" were some of their features discussed by ancient writers and readily traced in the Epistle of Paul.

While the Celtic was by far the strongest element in the population of Galatia, other peoples were abundantly represented throughout the country. The Greeks were so numerous and influential as to make their own language that of the district. The Romans finally became the governing race, and they were to be found at the various centers of business. The Jews, attracted by commercial advantages, here secure special rights and privileges which were recorded by Augustus in his temple at Ancyra.

3. Planting of Christianity. We are informed by the Paulinè historian (Acts 16: 16) that the Apostle, accompanied by Silas and Timothy, on his second missionary journey visited "the region of Galatia." This was very probably in the year 51 or 52 A. D. Paul was pressing on to fulfil his mission in Europe, but was detained by illness (Gal. 4: 13) among the Galatians. With characteristic fervor he proclaimed the gospel to the people who were deeply moved by his doctrine and strongly attached to his person. They showed him every possible attention, and when, after recovery, he departed, they were running the Christian race (Gal. 5: 7) with energy and success.

4. Judaism in the Churches. After a lapse of more than two years, Paul again visited Galatia in the course of his third missionary journey. He was then on the way from Jerusalem to Ephesus in the year 54 A. D. He discovered with sadness the symptoms of "alienated affection and weariness in well doing." The Judaising emissaries had, as usual, been on his track, opposing his apostolic authority, doubting his doctrine, and maintaining the necessity of circumcision and the full observance of the Jewish law. The presence of Paul doubtless hushed the disturbing elements for a time, but after his departure they broke out afresh and serious dangers threatened the churches of Galatia. The receipt of this intelligence on the part of Paul occasioned the immediate writing of this letter.

5. Design. In the composition of this Epistle, the writer had two objects before him: (1) To repel the insinuation that he was not an apostle, or that he did not stand on an equality with the other apostles. He must refute this charge in order that his influences among the churches may be preserved. (2) To expose the Judaistic and other errors which had crept into the churches and deceived the thoughtless Galatians. Hence he establishes the doctrine of justification by faith and thus utterly demolishes the position of hostile teachers. "The main theme of the apostle throughout is the apostacy of the Galatian churches in their denial of his apostolic authority, and their repudiation of the doctrine of grace."

6. Composition. Since there is nothing in the Epistle that affords a definite clue as to when or where it was written, there has been on these points the greatest diversity of opinion among scholars. The date is estimated as A. D. 53 (or 54 (Wordsworth), A. D. 54 or 55 (Ellicott), A. D. 57 or 58 (Lightfoot, Conybeare and Howson), and between A. D. 54 and 58 (Alford), Macedonia or Achaia (Lightfoot), Antioch (Macknight), and Thessalonica (Michaelis). Dods thus embodies the latest researches of scholarship on the subject: "The date of this important epistle is either placed in the winter or spring of 57, 58 A. D., in which case it must have been written from Macedonia or Achaia; or it is placed before the first epistle to the Corinthians, in which case it was dated Ephesus."

7. Features. (1) Contrary to his usual practice, Paul wrote this epistle with his own hand. (2) Written neither to an individual nor to a local church, this alone of all the Pauline epistles is addressed to a group of churches. (3) This letter is strictly controversial. (4) "The sustained severity of this epistle is an equally characteristic feature with its unity of purpose..... The apostle has no congratulations, no words of praise for the apostate church..... For this once only the pervading type of his epistles is abandoned in the omissions of the opening thanksgiving. The argument is interrupted every now and then by an outburst of indignant remonstrance" (Lightfoot.) (5) "Never was there a more compact and effective elucidation of an important question than is furnished in the epistle to the Galatians" (Dods.) (6) This letter is eminently adapted to the Galatians who were likely to be won by his fatherly pleading, as well as overawed by his apostolic rebukes and denunciations" (Alford.) (7) "This epistle resembles both the epistles to the Corinthians and that addressed to the Romans; like the first, it defends Paul's apostolic authority; and like the last, it treats of justification by faith alone" (Angus.) (8) "This epistle is unique among Paul's letters in its entire lack of any allusion, capable of easy interpretation, to the apostle's circumstances and surroundings at the time he wrote it" (Wardlaw.)

8. Contents. In this epistle, Paul meets in order the three elements of assault against himself and his doctrine—"the disparagement of his apostleship, the elevation of Judaism to the same rank as Christianity, and the insinuation that liberty meant license." Each of these replies occupies respectively two chapters. Stating the same division in another form, we have

1. Vindication of Paul's apostleship, chapters 1, 2.
2. Vindication of his doctrine, chaps. 3, 4.
3. Hortatory and practical, chaps. 5, 6.

Or, again:

1. Apologetic, two chapters.
2. Polemical, two chapters.
3. Practical, two chapters.

Unbelief in Foreign Missions.

There is need for Foreign Missions! Do you believe in them?

The Christian that does not believe in Foreign Missions does not believe in the Great Commission. Repeat it and see.

The Christian that does not believe in Foreign Missions does not believe in the Lord's prayer. Repeat it and see.

The Christian that does not believe in Foreign Missions does not believe in the doxology in long meter. Repeat it and see.

The Christian that does not believe in Foreign Missions in this generation believes that three hundred more millions of the heathen world ought to die before we try to tell them of Jesus Christ.

How long is this unbelief to go on? How many more millions must die before the church of God is ready. "If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth."

A Story of John Bright.

John Bright went into an agricultural district one day and had to walk from the station a long way into the village. A clergyman who was driving in a dog cart overtook him, and, learning his destination, offered to drive him there. "Have you seen the papers to-day?" the parson asked, when Mr. Bright had accepted a seat. "Yes; what is in them?" "Why, that rascal John Bright has been making another speech." "And what was it about?" asked Mr. Bright. The clergyman explained. "Well," said the stranger, "perhaps Mr. Bright was only expressing his honest convictions, perhaps, even, he may be right." "Oh, no," said the irate clergyman, "if I had him here I would feel like shooting him." Before they separated Mr. Bright had promised to go to his new acquaintance's church next morning. The theme of the sermon was Bright's speech, and at the conclusion Mr. Bright thanked him for his able sermon, as the rector was going home to dinner, a friend met him and said, "You have been preaching under distinguished patronage this morning." "No," said the parson. "Oh, yes, you have," replied the friend; "you had John Bright among the congregation. Didn't you notice him in front, in the middle pew?" "Why," said the rector, "I drove him to the village yesterday in my dog cart, and called him a rascal and reviled him in all the moods and tenses, and he never said a word. I must go and see him at once." [S. S. Times, in Newton Theological Institution.]

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

TWO THINGS THAT WE CAN AND OUGHT TO DO: First, contribute for Foreign Missions by January first (better begin now) and have it announced far and wide that North Carolina Baptists have reached the mark set for them; second, raise five hundred dollars for Home Missions. The Home Board is being largely used for God's glory and man's redemption. It has not asked much of us this year. And now we are appealed to especially raise $500 to meet a debt.

Let us do these two things.

THE RECORDER has perfected arrangements whereby every reader of this paper who sends us enough money to advance his or her subscription up to May, 1895, will secure a Baptist Almanac.

Every Baptist ought to have this Almanac. In addition to the usual features, there are statistics very valuable to Baptists; and the leading article, "The Baptists and the Quakers of North Carolina were the chief supporters of the Regulation and the heroes of the Battle of Alamance, May 16th, 1771," by Dr. Cobb, ought to be preserved by all who take pride in the history of their denomination.

Every one who sends us a new subscriber on our nineteen-weeks-fifty-cents offer will get an Almanac free.

Every new nineteen weeks subscriber who sends fifty cents and a one cent stamp for postage, will get an Almanac free.

Now let us see how many homes we can put the RECORDER and the Baptist Almanac into. Help us; it will help you.

The RECORDER nineteen weeks goes from Dec. 19th until MAY 1st, 1895! And a first class Almanac besides!!

This arrangement is limited. Send now.

THE Convention at Charlotte was all that could be asked: The Lord was with us.

There was spirituality. The zeal of the delegates, the uniform interest in the topics, the good collections (no petitioner was disappointed,) and the manifestations of brotherly love, were witnesses of this.

There was worship; uplifting devotional meetings, earnest prayers, impressive speeches and instructive sermons characterised the meeting.

There was action. The orders for the various hours were promptly announced by the watchful President, and in most instances the body was ready to proceed. Very little time was lost wrangling. There was plenty of good, hearty discussion, but no disputing. Miscellaneous business was despatched in good order every session.

There was unity; not unity of mind, nor unity of will, but thorough unity of spirit. This accounts for the brotherliness of the debates and the thorough success of the meeting.

We are not going to say it was "the greatest meeting in history." We do not know about that. There has not been a better; and we thank God for it. And we thank him for faith that what has been done is for his glory.

THE RECORDER is proud to present its readers this week, in addition to its usual features, (of which Bro. Lansdell's and Bro. Moore's articles ought to have especial mention), a full report of the Convention after the first day, and part of the splendid women's meetings, for which we are indebted to their accomplished President, Miss Heck, the reports on the various objects (which are uniformly encouraging), a handsome picture of Wake Forest College with a sketch by Prest. Taylor, and a picture of the Baptist Woman's College that is bound to come—the sooner, the better,—an able address delivered at the memorial meeting, a report of the Young People's Meeting, which we copied and have slightly condensed from the exceedingly copious and excellent account in the Charlotte Observer, and enough of other reading matter, news from the churches and inspiring reports by the pastors, to last quite a week.

We think we have solved the Union Meeting problem: Hereafter we will issue a supplement each quarter several weeks before the Union Meetings occur, and publish the programs with whatever else the brethren may choose to say. This will help the meetings and will not interfere with anything—except the Recorder's Income.

We do not know when we were more pleased to get an article than when the mails brought us "In Old Virginia" by Dr. Henry W. Battle, last week. We will publish it next week.

LET EVERY READER HEED.

Rev. R. J. Willingham was about to make a great speech at the Convention. He had prayed the Lord to be with him, prayed that the Holy Spirit might brood over the meeting. His prayer was answered.

The spirit of giving seized the people. A man interrupted the speaker and made a subscription. He was followed by others and others; and before one could comprehend it, the audience had pledged more than four thousand dollars to send a missionary to Japan and support him five years! But this money cannot be used to pay the debt or support missionaries already on the field.

Some say it was a returned missionary's eloquence, others say it was the man who started the subscription. Certain it is that the missionary and the man were honored agencies; but it was the Holy Spirit that moved the people and sowed among them the spirit of giving.

Bro. Willingham had purposed speaking of North Carolina, whence long years ago God called the sainted Yates, whence even now God is richly using many workers. He had in mind to tell us that we have a great opportunity. The first of the year the expenses of the workers were apportioned to the several States. While many of them have done well, none have come up to the amount apportioned.

But North Carolina is not far behind. It is easier for the Missionary Baptists of North Carolina to come up to the mark and set the other States an example that the Lord will bless, than it is for any other State.

Six thousand dollars was expected of 175,000 Baptists by January 1st, 1895, of which $4 047 66 has been received.

We have to raise in the next twelve days $1,952 34 Let us do it. Let us make the mark.

Big subscriptions are not asked for. A little from every one will make the whole. Just a little sacrifice on your part will raise the amount.

There are two Sundays before January 1st. May the Lord move every pastor in the State to give his flock an opportunity to help, by prayer and sacrifice, in this time of need.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. A. Cree preached at Greenville recently.

....The Baptist State Convention is bigger than any one newspaper.—Dr. J. W. Carter.

....Revs. R. D. Carroll and Rufus Ford made visits to Brethren Hunter and String field at Raleigh last week.

....Renew your subscription and get a Baptist Almanac free. Please act quickly. See first column, second page.

... Dr. Dickinson of the Herald, and his lieutenant, Brother Ferguson, attended the Convention in the interest of the Herald.

....We have received minutes of the Raleigh Association. Bro. J. C. Birdsong has been appointed clerk since Bro. Lougee died.

....Rev. J. A. Beam writes that the neighborhood of Bethel Hill is delighted with Pastor Fontaine. Bro. Beam's school is flourishing.

....Rev. A. L. Stough, whose resignation of the Kinston work goes into effect January 1st, has accepted care of Pineville church, near Charlotte.

....Attention is called to the program of Western Section Wake Union. The meeting was broken up by rain last time. Let every one come.

....Brother Locke Craig was from the Western Convention, and we heard it said, in a low tone, that he was the handsomest man in the Convention.

....The speeches of Drs. Skinner and Hufham and Brother J. E. White on Wake Forest College were remarkably able, and they ought to be printed.

....Paul's shipwrecks were necessary incidents of his life. That which looked to be against the Female University turned out for the furtherance of its best interests.

....Messrs. Gresham and Jamison, who keep the excellent eating house at Monroe, have the most cordial thanks for courtesies to delegates going to and returning from the Convention.

....Rev. W. G. Rollins, who went from this State to South Carolina, has returned, and is now at Charlotte. We hope the Lord will see fit to call Bro. Rollins to work in our State the rest of his life.

....Wake Forest College enrollment is still growing. Thos. H. Pritchard, Jr., son of the venerable alumnus, ex-president and distinguished Baptist, who is so loved by the good Charlotte people, entered last week.

....One of the things to be desired is that as many of our country pastors as possible shall attend the sessions of this Convention. To do this the Convention ought to meet on Tuesday instead of Thursday.—Rev. C. W. Scarborough.

....A certain brother, speaking in the Convention, told how he flouted when at last his wife promised to marry him. Bro. H. A. Brown, who always talks low in the Convention, remarked that some brethren had great reason to rejoice on occasions like that.

....Paul said: "The things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel." There has been a revival in orders for Dr. Taylor's pamphlet on higher education since the attacks on our Convention in Charlotte.

....Rev. D. R. Sears writes from Siler City Dec. 12th: "The good Lord has blessed the work on my field. Twenty seven persons professed faith in Christ. I baptized one who was eighty three years old. One other awaiting baptism is fifty-four years old."

... Dr. R. H. Graves of Canton, China, lectured at Durham and Wake Forest last week, treating of the cities, customs, religion, opposition and progress. He lectured at Raleigh Monday night. Dr. Graves' presence at the Convention was a benediction.

....We were glad to see Hon. W. C. Fields at the Convention. He is one of the best lawyers in the State, has represented his district a number of years in the Senate, is a leader in denominational work, and gave a good contribution to Wake Forest College.

....Bro. Jno. E Peele of Roxobel sends the RECORDER a club of subscribers every year. We do not know what we would do without him and several other brethren who help us; Revs. C. J. Woodson and O. T. Edwards also rendered us signal favors last week. The Lord bless them.

....It is reported that Prof. McIver has ready what he calls an answer to Dr. Taylor's pamphlet on higher education, which he will bring out about the time the Legislature assembles. Let it come. If it is above personalities and prejudice, it is the first of its kind on that side of the question.

....Editor A. J. S. Thomas of the Baptist Courier has written "a correction" of a note in the December 5th RECORDER, to the effect that the South Carolina brethren killed a motion to approve co-education, etc. We are are still of that opinion; but our readers are requested to reserve judgment until Bro. Thomas can be heard.

....Since it has become apparent that there is considerable misapprehension in regard to the condition of the health of the editor of the RECORDER, it seems wise to say that, though confined to his residence, he is up and taking meals regularly with his family. He is grateful for the kind messages sent him by the brethren at the Convention.

....It is regretted that the Latin quotation with which Bro. Taylor lead off his article on third page last week, was incorrectly printed: magistra should have been magistri. Also, "if any one thought Bacon," &c., should have been "if any one had," etc. The quotation is from Juvenal, and is translated, "Not bound by the dogmas of any master."

....Rev. L G Broughton has our thanks for an invitation to the opening of the new Calvary church, Roanoke, Va., with a picture of the handsome building and a program of the services. Rev. F. C. McConnell, D. D, preached the sermon. Brother Broughton writes: "It was a great day. There were one thousand chairs in the room and extra ones had to be brought in."

....Bro. Thomas, editor of the Courier, and Bro. Edens, representatitive of the Index, were with us in the interest of their papers. Brother Speight reached Charlotte early in the session with what he says is the best one dollar paper in the universe. We are under peculiar obligations to Brother Speight for kind words. We welcome all of these brethren from abroad, and hope their visits may be attended with pleasing results.

....The American Baptist Historical Society, Room No. 29, 1420 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, is very anxious to secure the minutes of the North Carolina Baptist Convention for the following years: 1836–'7, 48–'9 '50. '53, '54, '55, '56, '57, '61, '63, '64, '65, '68, '70. Any brother who can supply any of these minutes, please correspond with Henry E. Lincoln, Librarian, Room 29, 1420 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

....Send us a subscriber (who will receive the RECORDER from Dec. 12th until May 1st for fifty cents) and get a Baptist Almanac free. See first column, second page. . . . Send a one cent stamp with the subscription and you and the subscriber each will receive a Baptist Almanac (full of information, Baptist statistics, list of new judges, other officers, courts, etc., the best list of Baptist preachers ever perfected, Baptist history, etc.,) free. Act now. The number is limited.

....The Charlotte Observer asks the size of the vast majority of the people of North Carolina who oppose State aid to higher education. We cannot speak precisely; but appearances lead us to think that all the people, except those whose livings are obtained through State-aid, an editor or two who is subject to night-mares, and perhaps a saloonist, compose the "vast majority"—which was "vast" even when the Observer correspondents were writing that the anti State-aid movement amounted to nothing in all but one or two counties.

....The Young People's Meeting at Charlotte last week was all that could have been desired. The program was excellently carried out, so excellently that there was no room for objection to it. The opposition to State organization did not hinder the good work of devotional and instructive study. And we confidently think that the matter will be settled for good and all by successive repetitions of this meeting. It had all the features of State organization except those calculated to alienate the young people. The Convention made no mistake in recommending a similar meeting next year, and we propose to do all we can to make it even more successful than was the Charlotte meeting, adhering to the Convention's manifest disapproval of State organization this year. An article on the subject will appear next week.

SIXTY-FOURTH BAPTIST STATE CONVENTION.

FRIDAY MORNING.

After appropriate religious exercises, Dr. T. P. Bell, representing our Southern Sunday-school Board at Nashville, Tenn., addressed the Convention. This Board is doing a great and commendable work, not only in its literature, but, as has already been stated, the profits on the sale thereof have amounted to $11,679; and this has been devoted to the work. This is one Board that does not raise collections. It merely asks you to buy its publications and no more. The organization of this Board has had a great, uplifting influence upon the Sunday-school work in the South. Dr. Bell never spoke more truly than when he said that we have to fight not only against anti-denominational influences, but an undenominational and interdenominational spirit is now abroad. Proper literature will prevent the latter's progress. The Board is striving to inculcate a missionary spirit into the young minds of the land.

FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR WAKE FOREST.

Wake Forest College was the order for 11 a. m. President Taylor read the report. The Convention was quick to show deep interest in the College, and every word of the report met sympathetic ears. The following is the text:

The first of the objects of the Baptist State Convention, as enumerated in the constitution, is "to encourage and support Wake Forest College." Not only is this college the oldest child of the Convention, but it is more and more generally recognized, as the years go by, as one of the most potent agents for the prosecution of the Convention's work in all its departments, and it is eminently fitting that the child should send its greeting and reports, year by year, to the Convention, its venerable mother.

The total number of students enrolled during the session of 1893–'4 was 197. The number enrolled so far for the present session is 207. This increase indicates the loyalty to the college of the great majority of the Baptist of the State, and encourages the hope that, at no distant day, the patronage of 1890–'1 and 1891–'2 may be regained by the college.

The student body of '94–'5 is remarkable for its promptness, diligence, and excellent deportment. Many of the young men who are now pursuing their studies at the college have already given evidence of high ability and thorough attainments. Not a few of those are likely be heard from hereafter in various spheres of usefulness.

The faithful labors of the college pastor, Rev. W. R. Gwaltney, have had their fruit in the elevated type of spiritual life, which has pervaded the institution. He was aided last spring by Rev. W. C. Tyree, and this fall by Rev T. J. Taylor, in special services.

During the last summer great improvements were made in the sanitary arrangements of the college. Partial provision for the expense incurred was made by subscriptions of members of the board of trustees. The rest has yet to be raised.

At the close of two of the special efforts for the increase of endowment some have come to believe that all the needs of the institution have been provided for. The truth is, only a beginning has been made toward securing an adequate endowment. Such a college as the Baptists of North Carolina need in the future, and ought to have, cannot be sustained without more ample provision than has yet been made. At the close of the last session, after the closest economy in all matters of administration, the trustees were confronted with a deficit for the fiscal year of about $1 700. All salaries of instructors were cut down and the purchase of books and apparatus have been, for the time being, prohibited. In order to give relief, at least to some extent, it is proposed to try to raise, as soon as possible, the endowment of one chair, to be known as the Royall chair. The American Baptist Educational Society has promised $5,000 on condition of the raising of $20 000 additional.

In view of the great work that lies before the college and the difficult conditions under which it is now being done, would it not be well to consider the propriety of bringing the needs of the college for current expenses before the churches as one of the regular objects of their beneficence? Our Methodist and Presbyterian brethren rely largely on this plan and claim that it helps to bring their college closer to the hearts of their people.

For the last ten years the president of the college has been deeply impressed with the importance of the organizing into more of unity the Baptist educational system of the State, and many thoughtful brethren do not hesitate to express their approval of the plan. This, if undertaken at all, should be with the approbation and under the auspices of the Convention. It is suggested that a committee be appointed to consider the wisdom and possibility of some such organization, and if they deem it advisable, to report at the next meeting of the Convention.

C. E. TAYLOR,
J. D. HUFHAM,
Committee.

Rev. J. E. White followed with a telling speech for the College. He spoke as a representative of the younger element.

Dr. Skinner, who distinguished himself for rising to all sorts of situations and maintaining the excellent good humor of the Convention, made timely remarks.

Then followed Dr. Hufham, who—if the reader will pardon the worn appellation of the expression—make "the speech of his life." He has grown eloquent many times, but he never had an audience so thoroughly and entirely interested as on that Friday morning. (If we did not know we would be met with "Writing is a lost art with me," we would call on Bro. Hufham for this speech in full). He voiced an opinion which is obtaining widely now, that Wake Forest must grow, and its growth must be achieved by private munificence. He saw Wake Forest the head and center of influence of a series of Baptist institutions spreading all over the State.

Dr. J. L Carroll and Rev. A. McA. Pittman made effective remarks.

Dr. Taylor outlined a plan to raise twenty thousand dollars, to which the American Baptist Education Society would add five thousand dollars. Subscribers to the plan are to make the first payment June 1st, 1895, the second and third, one and two years later respectively.

Dr. Durham took the floor, and concluded, vigorous remarks by expressing large faith in the Baptists and the College under God, and stirred the brethren vigorously and successfully for subscriptions. The sum of $5,020 were raised on the spot. The hearts of the brethren were evidently in their gifts. From now on the work will be pushed personally by Dr. Taylor all over the State with the valuable assistance of that fine manager, Rev. C. W. Blanchard.

There was such a spirit of giving in the Convention as has rarely been. Every time the brethren got warmed up on a subject, some one raised a collection, and the rule has been that more pledges were gotten than were expected. The brethren talk of hard times, but one would think money was troublesome, if he had looked in upon the Convention Thursday night or Friday morning. The Foreign Mission pledges amounted to more than four thousand dollars. Five thousand dollars was easily raised for Wake Forest.

Immediately following the Wake Forest collection, Bro. Stringfield made an earnest speech that struck home to his hearers' pocket books—which speaks well enough for their hearts. More than $3,085 was pledged for this object, in which we are happy to note interest is growing.

Rev. C. E Gower and E. K. Proctor made remarks, which they introduced with handsome subscriptions.

If endowed institutions are necessary for the education of males, endowment is even so necessary for the proper education of females. It is to be regretted that this cause did not have a better hour than it did. Bro. Stringfield is indomitable and the pledges of the brethren inspired to greater efforts.

BAPTIST FEMALE UNIVERSITY.

At the last session of our Convention the Trustees reported that there was due $3 600 on the lot purchased for the location of a school for the Baptist young women of the State. Since that time this amount has been paid, and a deed in fee simple to the Trustees, and their successors in office, has been executed. We now have what is believed by many to be the best location in the city of Raleigh for the school we hope to establish.

Since the beginning of this work the Trustees have collected and spent $18,280 (eighteen thousand three hundred and eighty dollars.) They now hold in good subscriptions $5 615 (five thousand six hundred and fifteen dollars.

The Trustees have unanimously agreed to ask the next General assembly to change the name of the proposed institution, and a committee has been appointed to carry this determination into effect.

The one thing now before us is to secure as rapidly as it can be done the means necessary for the erection of the first building.

The estimated cost of this building, with all modern improvements and conveniences, is $32,500. With the hearty co operation of our people we feel that this work can, must and will be done.

O. L. STRINGFIELD, For the Trustees.

The afternoon session was devoted to our Orphanage—and the expected failed to turn up—first, the chapter of orphans was not there, because Bro. Mills did not receive Bro. Pritchard's letter of request; second and consequently, there was no collection, although many of the brethren (prominently among them that ardent Baptist, N. L. Shaw,) insisted on having a collection taken.

Bro. Mills made a practical talk, and answered many inquiries.

A collection for the Orphanage was taken Sunday night, on motion of Elder J. E. Jones, amounting to eighty dollars.

Dr. Mundy was in the chair this session and performed his functions delicately. He is chairman of the committee on the Orphanage, and made a good speech. The following is the

ORPHANAGE REPORT:

Your committee rejoices to say that it has found evidences of prosperity and success in the great work of the Orphanage. There are 125 children under sheltering and fostering care, and they are happy in their great privileges.

During the past year there has pervaded the institution a strong spiritual influence, which directed the minds and hearts of the children to the blessed Gospel of the Son of God. Twenty happy converts united with the church and thus committed their young lives to the Master's service.

The health of the inmates has been unuually good. The supply of clothing on hand is sufficient, to meet most, if not all, demand for the winter months. This is a matter for which the Baptists of this State should be thankful. There is at present a pressing demand for the purchase of food and other things necessary to health and comfort.

In behalf of the children your committee would urge the delegates of the Convention to bring this need to the attention of the churches, and secure liberal contributions to supply it at an early day.

HOME MISSIONS AND THE SEMINARY.

Rev. J. Q Adams read the report and made a speech on the subject of Home Missions after Rev. N. S. Jones had conducted religious exercises. Then Secretary Tichenor addressed the meeting. The debt of the Board has increased from $6,500 in May to $15,000. He dwelt upon the work in New Orleans, which city has been not unjustly called "a Baptist graveyard." Now, however, there are two handsome churches and good congregations. Five thousand dollars is needed for completing payment for one of the edifices. North Carolina is asked for and promises five hundred dollars by January 1st, [with sixty days time], and we earnestly pray that every reader will be moved to contribute something to this object immediately. The report is as follows:

The work of our Home Mission Board was never more important than now.

The fact that this country of ours must furnish the greater part of the men and means to be employed in the world's conversion necessitates the evangelization of our country.

We are gratified that during the past year the Board has increased its missionaries from 368 to 381.

The co-operation of the Board with our State Board in sustaining missionary pastors in the churches at Washington, Tarboro, Concord, Newton, and Olivet Baptist church in Charlotte, meets our warmest approval.

We sympathize with the desires of the Board to increase its work among the colored people, and we hope that the arrangement entered into between the Board and the Home Mission Society of New York may result in multiplied spiritual blessings to this race.

The advance made in our work in New Orleans is cause for thanksgiving. In this great city, which has been called the graveyard of Baptists, we have now three pastors of efficient and growing churches. The purchase by the Board of a house of worship for the First church which had lost its meeting place by fire, is to be commended.

Our North Carolina churches should cheerfully bear their part in paying for it.

Respectfully submitted,
J. Q. ADAMS,
S. P. SMITH,
W. B. OLIVER,
T. T. SPEIGHT,
I. W. DURHAM,
Committee.

One is surprised at the number of Seminary (Louisville) men here. Dr. Kerfoot, who for the first time is representing the claims of this institution in North Carolina, got his men together at an informal dinner to day, and there were nearly forty of the choicest spirits in the Convention. The occasion will soon appear to have been the beginning of a great forward movement for the Seminary and the State. It was a pleasure to be admitted to this reception; and we hope to recur to its purpose at more length later.

Dr. Kerfoot actually impressed the Convention so favorably that, although he asked for only six hundred dollars (three hundred more than was paid last year), he got pledges for quite seven hundred dollars; and he could not but confess that the Convention was more patient than any cow he ever saw under hard and persistent milking. With all reverence for "Uncle Billie" Whitsitt, whose knowledge of Baptist history is equaled only by his grateful good nature and ardent love for the poor students, we must say that Dr. Kerfoot's effort was the best in behalf of the Seminary that has ever been made before our Convention. We believe Dr. Kerfoot was as favorably impressed with the brethren as they were with him. By the way, he gave such glowing reports of A. T. Robertson and wife that the Seminary boys sent them a vote of congratulation. It is a matter of pride to all North Carolinians that Prof. Robertson has taken a stand in the front ranks of the world's biblical scholars,—and he is just beginning. God bless him.

Dr. Kerfoot found many young men who were anxious to attend the Seminary. We heard one—the handsomest man in the Convention, married, alas!—the pastor of a church second to none in the State, say that he had a great mind to go himself next year. Another, who graduated at Wake Forest in 1893 with the confidence of all his fellows and the faculty, was debating the odds between the Seminary and matrimony, and, poor fellow, he was all in a tangle, his head and heart striving one against the other. Dr. Kerfoot was not unwise when he exclaimed, "Young man, if you are going to the Seminary and wish to marry, don't!" Still there are about forty married men there, and they are doing very well. So, if you are already married, and feel that it will strengthen you to spend a year or more there, why go.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

Sunday fifty able representative Baptists preached the gospel to Charlotte and vicinity. That was a great diffusion of seed, and Charlotte is not "stony ground," nor are there any "tares" amongst her residents, if we are to judge by those we met. The city is largely Presbyterian, and that means pleasant. They had equipped themselves with boots and overalls for an old-time, deep-water day, and they got it sure enough—Monday.

This writer heard Dr. Kerfoot at the Second Presbyterian church in the morning; and we found it pleasant to attend the other services in that surpassingly beautiful edifice. There is not a church in the State as beautiful, or better arranged, or more tastefully appointed.

In the afternoon a touching service in memory of Sister Yates and Brother and Sister Newton was held under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary Union. Dr. Willingham presided.

Dr. Skinner delivered an address on the life and character of the subject, which will be published in the RECORDER.

Dr. T. P. Bell spoke feelingly of Brother and Sister Newton. Although Bro. Newton was not a great or brilliant man, he was a "Holy Ghost" man, which made him mighty for the Lord.

Rev. R Van Deventer delivered an address, "Changes in China since 1846," which is published in this paper.

The references by Dr. Willingham to the daughter still on the field, who lately wrote "I will remain and carry on father's work," were tender indeed. The choir of the church provided music for this occasion as well as the other two services, and they deserve praise for their kindness. Dr. Willingham's sermon was characteristic of that zealous man. His own earnestness seems almost to overcome him at times, and as he struggles with the Lord in prayer for the heathen, prayer for the workers and the kingdom, one cannot but sympathize with him.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

Sunday afternoon the annual meeting of the Historical Society was held at the First Baptist church. The following report appeared in the Charlotte Observer:

The annual meeting of the North Carolina Baptist Historical Society was held in the First Baptist church Sunday afternoon. Dr. Thomas Hume was re-elected President; Vice Presidents, W. B. Oliver, C. E. Taylor, J. W. Carter; Secretary, J. C. Caddell; Treasurer, W. L. Poteat.

The following members were enrolled, paying the annual fee, one dollar: James W. Denmark, C. W. Blanchard, W. B. Oliver, J. W. Carter, F. P. Hobgood, John Mitchell, J. C. Caddell, S. W. Eaton, W. C. Tyree, G. J. Dowell.

The following life members were present: Thomas Hume, J. L. Carroll, N. B. Cobb, J. D. Hufham.

On motion, the constitution of the Society was amended so as to require the election of a Corresponding Secretary. Dr N. B. Cobb was elected to this office and instructed to use his best efforts to obtain such historical facts as might be of value to the Society.

A committee, consisting of Drs. J. L. Carroll, J. D. Hufham and N. B. Cobb, was appointed to have some papers and documents, now in possession of the Society, printed for the permanent security of the same.

A paper by Dr. Chas. E. Taylor, containing a most admirable sketch of the life and labors of J. S. Purefoy, was read by Dr Taylor.

The following were appointed to read papers at our next annual meeting: W. L. Poteat, subject not assigned; J. D. Hufham, "The Anti-Missionary Baptists of North Carolina;" J. B. Brewer, "The Life and Labors of Dr. S. Waitt;" Collier Cobb, in reference to "The Connection of the Battle of Alamance with Baptist History in North Carolina;" Thos. Hume, "Baptists in the Days of John Milton;" F. P. Hobgood on "The Life of William Royal."

Drs. F. H. Kerfoot and I. T. Tichenor were elected honorary members and welcomed to the privileges of the Society by the President. There appearing no further business, the Society adjourned to meet with the Convention at its next annual session.

MONDAY MORNING.

Rev. C. M. Murchison conducted worship. Committee on Ministerial Relief Board nominated a new Board. [A list of members of this Board will appear in our next issue.]

An effort was made to have the Convention meet hereafter on Tuesdays instead of on Thursdays, so that the country pastors might not lose a Sunday, which with many country churches is one-twelfth of a year's work, and that business men might not lose parts of two weeks. Revs. C. W. Scarboro and T. J. Taylor argued against, and Revs. M. P. Matheny, Dr. Skinner and Dr. T. T. Speight spoke for the present arrangement. Bro. N. L. Shaw, as a business man, favored change. The matter is settled, however, when President Marsh announces that the question is a constitutional one, and that the two-thirds of the Convention, whose presence is necessary to change the consitution, is not present.

The committee announce that Rev. A. M. Simms of the Raleigh Tabernacle has been chosen to deliver the annual sermon at the next meeting, which will be held at Greensboro. Rev. C. A. Jenkens is alternate for Bro. Simms.

REPORT ON PERIODICALS.

This subject came up duly for consideration, and the report is as follows:

It is needless to emphasize the value and importance of religious literature in the homes of our people, and we may congratulate ourselves because our denomination furnishes religious papers so worthy the patronage of our people. The BIBLICAL RECORDER, the organ of the North Carolina Baptists, which has served us so fearlessly for so many years, and which has been such a factor in the growth and development of our cause in the State, has, we think, never been more ably edited or a better paper than now. We commend it most heartily to the support and patronage of our people.

We also commend the Foreign Mission Journal and Home Field, the organs of the two Boards; and we would make mention of the Young People's Leader, a most valuable paper for the young, and the Wake Forest Student, which contains much miscellaneous literature of value and keeps us posted in regard to the College and students.

W. C. TYREE,
W. L. POTEAT,
L. JOHNSON,
J. D. BOUSHALL,
M. H. JUSTICE,
Committee.

After considerable discussion, warm and interesting, but brotherly, an amendment offered by Rev. J. Q Adams, that the North Carolina Baptist be mentioned in the report, is passed by a vote of forty to sixteen. At the suggestion of a brother, Charity and Children was also included.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK.

Many anticipated an interesting debate upon the report on Young People's Work. The report was presented by Bro. Van Deventer. It seemed to need some small changes, and was recommitted. The following is the text as adopted:

The outlook is hopeful. More and more our pastors and churches are realizing the importance and necessity of work among the young. The recognition by the Convention in Dallas of the need and value of such work, gave an impetus that has been widely felt. Since our last Convention in Elizabeth City, many young people's meetings or societies have found a welcome place in our churches, because there was a work they could do; until, so far as we can ascertain, there are about forty organizations under the control of the churches.

This movement is in its tentative period in our State. It has met with opposition, and is regarded by many with some suspicion. In spite of the opposition, which has been a blessing in creating conservatism, the work has grown and taken shape, until it is clear that definite work for young people, in some places organized, and in others not, has come to stay.

It is the desire of the Committee that this movement should be kept in line with our denominational activities, and by loyalty to the truth and our work prove the right to exist.

The committee approve the request of the Provisional Convention of Baptist Young People, and recommend that this Convention continue the committee appointed a year ago on Young People's Societies, and that they be instructed to provide a program for a Young People's Meeting of the Convention in Greensboro, and that all questions of State organization of our young people be deferred until the next meeting of this Convention.

Respectfully submitted,

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS, COLPORTAGE AND SUPPLY STORE.

The committee on Sunday schools, Colportage and Supply Store made its report as follows, through Rev. J. O. Alderman:

Your committee begs leave to say that they deem the Sunday-school work a most important adjunct to the church work.

We therefore urge that every means be used to develop and push this branch of Christian endeavor.

In pursuance of this work, the Sunday-school Supply Store has been doing a needed work. We rejoice to report that this Store is in better condition than it was last year. And we recommend that our Schools purchase their supplies through this Store.

We recognize the importance of this Colportage work. We recommend that, so far as possible, this work be developed.

J. O. ALDERMAN,
A. L. STOUGH,
J. C. TURNER,
J. C. WOODWARD,
ELDRIDGE LEE,
Committee.

Brethren Alderman, Hunter, Scarborough, Blackwell, Carter, Hufham, Broughton and Poteat spoke to the report, the last two brethren making vigorous argument for a Sunday-school missionary, and a resolution, offered by Dr. Hufham, was adopted as follows: "Resolved, That the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools be instructed to appoint a Sunday-school missionary or missionaries in the State of North Carolina."

UNIFICATION OF NEWSPAPERS.

Rev. J. B. Boone here offered the following, which was adopted:

Resolved, That this Convention appoint a committee of seven brethren, viz: R. H. Marsh, J. D. Hufham, H. A. Brown, J. L. Carroll, C. Durham, and J. B. Boone, to consider the interest of our denominational organ, with special reference to the consideration of the propriety and feasibility of the consolidation and unification of the Baptist newspapers in the bounds of our Convention, and that the above committee be authorized to advise the best plans possible in this matter.

REPORT ON STATE MISSIONS.

We have great cause for rejoicing in the report of the Board of the State Mission work. Let us thank God and take courage that the Board has been able to cancel the debt reported a year ago, and to carry on the work on the basis ordered by the last session of the Convention, and to report the missionaries all paid and no indebtedness. Your Convention recommend that the Convention take advanced steps in the State Mission work, and that the basis of operation for the ensuing year be not less than $15,000.

We also recommend that the Board hold the vantage ground already gained by getting out of debt.

REPORT OF THE CONVENTION TRUSTEES.

Dr. C. Durham presented the following report of the Trustees of the Convention, and the two recommendations were concurred in:

The Trustees hold a deed, executed March 25th, 1887, to one acre of land in the town of Bayboro, Pamlico county, N. C., upon which stands the Baptist church of said town. As this church now has about one hundred members, we recommend that the Trustees of the Convention be authorized to execute a deed to the Trustees of the Bayboro Baptist church.

The Trustees also hold the bond of the Treasurer of the Convention for $10,000.

We recommend that the Trustees be authorized and instructed to secure, if it can be done without imposing a debt on the Convention, suitable property in the City of Raleigh for the denomination, which will relieve the Board of paying rent for all time to come.

REPORT ON FOREIGN MISSIONS.

Just seventy years ago last May was organized the first Baptist Foreign Mission Society in America, and employed their first missionaries, Adoniram Judson and wife, to carry the gospel to the heathen of India. That Society, the American Baptist Missionary Union, now has 141 missionaries, 590 churches and 31,572 church members in Burmah; 32 missionaries, 28 churches, 2,071 church members in Assam; 67 missionaries, 77 churches, 48,815 members in the Telugu country; 68 missionaries, 19 churches, 1,758 members in China; 50 missionaries, 60 stations, 15 churches, 1,337 members in Japan; 50 missionaries, 11 churches, 902 members in Africa, and is also sustaining missions in France, Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Finland, Norway, Russia and Spain. They reported last year over 1,000 preachers, 801 churches, 5,795 baptisms and 82,274 church-members in nominally Christian countries of Europe.

The Southern Baptist Convention was organized in 1844, and now has in China 13 churches; in Africa, 5; in Italy, 18; in Brazil, 11; in Mexico, 37; and in Japan, 1, with a total membership of 3,338. Of these, 629 were baptized last year. For fuller details, we refer you to the report of the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools of this Convention.

These figures are sufficient proof that missions among the heathen have been blessed of God in the conversion of souls, and should stimulate the Baptists of North Carolina to enlarge their contributions to this work.

We need to enlarge our work at home by enlarging not only the amounts contributed by our churches, but the number of churches contributing. We have a great many members in all our churches, and many churches in all our associations, that have no systematic plan of giving to missions, either in the home or the foreign field. Many churches contribute nothing because they are not properly informed about the condition and needs of the field. We recommend that every pastor and church endeavor to get the churches to give regularly for this great work; that in view of the need of more information to awaken greater interest, every church ought to have a number of subscribers for the Foreign Mission Journal; that we endeavor to raise this year $9,000, the amount apportioned to and asked from our State for the work.

H. C. DOCKERY, Chairman.

FINALLY.

Many regretted that so important and so needy an object as the Ministerial Relief Board should have been placed at the last; but something had to be last, and on the whole the order of business committee did good work. There was but little friction. The report is encouraging; general contributions have been good, and there are evidences of growing interest. The number of good speeches provoked by this report was very gratifying. Much was said that was humorous, much pathetic and much effective.

There are palpable evidences of approaching adjournment. Five days on the go—up nights talking or praying, on one's feet all day, is enough to wear men out;—and the murky weather without intensifies the general languor. The weather has been fine up to date, and we would not object if a good drenching down-pour would come now, but this Presbyterian drizzle and fog—well, the brethren aren't used to it.

It is ordered that 1,500 copies of the minutes be printed. The Secretaries are paid fifty dollars for their efficient services. The minutes are out this week.

Charlotte was heartily and deservedly thanked. The people all have been as hospitable as people can be. The doors of their hearts as well as their houses were opened to every guest. If a majority of the delegates had been treated so kindly and impressed so favorably as this grateful writer, the Convention might yet be in session.

The Charlotte press, especially the Observer, was thanked for reporting the Convention. It is the general opinion that the Observer's account of the meeting is all that can be asked in clearness, accuracy and completeness; and no wonder, since both of the Observer's "bright young men" bent their energies upon the report, very fittingly, one of the sisters' meeting and the Young People's, the other of the brethren's. This writer would be untrue to his feelings, if he did not thank the entire Observer staff for manifold courtesies.

Drs. Pritchard and Pruett and the churches are to be congratulated upon the admirable arrangements which they perfected. There were more homes than guests; there was room at the church in the morning, and the Y. M. C. A. Hall (which is an ornament and an advertisement of the city) was spacious enough for the large attendance at night.

The Convention formally closed with remarks by Drs. Skinner and Pritchard.

At night, Dr. Blackwell preached a strong sermon before a good audience.

CONVENTION NOTES.

REVS. T. J. TAYLOR, C. Durham and J. D. Hufham composed the committee that interviewed editor J. P. Caldwell, of the Charlotte Observer, in regard to the Observer's offensive editorial. The matter was not satisfactorily settled. The Observer adhered to its original position; and the committee was permitted to speak their mind through its columns. The Convention survived the editorials, and the "Danger Ahead" remains in the Observer's oracular opinion. The Observer had its opinion not only on the State aid question, but also of the young men who would affiliate with the Baptists, if the latter persist in their narrow policy. We are obliged for the Observer's discovery and its suggestions thereupon; but we hope it will not require of us further manifestations of gratitude until the "Danger Ahead" shows evidence of sufficient animation to stand alone. And if there are any young men too liberal to be Baptists, may the Lord help them!

"But there's no accountin' for tastes."

REV. C. S. BLACKWELL, who, though not long a resident of our State, has been widely recognized as worthy of a place at the front, called the Convention's attention to the needs of the most eastern Baptist church in the State, on which a debt must be paid. It was built under the direction of Elder Josiah Elliott, and that means the Lord will bless it. Bro. Elliott has letters in this paper. Rev. C. C. Haymore spoke in behalf of another church, for the erection of which that indefatigable church worker, Rev. S. F. Conrad, has gone in debt. He said no man had made so much sacrifice as Bro. Carroll for the upbuilding of the cause in North Carolina.

Fourth Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Societies.

The fourth annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Societies was more largely attended than any previous meeting except, perhaps, the meeting during the Centennial Year in Raleigh. No one would have been in the meeting during the three sessions without being struck with the constant and unbroken attention, the earnestness and eagerness of hearers and the growing determination of the representatives of the societies to do more and better work during the coming year.

It goes without saying that the larger part of the audience were Charlotte ladies, and to the presence of so many from not only the Baptist churches but from the other denominations, much of the inspiration which comes from so large a number of sympathetic listeners is due. The three sessions were arranged to conflict as little as possible with the sessions of the Convention, that body meeting in the main audience room of the First church, while the ladies' meeting was held in the Sunday-school room of the same building. It is usual to speak, when concerning such a meeting, of the personnel of the body and to make remarks of a most flattering character. Though such remarks might well be made with regard to the ladies in attendance on the meeting, the most striking feature was, that with few exceptions the delegates were young married ladies—those in the very prime and bloom of womanhood who in the full responsibilities of life had still time and conviction for this important mission work.

The first session of the meeting was opened with devotional exercises led by Mrs. D. M. Austin of Charlotte, the thought being fruitful fearing from John 15:5. Mrs. Liddell of Charlotte led in prayer.

Miss Eva Liddell of Charlotte, in her address of welcome, reviewed the ever widening sphere of usefulness opening to woman. In closing, she said: "We welcome you to our homes, believing the presence there of Christian women must prove a blessing to all who are so fortunate as to claim you for their guests. We welcome you to our churches, and trust that the meeting here this morning may inspire us all with fervent zeal and active endeavor to obey our Lord's last great command, 'Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature.'"

How North Carolina Stands.

Dear Brethren of North Carolina.—According to an apportionment of the amount needed to pay off all obligations and support our missionaries in the field this year, we should look to your State from May 1st to Dec. 1st, 1894 for $5,350. In that time we have received $3,280 60; W. N. C., $668 20.

"Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." 1 Cor. 16: 2.

The work is the Lord's, and we are his.

Every State is behind the apportionment. Which one will lead out the ranks? Why not North Carolina?

IS IT POSSIBLE?

Can we close the year out of debt for the Foreign Mission work if we will? We certainly can. Home demands have been heavy upon us, but we can make still another effort. The Foreign Mission work is ours and needs our help now. We can and should help before the year closes. Every one should help. Large gifts are needed from those to whom the Lord has entrusted much. And we believe that there are some large hearted brethren among them who are willing to help. They ought to lead off. Some one may feel it a privilege to give $5,000 in this great emergency, and by such a gift stir and inspire the hearts of God's people. What an opportunity is presented for doing a great work! What better investment on earth than using your money in the work of winning souls to God? Cannot ten be found among us who will give $500 each to the work? Any one giving $500 pays enough for the salary of a missionary in China for one year. If you cannot give that much, give $350. I make table below. Out of all of our numbers this is a small proportion to give. Notice this:

Let	10	give	$500	each	$ 5,000
"	25	"	200	"	5,000
"	50	"	100	"	5,000
"	100	"	50	"	5,000
"	500	"	20	"	10,000
"	1,000	"	10	"	10,000
"	1,000	"	5	"	5,000
"	2,000	"	1	"	2,000

It would take just about this much to pay all obligations and start the year out of debt. We have this to pay, why not now? Why wait and worry about it? We could make thousands happy at home and every missionary on the field rejoice. God has greatly blessed our work this year. Many have professed Christ among the heathen. Let us render a thank-offering to God at once. If you cannot give, will you pray that God will put it into the hearts of those who have to help this great work?

If a great work is to be done, the pastors must earnestly co operate. I ask that every pastor read this to his church. There are liberal-hearted brethren and sisters who will help gladly if they hear of the need. Tell them they can send by check or post-office order, or you will forward for them.

Let everybody help some. I hope to hear from many of you very soon. Poverty may abound, but let us be rich in good works, and so let our liberality much more abound to the praise of God.

Fraternally,
R. J. WILLINGHAM, Cor. Sec.

To Beautify the Complexion

—do not take the cosmetics, paint and powders which injure the skin, but take the easiest way to gain a beautiful color and a wholesome skin. Health is the greatest beautifier. The means to beauty, comfort, and health for women is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Dull eyes, sallow or wrinkled face, and those "feelings of weakness," have their rise in the derangements peculiar to women. "Favorite Prescription" will build up, strengthen, and invigorate, every "run-down" or delicate woman by regulating and assisting all the natural functions.

To cure constipation, billiousness, indigestion, sick headache, take Dr. Pierce's Pellets. One a dose.

A Mission Point Developed into a Church.

"NEW HOPE."

This point is about four miles south of Kinston in Lenoir county, and was formerly known as Parott's School-house. It is situated in a community of well to do farmers, who, until about twenty months ago, had not been accustomed to having preaching in their midst. A large percentage of the people were not members of any church, and no special inducement was offered to any one to hold regular services for them.

The pastors of the Kinston church would occasionally go out there and preach for the people. But nothing permanent was done until about twenty months ago, when Rev. A. L. Stough of Kinston took charge, and established regular service in the afternoon of the third Sunday in each month.

A number of the young people used to be disposed to be rude, when any one would undertake to preach or hold religious services; but from the very time Bro. Stough began preaching for them, they seemed to be differently inclined. The interest began to grow, and the congregations to increase.

In about six months after Bro. Stough began preaching there, he held a week's meeting, and the prospects were so bright and the interest so great that he did not think it wise to close; so he called the writer to his assistance, and the meeting continued until Friday of the second week. As a result of the meeting, there were thirty or more professions of religion and thirteen additions to the Kinston church, for this work was carried on under the auspices of that church.

The meeting was held in July, 1893. The brethren at once decided that they must have a house to worship in; so a building committee was appointed, and the people went to work. Bro. Stough kept on preaching once a month in the afternoon of the third Sunday. As he preached, the people built the house. In a year they had a good, commodious wooden building with a vestibule entrance and pulpit recess. This house is partially painted, well heated by a good stove which burns either wood or coal, and will seat an average country congregation. It was dedicated in August, 1894, and another protracted meeting was held, in which Rev. J. W. Rose of Cove, N. C., assisted Bro. Stough. Sixteen were received into the church at this meeting, and some have joined since. In all, I think thirty-one have been received into the church at that point. A few of the members of the Kinston church lived in that section, so the number of Baptists in that community was about forty, and it was thought best and wisest to organize them into an independent church. They were all members of the Kinston church, and were at their own request dismissed from that church to go into the new organization.

On Nov. 21st, 1894, and at the request of Bro. Stough, Revs. J. W. Rose and R. D. Carroll met with Bro. Stough at "New Hope," for the purpose of organizing the church. Bro. Rose preached a sermon appropriate to the occasion from 1 Tim. 3: 14, 15. After the sermon, the presbytery organized by electing Rev. J. W. Rose, Moderator, and R. D Carroll, Secretary. Bro. Rose lead in prayer for divine guidance. Bro. Stough then called the names of forty-one persons, who had been dismissed from the Kinston church, as before stated. The Church Covenant and Articles of Faith, as found in Hiscock's New Directory for Baptist churches, were read and unanimously adopted. Bro. Stough lead the constituting prayer, and R. D. Carroll delivered the charge. New Hope was then declared to be an independent Missionary Baptist church.

An intermission was given and dinner was served in the yard.

After dinner, the church elected brethren Jesse Jackson, William A. Croom, and Floyd Loftin as deacons. After a sermon by R. D. Carroll on "The Office and Work of the Deacons," they were duly set apart to their work by prayer and laying on of the hands of the presbytery, Bro. Stough leading the ordaining prayer.

Bro. W. E. Sutton was elected church clerk.

This church starts off with bright prospects before it. There is harmony and peace among the brethren, and Bro. Stough is justly proud of these, his spiritual children. They all love him and are strongly attached to him.

This work has been steady and progressive, and is such a work as ought to be done in many other destitute sections. Bro. Stough and these people of the New Hope church deserve credit, for they have done well. May they continue as they have begun.

Colportage.

I have been engaged in colportage this fall, and visited four Associations with my books. I did reasonably well at two of them. The great cry of the people is "no money." They don't mean that they have no money, but no money for books. There seems to be no lack of good clothing—suits new—jewelry, fine teams, nice buggies, and plenty of good things to eat. A spiritual uplifting by means of good books is not deemed necessary. When people will not care for their own spiritual good, it is necessary to do something for them in urging the necessity of having good books in their homes. The reading of a good tract often makes a better impression than that produced by the hearing of a sermon. The books we sell make our lives better, more devotional and inspiring. The "Life of C. H. Spurgeon," "Talks to Children about Jesus," "Pilgrim's Progress," and Bibles and Testaments, ought to be in the homes of our people.

The colporter's visit ought to be appreciated. The circus, the fair and the welcome week are all run after. If the colporter didn't have a backbone as large as a circus pole, he would get left.

I am doing work within my own resources except a few Bibles and Testaments, which Bro. Durham furnished me from the Supply Store in Raleigh, N. C. The destitution is great even in our own churches and mission fields. How easy it would be for each Association to organize this work and raise a fund and send the colporter forth to labor among and supply the destitute. An Association surely can stand this, if one individual can from his private purse. If our people will not help in this matter, then as sure as God's Word stands, He will raise up deliverance from other quarters.

I love this work. My ministerial life has been greatly spent in the book business both in this State and in South Carolina. I sold over $600 worth of books in one year in the Welsh Neck Association of South Carolina. I would like to serve some Association and prosecute the work of colportage within its bounds. My work has been encouraging. I have sold a great many books, and will be engaged thus until Christmas. My visits to Associations and calls on the people have been very pleasant with very few exceptions. My summer's work in evangelistic meetings were greatly blessed, and my own soul was made to cry out "Abba, Father—my Lord and my God."

I am greatly gratified to know that the Supply Store has done better work this year than in any previous year.

THE best investment in real-estate is to keep buildings well painted. Paint protects the house and saves repairs. You sometimes want to sell—many a good house has remained unsold for want of paint. The rule should be though, "the best paint or none." That means

Strictly Pure White Lead

You cannot afford to use cheap paints. To be sure of getting Strictly Pure White Lead, look at the brand; any of these are safe:

"Atlantic" New York. "Jewett" New York.
"John T. Lewis & Bros." Philadelphia.

FOR COLORS.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors.

These colors are sold in one-pound cans, each can being sufficient to tint 25 pounds of Strictly Pure White Lead the desired shade; they are in no sense ready-mixed paints, but a combination of perfectly pure colors in the handiest form to suit Strictly Pure White Lead.

A good many thousand dollars have been saved property-owners by having our book on painting and color-card. Send us a postal card and get both free.

As the battle went on, calls were made for reinforcements, and in 1851-'61-'80-'84-'85-'89 the sons and daughters of our land responded to the call. While the call has been heard by us our brethren of A. B. Union, B. M. Society, London, China Inland Mission, and many others were answering, until there is an army of 1,800 missionaries with nearly 50,000 native Christians in the field with the determination to win China for Jesus. Will they conquer?

The foreign press said: "The movement of the Twentieth Century will not be a commercial one, but a nation of missionaries from the west, backed by the wealth of Christendom, will invade our land and we must prepare for them."

"The cloud-capped towers,
The gorgeous palaces,

And, like the baseless fabric of a dream,

The Cause of These Changes:

We say the war of 1842, which resulted in the Nanking treaty, opening five ports; the war of 1856, resulting in Teintsin treaty, which made it possible for all China to have the Truth. We say western civilization, pushing her wave of conquest, has transformed the land.

The charity work in opening hospitals, giving healing to thousands every year, has wrought the change. Let us look up to the Eternal who has used these means unto the salvation of many. One of the greatest agencies in this work is the translation of the Scriptures in the colloquial speech of 80,000,000 people. This "light to the feet and lamp to the path" entered Chinese life and left Divine blessings there. This chart of the way to God, on which is marked with unerring certainty every shoal, every beacon, every sounding, latitude and longitude, was put in the hands of the people with the glorious results we see. The many souls saved and the great and growing blessing already given to the work is a prophecy of what this same gospel will do in the fullness of time, even in China.

Sisters, may the rapture of forgetfulness of self, which was so characteristic of sister Yates, which is the spirit of our Lord, inspire you in your "work of faith and labor of love."

WE NEED $33,500 towards building that magnificent building for our young women. It is only a matter of time and judicious, faithful work.....God's service is worthy the highest scholarship attainable—of men and women. ....Women ought to be educated, not for "society," but in order that they may be prepared to wisely say what society shall be.... The religion of a nation is the religion of its firesides—and that means of the mothers..... We cannot afford to delegate the privilege of educating our daughters to others than Baptists.....If the girls can get their educations without endowment, the boys can. The question is, should our girls be educated; grant that, then endowment is necessary.—Stringfield.

WAKE FOREST COLLEGE.

The Baptist State Convention of North Carolina was organized in 1830, and as early as 1832 it resolved on "the establishment of a Baptist Literary Institution in the State." For its site there was purchased, less than a month later, a farm of 615 acres in "The Forest" of Wake County. The next year, 1833, the Legislature granted a meagre charter to the "Wake Forest Institute."

By legislative amendment in 1838 the "Institute" became "Wake Forest College." Successive amendments to its charter were secured in 1875, 1879, 1881 and 1889. The last authorizes the Trustees to receive and control for the maintenance of the College property to the value of $1,000,000.

Wake Forest Institute was opened in 1834. Its first and only President was Rev. Samuel Wait, D. D. When, in 1838, the Institute became the College, President Wait continued to guide its struggling career until 1846. His mantle has fallen, in turn, upon his six successors: Rev. William Hooper, D. D., in 1846; Rev. John B. White, D. D., 1849; Prof. W. H. Owen, President pro tem., in 1852; Rev. W. M. Wingate, D. D., in 1854; Rev. T. H. Pritchard, D. D., in 1879; Rev. C. E. Taylor, D. D., in 1883.

Prior to 1878, a single large building had been available for all College purposes—for dormitories, chapel, library and lecture-rooms. In that year the "Heck and Williams Building" was added, which provided a Library and Reading-room, two commodious lecture-rooms, and two Society halls. The "Wingate Memorial Building" in 1880, supplied four additional lecture-rooms, a Chapel for morning services, and a large Audience Hall. The "Lea Laboratory," in 1888, provided a Chemical Lecture-room and Laboratory. It also affords accommodations for the School of Biology and Geology. Its erection was due mainly to the beneficence of the late Sidney S. Lea, of Caswell County, North Carolina. In 1860 the Endowment Fund of the College was $46,000. At the close of the war in 1865 only $11,700 of the invested fund remained. Nevertheless, the work of the College went on, despite the difficulties, for seventeen years. By the end of 1883 the endowment had reached $100,000, and the College began a new era of activity. Now its invested fund exceeds $200,000.

Most notable of the generous contributors to this fund was the late Mr. J. A. Bostwick, of New York, among whose princely gifts was one of $50,000.

With these enlarged facilities, which it is hoped will yet be largely increased, it is the aim of the Trustees and Faculty to educate the youth of the land under influences as favorable as possible for the development of a vigorous Christian manhood.

Wake Forest College belongs to the Baptists of North Carolina, and those who control it will continue to adapt it, as far as the means are at their disposal, to the immediate needs of the young men of North Carolina. All new departures in educational methods and the systems in vogue elsewhere will be closely scrutinized. All that has proved to be valuable in them and is adapted for our use will be appropriated, but none of them will be slavishly followed.

The Trustees and Faculty of the College, as they review the constant elevation of the standard, both of entrance and graduation, the enlargement of the corps of instructors, the improvement in equipment, the increase of endowment, and the successful careers of large numbers of the sons of the College, cannot but regard with some degree of satisfaction the position Wake Forest has won among her sister institutions. And in what has been already achieved they find encouragement and stimulus to press steadily on toward larger and wider and better work.

Warren Union.

The next session of this body will be held with the Sharon Church, Warren county, on Friday and Saturday before the fifth Sunday in present month. Visiting brethren are invited. If those wishing to attend will notify Bro. P. R. Perkinson, Wise, N. C., they will be met at Warren Plains.

G. W. HARMAN.

The Robeson Association.

Here we close up the work of the Associations. One who has attended thirty of these meetings in the past three months could hardly fail to be impressed with the fitness of closing with the meeting of the Robeson.

This meeting followed hard on the heels of an election, about which people were more or less disturbed and excited. Some of the brethren feared that this might in some way hinder the progress and disturb the unanimity and aggressive spirit which has characterized the meeting of this body, especially in recent years. But this was all a mistake. I never saw a finer demonstration of the ability of brethren to lay aside all differences, if such existed, and to take hold of the work of the Association, the Lord's work, and do it with a will and spirit that was an inspiration to all present.

Bro. Pitman, a veteran in the cause, was re-elected as Moderator without one dissenting voice. This was good to begin with. It would be hard for a brother with a good heart as Bro. Pitman has to fail to be a good Moderator. Faithful to his work, kind and courteous to all, helpful and inspiring to those who speak, we shall have but the pleasantest recollections of him in the years to come.

I suppose nothing could have been a greater surprise than if the Association had failed to re-elect Bro. Procter as Clerk and Treasurer. What we have said heretofore, and what we say now, in reference to the faithfulness and efficiency of Bro. Procter's work in the Robeson Association, has not been for the sake of indulging in pleasant references to him, but with a hope that his success in organising the work and in helping the churches to get a better and more certain method of managing their contributions might be seen and felt in other Associations; and in this we have not been disappointed.

Bro. Kesler sent us off in a good pace in the strong, practical, and carefully prepared sermon which he delivered at 11 o'clock Tuesday. So often we think an introductory sermon is a mere matter of form, but really it goes far in determining the interest and success of our meetings. The Robeson Association has no "pet" work, except it be education, and this so vitally affects all other interests as to lose its identity in this respect. I do not know any county in the State which has as many good country churches as has Robeson; and standing near a large number of these are first-class academies, where the boys and girls attend school—in many instances during the entire year. The wisdom of establishing the Robeson Institute will be seen and felt over the entire county. These academies, to be found now all over the county, will serve as feeders to the Institute, sending, as they will, boys and girls there for their full preparation for college.

Bro. J. H. Edwards, of Fayetteville, read the report on Foreign Missions, following it with an earnest and instructive speech. The ladies held their meetings regularly during the session, showing much progress in this department of our work. Bro. J. A. Smith read the report on Home Missions. I know of no man in the State who can compass more useful information in a report than Bro. Smith. We remember to have heard him read a report on Foreign Missions two years ago, and the report itself was an able discussion of the subject.

Many of the brethren fear that the prohibition of selling and distilling whiskey in Robeson county may be disturbed by the next Legislature, but we cannot think there is any danger of this. Certainly no man who lives in this county, and who feels any interest in its well being, seeing what this law has done for the education and moral elevation of the people, as well as for the material interest of the county, could think of favoring any law that would remove this blessing.

Those who knew Robeson county years ago would not know it now. Churches, schoolhouses, and peaceable and well ordered towns have taken the places of bar-rooms and places of vice and disorder. Certainly nobody would wish to see a county, one of the best in the State, take any such step backward.

For years we had heard of Bro. Haynes Lennon, of the Columbus Association. Years ago we had heard his name connected with Wake Forest College, and in fact with every other interest of the denomination. It was a real pleasure to see him, while far advanced in years, the Moderator of his Association, and interested in the progress of all of our work.

The Columbus County Association has some fine material ready to be moulded for the most effective work.

The brethren were glad to welcome Bro. Durham, who, for the first time, was permitted to speak to them on Missions and Education. In the years to come we shall expect to see the fruits of his efforts in the progress which the Association will make. If some young layman, and they have them, should only catch the spirit of Procter, of the Robeson, and organize and systematize the work in the Association, what a change it would make.

We were glad to see Bro. Tuttle, who has lately moved to Whiteville. A true man, a good preacher, and a safe, conservative leader, the work of the Association will grow and prosper under his efforts.

We missed many brethren whom we would have gladly seen. Dr. McKinnon, the former Moderator, was kept away by ill health, however we were glad to hear of his improvement, and we hope to see him for many years to come in his place of work. Bro. W. S. Murray, one of the oldest and best workers in the body, was present—strong and vigorous for one of his age.

Bro. Cobb, the pastor at Chadbourn, is succeeding finely with his work. The church where we held the Association has just been completed, and is a nice and comfortable house. We knew Bro. Cobb when at college, and while he was not among the most brilliant students, yet his strict adherence to principle, his conscientious discharge of duty, has made him one of the most successful young pastors in the State.

The Association went forward in its pledges for next year, a thing it will continue to do in the years to come. J. C. C.

Help Bro. Elliott.

HERTFORD, N. C.

Dear Brother in Christ: PLEASE HEAR MY PETITION. Hyde county has never had Missionary Baptist preaching for the white people until very recently. I visited the county a few years ago and found only one Missionary Baptist, now there are near a dozen, and we are building a neat church-house which will do credit to the denomination. At the request of the Yeopim Union Meeting I began this work, but owing to sickness and general hard times the necessary means could not be secured from the people to carry the work on. I then mortgaged my home for $500 and continued this, the house of many prayers. For the first time through all my church building I make this humble petition to my brother ministers and brethren. Please aid us in building this, the first Missionary Baptist Church ever built in this county for the white people. Send all contributions by Christmas, as a Christmas present, if possible. We want to dedicate it to God the first Sabbath in January. All amounts from churches or individuals will be published through the Recorder. Please send all money to Josiah Elliott, Hertford, N. C. I receive no pay for this mission up to January.

Your humble brother,
JOSIAH E. ELLIOTT.

I most heartily commend the above, and earnestly request the pastors and churches to whom it is sent to aid Bro. Elliott in securing the five hundred dollars for which his little home is now pledged. Please help him at once and liberally. C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK.

Looking Towards Organization.

The song and praise meeting, preceding the opening of the Provisional Convention of the Baptist Young People of North Carolina, was conducted yesterday morning by the Rev. J. E. White.

The Secretary read the following report on representation:

"Inasmuch as this is our first meeting in the State in the interest of Baptist young people, and partakes somewhat of the nature of a mass-meeting, your committee recommends that this body be composed of delegates from young people's societies in Baptist churches and all pastors and members of Baptist churches present who are in sympathy with and interested in the organization of young people in our churches.

(Signed) M. P. MATHENY,
W. C. DOWD,
JNO. E. WHITE,
A. C. CREE."

The first topic for discussion was "The Kind of Young People's Society We Need." The first sub-head, "Devotional," was to have been discussed by Rev. A. M. Simms, but in his absence, Rev. R. VanDeventer performed this duty, calling Rev. Mr. White to the chair in the meantime. He made a beautiful impromptu address. He favored primarily for the young people a devotional prayer-meeting, and at such prayer-meeting those qualified to edify ought not alone to speak, but the stammerer or lisper in grace, also, for often an ignorant man can relate an experience of grace, and tell it in a way to lift higher. A meeting that lifts the heart toward God is devotional. The influences of the day in social life are against spirituality.

These devotional meetings will fit us for service. Too many church members never speak in such meetings. They enjoy hearing others. They "revel in the spice beds of Beulah," but never help others to do so. The devotional meeting brings these out. It helps to consecrate our lives to Christ. "We will never have a love for humanity till we have a love for Christ—till we do something for Him."

Rev. J. H. Edwards, of Fayetteville, spoke on "The Evangelistic Meetings." The two prime objects of this work are growth in the Christian life, and fitting for service. As the Baptist Church believes in a regenerated church membership, and that baptism should be administered only to those who had experienced a change of heart, it was their duty to lead the children at an early age to Christ.

The speaker told how the Moslems, when in 1543 they were spreading consternation throughout Christendom, took the young men of the Servians and other Christian nations which had come under their power, and, indoctrinating them in the faith of the Prophet, made them their most enthusiastic leaders.

If in this day the young men were filled with a passionate love for Christ they would become earnest workers for Him.

This movement was permanent. Like the drum-beat of the English, as heard and described by Webster standing on the heights of Abraham, and which is heard around the circle of the globe, so we may hear in the advance of these young people the tramp of thousands moving forward for the evangelization of the world.

Mr. E. K. Procter next discussed "The Educational Meeting." He said he was an average young man, and an average Baptist, and went on to tell how dull the average devotional meeting is. The pastor reads a passage of Scripture, expounds it and nobody else says anything. "I am willing," said he, "to lend my assistance to formulating a plan for putting a good, strong educational feature in our programmes, made a little stronger than our Sunday School lessons, but not too 'cut and dried.' That's how I would like the gap filled up."

The next feature was an "Open Parliament: What is Your Society Doing?" conducted by Rev. J. Q Adams. Mr. Adams made an entertaining and practical talk on what his own young people's society was doing. It takes the periodicals of the Young People's Union; the pastor puts his library at the disposal of the society; there is no limit to membership, the ages of members varying from 8 to 45. What is the society doing? The children read two chapters in the Bible on Sundays and one every week day. They meet regularly Friday nights. A programme is arranged two weeks before hand, this work devolving on Mr. Adams himself, who often puts as much care upon them as he does on his sermons. The subjects vary. He has taken his society through a three months' course in Baptist doctrine.

Active work is being done by Mr. Adams' society. It has a hotel (visiting) committee, a jail committee, a number of young people in the Sunday School work, and two mission schools. There is a social meeting at the home of some member every two or three months. There is a second union for smaller children from 8 to 12 years old.

Mr. Adams says these societies are doing more to develop the work and growth of his church than any other agencies. He seems to have so perfected the workings of his union as to make it almost an ideal one.

Rev. W. T. Hundley, of Greenville, S. C., spoke enthusiastically of the good work of the young people in his church, and in South Carolina, as did also Mr. Blackwell, of Elizabeth City.

Rev. Dr. Thos. Hume, of Chapel Hill, told of the interest in, and work of, his Sunday School mission union, which he has been conducting for nine years.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The afternoon session opened with a continuance of the talks under the Open Parliament of the morning session.

Mrs A. C. Cree, a young Timotheus, who has caught the spirit and enthusiasm of the Paul-like H. VanDeventer, his pastor, on the subject of putting the young people to work, made an earnest talk. He is a Wake Forest student and told of the work in the society there.

Mr. I. W. Durham briefly related the mission work being performed by the Charlotte church, mentioning its mission work in the city, its educating a young missionary, and learning to take part in the active work of the church.

Rev. Mr. Church, of Statesville, said he had a society actively at work in his church, but the constitution forbade associate members. There were none in his society, and he doubted the propriety of allowing them.

[illegible] on permanent organization, composed of Messrs. Blackwell, Procter, Hume, Edwards and Pritchard, reported through Chairman Blackwell as follows:

"Your committee to whom was referred the subject of permanent organization begs to report as follows:

"Whereas, This Provisional Convention of Baptist Young People has been called by the committee appointed by the State Convention, we think it would be discourteous to the Convention for us now to enter into a permanent organization before that committee reports to the State Convention.

"And, That we, through said committee, do offer the following report of our action to the Convention:

"First, That, in our judgment, the time has come to combine the young people's societies, now numbering forty or more, into a permanent State organization,

And, second, That this State organization, if effected, shall be kept in closest relations with the Baptist State Convention: (1.) By holding its sessions at the same place and during the same week. (2.) That in every case delegates to the Young People's Convention shall be endorsed by the local churches to which they belong. (3.) That we believe such a relationship would bring our young people into heartiest sympathy and co-operation with the work of the Southern Baptist Convention. (4.) That we desire at all times to keep said organization in line with the work of the Southern Baptist Convention. (5.) That we request the State Convention, at its present session, to appoint a committee with full powers to organize our young people's local societies into a permanent State organization."

In the discussion which followed Rev. Thos. Speight said: "I wouldn't say anything to the detriment of the young people of North Carolina, and especially the Baptists, but I want to know what's going to become of a young man in a young people's society when he gets old? Now I'm a believer in the church. What's the matter with our churches to-day that we must have a separate organization?" He argued for looking after a young man when he goes into the church. He thought this movement would lead to making young people love some other association better than the church.

Mr. Speight is a man evidently of great conservatism and intensity of conviction. He is an emphatic speaker, with a clear, loud, bell-like voice, a good deal of an actor, and he doesn't care what he says if he believes he is right. Rev. Mr. Edwards arose to make a point of order, when he interrupted with: "Oh, yes, I'm always out of order. I was born out of order." [Laughter.] The President overruled Mr. Edwards' point, and Mr. Speight proceeded, being followed by Mr. Haymore, who did not favor the report offered, saying: "I don't believe the Lord intended us to have "a wheel within a wheel," or to make the church a complicated piece of machinery."

Rev. M. P. Matheny argued at length in reply to Dr. Speight that the question of the organization of these societies was really, when sifted down, a question for the individual churches, and not for the Convention.

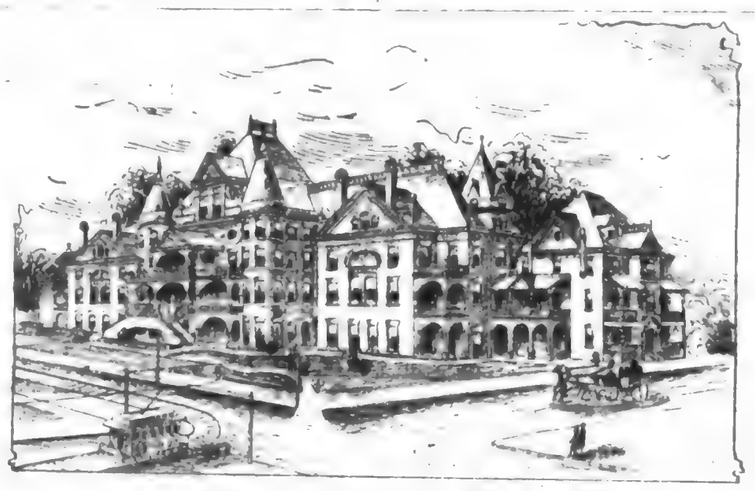
The Convention then got wound up in a parliamentary tangle, and when the unraveling began Mr. Speight admitted that everybody was out of order.

It turned out that Mr. Speight, and others, had no right to speak at all, except through the courtesy of the Chair, according to the provisions of the report on representation, adopted at the morning session. Also that the last Convention had committed itself in favor of the organization of young people's societies in so far as it had appointed a committee, through which another committee, appointed by the Young People's Convention, was to report to the present Convention. The only question was now whether there should be a State organization, and a wider Southern extension.

The previous question was then called, and the report of the Committee on Organization adopted.

DR. HUME ON CHRISTIAN CULTURE.

Rev. Dr. Thomas Hume, of the University of North Carolina, addressed the Convention on "Culture and Service." His address glittered with thought-jewels in golden settings of exquisitely choice language, and was in every way characteristic of the speaker. First putting the stress on the word service, Dr. Hume said that the chemist who took the poison to show the efficacy of the antidote, showed what service was, as well as the great and good Peabody who willed his millions to be used for the education of the illiterate whites and blacks of the South.



Without culture there is a tendency to run into a vague mysticism. St. Simeon was selfish in separating himself from his fellowmen and losing himself in the contemplation of the heaven beyond to which he was going. Better far to be like the young woman who would go to the slums to lift up the helpless and fallen. Culture is needed to direct faith and keep it from developing into an irregular fanaticism. Huxley was right in saying we should cultivate an ideal, something that was to be to us a pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night, but he was wrong in trying to take us away from the Bible, from Christ as our ideal, to keep us from being able to say: "We believe and are sure that thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Unless one can so believe and be sure, he is apt to drift into a vague Robert Elsemereism, an intangible humanitarianism.

True education is the completion of our whole nature. The affections and the reason must alike be educated. This is an education which purifies passion. We know Paul was no less earnest because he became a believer in Christ. It was a direction of old powers to right ends. The culture of religion is the reconstruction of the old man in the image of the Great King.

The speaker referred to the devotional moods in his own experience as a child in his home by "the sounding sea," and of hours spent with poets like Wordsworth and George Herbert. "These devotional moods prompt aspiration," he said. "Oh, that we could waylay the young with this kind of culture."

The Christian at times should put himself in the place of all kinds of people, to think their thoughts, etc., and so he should know something of science. Sometimes we do not see the relation of reason to faith. An old woman in her cottage may have a richer experience than the professor in a college.

Give your nature back to Christ expanded. Let us rise to the height of such experience. Put culture into service.

THE FEMALE UNIVERSITY, AS PLANNED.

The name will probably be changed to "Baptist Woman's College" by the next Legislature.

"We owe it to our daughters, we owe it to ourselves, we owe it to the Lord," to build and equip and endow this institution.—O. L. Stringfield.

"The primary objects of the Convention," says the constitution, "shall be to educate young men called of God to the ministry, and approved by the churches to which they belong. * * * The Education Board shall, so far as it is able, assist promising and indigent young ministers seeking to prepare themselves for the more efficient preaching of the Gospel."

The importance of the work looms up before us as never before. There are more young ministers needing help, and the demand for them, at home and abroad, is increasing. No work of the Convention has been more signally blessed. None has given better results. None calls more loudly for help just now. Brethren, let us hear the call and enlarge the work, for Jesus' sake. The aid given the young ministers is $9 per month, and this they are required to return after five years, without interest.

The following is a brief financial statement:

Rev. Dr. C. Durham introduced the following resolution, which was adopted:

"Resolved, That the Board of Education be requested to receive, if they shall deem it wise, forty-five young preachers at Wake Forest College, and that we, the pastors of the churches and delegates to this Convention, will aid the Corresponding Secretary in securing the needed funds for this work."

Report of Corresponding Secretary of Ministerial Relief Board.

This has really been an important epoch in the history of the Ministerial Relief Board. There has been a mixture of joy and grief.

The general contributions for the board have been very good, considering the extreme pressure in money matters. So far as we have been able to get the cause before the minds of the brethren they have responded very liberally. We rejoice in this indication of progress.

There has been a special donation of five hundred dollars ($500) to the board from a very worthy brother, who does not wish his name made known. This donation has been very gratefully received by us, and will, no doubt, gladden the hearts of many who are in need. May the blessings of a kind Father abide upon the giver, and attend the gift.

We have tried to get this worthy cause before the brethren in every Association, by soliciting wise and judicious representatives. We have heard from the following brethren who have kindly consented to present this matter: Associations—Caldwell, J. V. McCall; Cape Fear, Rev. E. W. Wooten; Catawba River, J. H. Hoffman; Chowan, E. F. Aydlett; Eastern, Rev. L. R. Carroll; Elkin, J. S. Kilby; Green River, Rev. L. L. Landrum; Liberty, Rev. Henry Sheets; Little River, Rev. J. A. Campbell; Mt. Zion, Rev. W. C. Tyree; Pee Dee, H. C. Dockery; Robeson, T. F. Toon; Sandy Creek, W. C. Douglass; Sandy Run, Rev. T. Bright; South Fork, J. D. Moore; Tar River, Rev. A. G. Wilcox; West Chowan, Rev. M. L. Green; French Broad, Rev. T. M. Honeycutt.

There still remains twenty-two Associations from which we have not yet heard. We hope the brethren who have been solicited will respond, and that if it is so they cannot, that they will kindly help us to secure the services of someone else. We need this, brethren, in every Association.

But, while we have these, with other things, connected with the workings of the board, to make us rejoice, there have been some sad features about it.

Bro. W. A. Albright, a very faithful and earnest member of our Board, has been taken from us by death, and has gone to his reward. This cause lay very near to his heart, and he was ever ready to help in every good word and work connected with it. We have missed him in our deliberations, but God knew best, and we bow with submission.

We have to chronicle the passing away to their reward of two of our beneficiaries: Rev. James Broomfield, of Gastonia, and Rev. J. N. Gore, of Eoka. Bro. Broomfield died about the 20th of June, 1893, but was not reported last year. Bro. Gore died 9th of December, 1893. Also, recently the wife of Bro. Jesse Howell was laid away to rest from life's labors. May God bless this sore bereavement to his good.

We are now contributing to the support of ten beneficiaries: Revs. J. G. Barclay, Rocky Mount; W. J. Combs, Trap Hill; William Harris, Kapp's Mills; T. Harrison, Rockingham; Jesse Howell, New Hill; John Hughes, Byrd; Mrs. J. Barlow, Sloop Point; Mrs. C. F. Humphries, Oxford; Mrs. B. H. Phillips, Reidsville, and Mrs. R. A Churchill, Chalk Level. Mrs. S. J. Gore, of Eoka, was received as a beneficiary but has since married, and her name has been dropped from the list. Mrs. J. Barlow has been received since last report.

Brethren, let us appeal to you for more sympathy and co-operation in this effort to support these dear old brethren. You have imposed this sacred trust upon us and we need your help, both in finding out who are the needy ones, and supporting them after they are found.

We respectfully submit this report for your consideration.

CONVENTION NOTES.

WAKE FOREST could not be what it is, but for its alumni.—Procter.

There is nothing like going ahead, trusting in God and keeping united—Skinner.

I HAVE been almost resolved to death.—Stringfield. He can sympathize with Prohibition.

IN ALL the lines of service that I know of, experience commands a premium, except in the ministry.—J. L. Carroll.

THE hospitality and sympathetic interest of the Charlotte people were great factors in the success and good spirits of the meeting.

SATURDAY'S PROCEEDINGS of the Convention failed to appear in last RECORDER on account of an unfortunate delay in transit.

WE ARE friendly to higher education; we have done more for higher education than any denomination in the State.—J. D. Hufham.

"I HAVE been rewarded abundantly every time I have made a special sacrifice for the Lord."—H. B. Duffie. Thank God for his testimony.

"QUIET AND time are two great elements," remarked Professor Kerfoot, raising a collection at night after three long speeches had been made.

The makers of long speeches, the exhumers of stale anecdotes, the "funny" man, the grumbler were probably frightened off by the railway wrecks.

I THINK the thing to do is to express gratitude to God. In the midst of financial depression He has given us grace to give all that was asked to turn a great crisis the right way.—Skinner. Bro. Speight offered a devout prayer.

THE RECORDER is profoundly grateful [illegible] the kind words said by the brethren, particularly brethren Carroll, Poteat, T. J. Taylor, Hufham, J. A. and T. I. Speight and Skinner.

OUR ORPHANAGE stands next to that [illegible] Texas in numbers. The brethren were anxious to have a collection taken Saturday evening, but it was postponed until Sunday night when $80 was realized.

WE are grateful to Secretaries Broughton and Cobb for many courtesies. Their efficient service is witnessed in the Minutes which have already come from the excellent press of Edwards & Broughton.

THE TRUSTEES of Wake Forest College met in regular session during the Convention. Business of routine nature was transacted. The plan to raise endowment was adopted. The report on the college is published elsewhere.

THERE WERE not many changes in the Boards, but we regret that they were not obtained in time to correct the list on fourth page. Revised list will appear next week. By the way, that list is a pretty good index to the denomination.

THE AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY is anti-Baptist. The British and foreign societies actually translate the word for baptize as sprinkle!—C. C. Bitting. This statement was confirmed by Missionary Graves, of China. The American Baptist Publication Society is the Baptist Bible publisher.

THE SEMINARY can't make a preacher; it works on material.... The churches will take the fellows who can preach best.... You can't afford to let your men grow up without thorough training.... The men of Wake Forest at the Seminary have stood as well as any men there.—Kerfoot.

THE HEAVIEST burden we have in our work is in building churches—($80,269.56 spent last year.) I know denominations that are free from this burden; but it is not a good sign. There has never been a time when the churches were so much engaged in debt paying and undertaking new work.—J. A. Mundy.

WE CANNOT mention all the active laymen of the Convention. There ought to have been more of them, and if there were a few more like Brethren Duffie, Dockery, Boushall, Procter, Jones, Scarborough, Shaw, Aydlett, Faircloth, and others not now recalled, the work of the Convention would be quickened.

WHO CAN comprehend the power of one church of God in a community? Who has not seen the influence thus exerted, has missed a great evidence of the civilizing and spiritualizing power of the gospel. What a work the forty-eight churches, organized by State Missionaries last year, will exert!—W. J. Gwaltney.

THE HOME BOARD has come through the late hard and trying years in better shape than any board of any denomination, North or South.—Tichenor. Everyone was glad of Dr. Tichenor's presence at the meeting. He was [illegible] his years well, and the brightness of his [illegible] encourages us to hope that it will please God to keep him at his present post yet many years.

DR. SKINNER is responsible for the excellent good humor that prevailed. He was on the floor just at the proper time, always with something good on his tongue, and never out of order. Dr. T. T. Speight was as efficient as Bro. Skinner in this good work, but they got him out of order (and he confessed it) in the Young People's meeting.

AN incident of the meeting (to relate it would be unkind) showed very clearly that the Convention was practically unanimously opposed to State aid to higher education. Prof. John B. Brewer's name was substituted for that of Associate Justice-elect W. A. Montgomery on the committee to memorialize the Legislature on behalf of the Colleges.

THE motion of Professor Hobgood that a committee be appointed to suggest a plan for closer union of Wake Forest and other Baptist educational interests met with general favor. This does not mean co-education—not by any means. The following are on the committee: F. P. Hobgood, J. B. Boone, J. D. Huffham, C. E. Taylor, L. W. Bagley, C. K. Proctor, J. [illegible] and J. B. Brewer.

REV. N. S. JONES spoke Saturday morning on the movement set on foot last July to get the preachers throughout the State to give ten days or more to voluntary revival preaching in needy communities. He thought this ought to go together, one a layman, if such ones can be gotten. Bro. Jones has written an article along this line which we will submit to our readers next week.

ON BEING asked if it were wise to send missionaries when the Board is in debt, Dr. Willingham replied that none but those who were especially approved and supported by churches and associations are being sent. This Convention was the last that Bro. Willingham had to attend this year. In the last nine weeks he has attended nine Conventions, traveling 6,000 miles. And he said that this Convention was as good, if not better, than the best of them all.

PASTOR C. A. G. THOMAS reported that the Romanists and their followers were after him for his stand with regard to church and State, and the Governor's officious letter. Brother Thomas didn't stay at Charlotte long, as he had to return to Greensboro to consult with his people about inviting the Convention. Bro. Joyner, of Greensboro, was at Charlotte Monday and he insisted on having the Convention come. It is thought that Newton wanted the next meeting.

NORTH CAROLINA is a remarkably good place to grow men. I have seen no men at the Seminary superior to our North Carolinians. The trouble is there is not enough of them..... Seminary was born in the big heart and brain of Jas. P. Boyce. Baptist teachers the Seminary have to leave when they become unorthodox. (The speaker didn't say so, but we think the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary the most orthodox and trustworthy of them all.) It is the only Baptist seminary that the churches direct..... There has but one Broadus, and the Seminary has had him thirty-five years..... Yes, we have an institution teacher who teaches the boys how to elocute..... If you undertake to keep down men in North Carolina by not educating them it will not be long before you can't get rid of them. It is Mrs. Browning that says, "[illegible] my art too well to wish it smaller made, or my size."—Kerfoot.

Cape Fear Association.

After prayerful consideration, I have accepted the evangelistic work of the Cape Fear Association for the coming year. Believing that God is guiding in this work, we go forth, trusting in his grace and power, and look to him for the blessing.

We want the old Cape Fear Association to regain its former place among the Associations. Not many years ago this body paid from $1,500 to $3,000 yearly for missions, and for the last two years it has paid less than $300 for the same purpose. What is the cause of this digression? Well, there are several causes:

Several Associations have gone off from it, and the remaining churches have become negligent, cold and lukewarm. Some, I fear, have almost reached Laodicean lukewarmness. But by the grace and power of God working in us of his own good pleasure, we want to arouse the cold, sleeping individuals and churches into a zealous activity. Believing that we will have the hearty co-operation of the preachers of the Association, we go forth in the name of the Master with the assurance of victory; also believing that God will supply all our wants through his people. There never was a more willing and ready people than those of the old Cape Fear Association when they know it; therefore, we are determined to "strengthen our stakes" by building up our own churches and congregations; and also to "lengthen our cords" by sending our money, and, if need be, our God called young men and women across the seas.

We are well able to do a great work. Since the return of the Brunswick Association, we are about 2,000 strong. So, if the Lord's people be poor, we are many; besides, we have been abundantly blessed this year with good crops. It seems that the Lord has placed before us an "open door," and we mean by his help to enter and regain our former place in the Lord's work. To do this, we must have the Holy Spirit; therefore, let every Christian in the old Cape Fear Association pray for the Holy Spirit to revive his work of grace in our hearts.

The Bible is a missionary book from Genesis to Revelation; and whenever the missionary spirit dies out of a church, it dies. In reading the Bible, I find that prayer is mentioned 262 times; giving money, or property, money's equivalent, 211 times. It seems to me that God has joined the two, praying and giving, together; for when the angel went down to Cornelius' house, he said, "Thy prayers and thine alms have gone up for a memorial before God." Therefore, "what God hath joined together, let not man put asunder."

Our observations teach us that those denominations which give most liberally of their men, women and money to Christ, prosper most. There is a denomination which neither gives of their men, women, nor money to spread Christ's gospel; neither do they believe in education; in fact, they only believe a part of the Bible, and that part which best suits their fancy. This sect was once numerous, but they are rapidly passing away, and the time will soon come when all will be gone save their memory. Let us, therefore, take warning and remember the words of the Lord Jesus, "how he said unto you, it is more blessed to give than to receive." Acts 20: 35.

Again, let us read the twenty fifth chapter of Matthew, which brings us to the judgment: there we find that those who are to be cast into everlasting punishment are those who fail to do while here on earth.

"Therefore, let none hear you idly
Saying there is nothing I can do,
While the souls of men are dying,
And the Master calls for you."

So, then, if you cannot preach or go yourself, you can give or send your check; and if you "cannot give your thousands, you can give the widow's mite, and the least you do for Jesus will be precious in his sight."

Affectionately, J. H. HILDRETH.

From Plymouth.

Dear Recorder:—The Lord has done and is doing great things for Plymouth church, whereof we are glad. We know that the whole earth is full of God's glory. The wide world which we inhabit is a living temple for his worship, sustained by the pillars of the everlasting mountains, frescoed with the shadows of clouds, filled with the incense of opening flowers and falling dews, hung around with the gorgeous tapestry of sunset skies and starry nights, echoing with perpetual anthems that swell in every note, from the murmur of the gentle breeze in the mountain pine to the earth shaking thunder of the skies and the roar of the deep in storms. We see God's glory in all these things. But probably his glory is seen in his church in the world more than in these. Our church at Plymouth has been in a revival for several months. But on Saturday before the third Sunday in November the Lord sent along this way Rev. J. T. Jenkins, full of the Spirit of God and full of the saving gospel, who preached for us eight days with great power. The Spirit of God carried the word to hard hearted sinners, and they were made to say, "What must I do to be saved." Men who had wandered away from the church and from God come back to the fold. Families that had been divided in the faith were united, homes in Plymouth were made bright and happy because of the sons and the daughters coming home to God. Up to the present time thirteen have united with the Baptist church, and more to follow.

One special feature about the meeting is to be noted, viz., the Baptist got the fish. Bro. Jenkins don't say "it don't matter what church you belong to," as is the manner of some evangelists. He is thoroughly orthodox, plain and practical, and like the blessed Master of old he says "Woe, woe!"

The meetings were largely attended, and eternity alone will tell of the good that was accomplished.

Our church is growing gradually. The members are becoming stronger in the faith once delivered to the saints. We have had foes to fight within and without, but thank God the dawn grows brighter and brighter. Our material has been tested and tried and has withstood the fiery darts of the world, standing as firm as the Rock of Ages.

Our meetings become more and more interesting. We are asking God for greater things, and we are expecting those things, and God will give them to us.

The brethren and sisters are always ready to co-operate in the work with their time, talent and money, and God is blessing their efforts. "He that goeth forth and weepeth bearing precious seed, shall come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him," —"some one hundred, some sixty, and some thirty."

A Wonderful Cure for Cancer.

There is no further need to cut cancers out with knives or burn them out with plasters. Dr. Scott Mason of Richmond, Va., has a cure for this dreadful affliction that supercedes all other methods in positive cure and rapid healing. Not only this, but it is painless when used and the only cure suitable for old people. It seeks out the diseased growths and destroys their vitality, causing the cancer to pass away leaving only an ordinary healthy sore which rapidly heals. The cure is specially favorable for cancer of mouth, nose, ear, and other delicate parts on account of high sensitiveness and great difficulty to use present remedies. Cases heretofore considered incurable are being turned over to Dr. Mason from all parts of the country and are rapidly cured.

Dr. Mason's cure is sent by express everywhere and applied at home without further cost. Those afflicted should write to Dr. Scott Mason, Richmond, Va., giving full description of case and get his price for a cure.

Cuba's Riches.

While Columbus was disappointed in not finding in Cuba the riches of the East, yet he found a most productive and valuable island. Its sugar, coffee and tobacco crops and its stock farms to day are very large. From a material point of view, Cuba is rich. Its harbors are excellent, and its marine trade immense. The island contains 43,000 square miles, or, it is just about as large as the State of Virginia, and is made up of delightful mountains, valleys and plains.

STUDY TOPICS.—Cuba's need of the Gospel. Providential beginnings. Providential guidance. Magnificent results. Work yet to be done. Hindrances to be overcome. Strategic points.

The People of Cuba.

Columbus discovered Cuba in 1492. About twenty years later, the Spaniards overran the island and enslaved the poor Indian. His new manner of life, coupled with unkind treatment, soon exterminated the Red man. Negro slaves, kidnapped from the African coast, took his place; and to day there are about half a million Negroes, now freed, in the island of Cuba. Among the laboring class are about fifty thousand Chinese Coolies, brought from Amoy between 1847 and 1873. Besides these, are the largest class of all, the Spaniards, of whom some are descendants of early settlers from Spain, and others are later arrivals. There are many Creoles, of mixed blood, and many Americans, doing business in the island. The population, you observe, is a very mixed one, ranging from the Negro and the Coolie to the proud "Hidalgo," or blue-blooded Spanish gentleman. Education is scant in Cuba, not one child in ten having school advantages.

Cuba's Name.

"When Cuba was discovered, it was "christened" in succession Juana, Fernandina, Santiago, and Ave Maria for Christian saints and princes; but all these names have passed away, and the old Indian name of Cuba still survives. This is but suggestive of a religious fact seen in Cuba—that men may be "christened" and thus given the name of Christ, and yet be heathen still; indeed, that a nominal religion can never cope with heathenism.

Cuba has been called "The Pearl," "The Gem," "The Queen." May we not strive to make it truly said of her, the Pearl of greatest price is hers, a polished gem set for the Master's glory; yea, "At thy right hand doth stand the Queen in gold of Ophir."

Its largest city was named by the Spaniards Havana, or "Haven," because of its magnificent harbor. This city has about 250,000 inhabitants, having been founded in 1515, or more than two hundred years before the city of Baltimore. Its houses are largely of stone, with flat roofs, and the city is said to present to the stranger a very picturesque appearance. The island is under the dominion of Spain.

Child's Hymn.

Jesus bids us shine,
With a clear, pure light;
Like a little candle,
Shinning in the night.

In the world is darkness,
So we must shine;
You in your small corner,
And I in mine.

Jesus bids us shine,
First of all for Him,
Well He sees, and knows it,
If our light be dim.

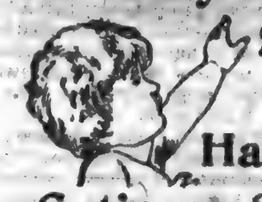
He looks down from Heaven,
To see us shine;
You in your small corner,
And I in mine.

Jesus bids us shine,
Then for all around;
Many kinds of darkness,
In the world are found.

Sin and want, and sorrow,
So we must shine;
You in your small corner,
And I in mine.

I find that doing the will of God leaves me no time for disputing about his plans.—George Macdonald.

A Marvellous Showing.



The U. S. Government, through the Agricultural Department, has been investigating the baking powders for the purpose of informing the public which was the purest, most economical and wholesome.

The published report shows the Royal Baking Powder to be a pure, healthful preparation, absolutely free from alum or any adulterant, and that it is greatly stronger in leavening power than any other brand.

Consumers should not let this valuable information, official and unprejudiced, go unheeded.

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs.

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON, RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its massing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

Prices: Leatherette, 50c; Cloth, 60c.

To this scholarly address, Mrs. H. P. Markham of Durham responded briefly but brightly in behalf of the visiting ladies.

The meeting having been organized, Mrs. J. Hartwell Edwards presided during the election of officers for the session. The following ladies were unanimously elected: President—Miss Fannie E. Heck, Raleigh; First Vice President—Mrs. J. Hartwell Edwards; second Vice-President—Mrs. Frank Bennett, Wadesboro; Secretary—Mrs. H. B. Duffy, Newbern; Treasurer—Miss Eva Liddell, Charlotte.

Miss Heck, after a few remarks thanking the ladies for the honor bestowed upon her by the unanimous election to the presidency of the annual meeting, made her annual address as President of the Woman's Central Committee of Missions.

Taking as the keynote, "Light," she spoke briefly of the call of Christians to be lights in the world and to reflect to the farthest and darkest corners of the earth the Light of the world, the Saviour of men.

From our own favored land where the gospel light is free to all who will but behold it, to the frontier work of our home missionaries, who had added to the churches last year more than 8,000 souls, she passed to the Catholic lands of Mexico, Cuba, Brasil and Italy, needing the purer light of the living Christ, and asked her hearers to peer into the darkness of China and Japan, and into the night of Africa, the habitation of cruelty.

Having thus pictured the need of light, the personal question was asked, first, what each had done as individuals to brighten the world in the past year, then what had been done as societies.

The Central Committee had been in existence nine years. They began work with fourteen societies. There are now 250. The contributions had risen from $500 the first year to $1,000, $2,000, $3,000, $4,000, and almost $5,000 in the Centennial year. In all these years, progress had been constant. This was the first year the words discouragement or retrograde had ever been used. Instead now of bringing a report of $5,000, only $2,574 97 could be reported. What was the cause of this falling off? Hard times! "Times were hard, but heathenism was harder." The reports rendered to the Convention bore little marks of hard times.

The reason might, perhaps, be found in her own serious illness during more than half the year. Much of the time since the work has been carried on in weariness and weakness. She dare not trust herself to allude to all the messages of love that had come to her during her time of sickness and trial—the prayers, the loving words, the sympathetic tears, could never be forgotten, and are an ever strengthening bond between her and her fellow workers.

If hard times were the cause of falling off, however, they must not cause the Master's work to suffer. They must be met and overcome.

As hard time measures, the Societies were asked to look well to old ways before turning to new and untried paths, to collect and report dues of members promptly, and lastly to pledge themselves to double their membership during the coming year, either by adding members of their own church, by organizing a Children's Missionary Band, or forming a Society in another church. Woman's missionary work is not always easy work; if it were so, it would lack the royal signal mark of the Cross. Take up the crosses and receive the crown of highest honor—the honor incomparable of being coworkers with Christ for the salvation of the world.

An itemized account of the vast amount of literature sent out by the Central Committee followed. Letters written, 1400; "Talks" published and sent out 18,000, etc.

Among the hopeful signs for the coming year were the large number of Societies formed and the appointment of a number of Associational Vice-Presidents by the State Board of Missions. The present appointees, to whom it was hoped additions would be made as rapidly as those willing to fill this office in these respective Associations could be found, were: Central Association, Mrs. W. C. Lankford, Wake Forest; Atlantic, Mrs. H. B. Duffy, Newbern; Tar River, Mrs. R. Van Deventer; Pee Dee, Mrs. Frank Bennett, Wadesboro; Sandy Creek, Mrs. H. T. Chapin, Pittsboro; Cape Fear, Mrs. S. M. Robbins, Southport; West Chowan, Miss Grace T. Brown, Murfreesboro; Robeson, Mrs. J. Hartwell Edwards, Fayetteville; Raleigh, Mrs. J. T. Ellington, Clayton; Mt. Zion, Mrs. H. P. Markham, Durham.

ANNUAL REPORT OF WOMAN'S CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

In the absence of Mrs. J. A. Briggs, Corresponding Secretary of the Central Committee, her report was read by Mrs. M. T. Norris of Raleigh. The totals of that report are as follows:—

Foreign Missions	$1,045 71
Home Missions	299 67
State Missions	494 60
Foreign Mission debt	302 90
Education	60.79
Christmas offering	144.98
Orphanage	190.75
Expense fund	8 17
Centennial fund	6 53
Education, Louisville	5.00
Sunday-schools	53
Relief Fund	4.56
Value missionary boxes	167.80
Total	$2,574.97

Three minute reports were then made by the representatives of the Societies present. A full report of these is not now before us, but suffice it to say here that almost without exception there was promise of larger work in the coming year. It was noted, too, that a number of the Societies making the largest reports had added a second meeting to the usual monthly meeting, this being especially for prayer, thus reviving the woman's prayer-meetings which were such a source of blessing in the days of our mothers and grandmothers.

It was gratifying to note also that a larger number of societies than ever reported boxes of clothing sent to fourteen missionaries. In one or two instances this "blessed work" was urged upon others by those who had tried it.

The second session Friday afternoon was opened by devotional exercises participated in by a large number of ladies. A chain of prayer was led by the District Secretary of the Woman's Mission Work of the Methodist church, followed by Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. Bennett.

Dr. Tichenor, Secretary of the Home Board S. B. C., being introduced, addressed the meeting on various aspects of the Home Mission work. He called attention to the remarkable fact that while the world had rung, and rightly rung with the wonderful triumphs of the gospel in the Sandwich Islands, the work done by Southern Baptists in the Indian Territory had exceeded it in the shortness of the time in which it had been accomplished and equalled it in the numbers converted. This fact was unknown to Baptists at large or overlooked by them. Dr. Tichenor had spoken to women's meetings often enough to know that they kept strictly to time, and the fear of overstepping the time allotted him made him stop before his limit was reached.

The theme of Home Missions was taken up by Mrs. Thomas Franklin of Charlotte in a bright and sparkling paper on box packing. Mrs. Franklin's society had first packed a box, and she advised all other societies to go and do likewise. She dwelt at some length on what not to send, and told of a box filled with old newspapers, worn-out clothing, and last of all, an old silk hat. What to send was then told—good clothes, good shoes, and last but not least, something nice for the children.

Mrs. Frank Bennett, Wadesboro, in an essay, "A Society in the Country," gave many practical and helpful suggestions as to how the work might be carried on in scattered neighborhoods. As a practical worker among the Societies of her Association, Mrs. Bennett's words carried the weight of experience added to earnestness. She said that where there was a will a Society in the country may be made a great blessing both to missions and the church to which the members belong.

Mrs. J. Q. Adams of Wadesboro handled very thoughtfully her subject, "Spirituality in Missions." Spirituality was the key note of success in all mission, both home and foreign; it was therefore the great and first need of all our Societies. Without it the work must fail.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

The Eastern Union of the Pee Dee Association will convene with the Spring Hill church, Saturday before the fifth Sunday at 10 o'clock. Following are the subjects for discussion:

1. Should we teach our distinctive doctrines in our Sunday schools? Opened by A. A. McMillan.

2. Our young people—(1) Importance of developing them. V. D. Quakenbush. (2) Can this be done by societies? and if so, what relation should they sustain to the churches? A. Johnson.

3. 1894 mistakes and encouragements. T. S. Wright.

4. 1895 possibilities and responsibilities. J. B. Covington.

5. General discussion of the work before us as an Association.

Delegates going by railroad will be met at Laurinburg if they will notify Malcom Monroe, Fontcol, N. C., when they will get to Laurinburg.

As we will consider the work before us for the ensuing year, it is very important that all the churches be represented. Please be on the ground by 10 o'clock Saturday morning. L. JOHNSON, for Com.

Brown's Iron Bitters

In a unsolicited letter (June 29, 1894.) she writes: "About 9 or 10 years ago I was broken down in health and suffered from extreme nervousness, and severe neuralgic pains afflicted different parts of my body—sometimes the dreadful pain would be in my eyes and head, sometimes in my hand and often in my shoulders and neck. I took many remedies, but found none like Brown's Iron Bitters. I have used a few bottles every year since. I often praise it to others."

The Sunday-school Society.

Putting a great truth mildly is to say that no other one agency has done, or is now doing so much for the establishment and improvement of Sunday-schools in this country as the American Baptist Publication Society. Through all the years the Society has managed to keep in advance of everybody in this important and most hopeful department of Christian effort. How many large, efficient, influential Sunday-schools owe their present efficiency, directly or indirectly, to this great Society, we have no means of knowing. How many such schools, North, South, East, and West, are indebted, for the beginning of their existence, to this same truly national Society? How many poor, struggling schools are today being helped by its donations? Who can tell? May all such Sunday-schools grow into great and still greater usefulness, and may the Society's ability for this blessed work ever increase!

Gastralgia and Chills Cured.

DOVESVILLE, S. C., March 15th, 1894.

Dear Sir:—Yours of 3d to hand, and in reply would say that the Electropoise I bought of you in December last was for my wife, who has for several years had very severe attacks of what the physicians called "Gastralgia;" these attacks did not yield to any medicine, but would simply take their course, causing the greatest suffering, lasting from one to three weeks at a time; she had about the first of December last the worst attack of any before. She had for some time before felt that the Electropoise would be beneficial to her, and desired me to purchase one for her. She commenced its use a few days after it was received, and has been greatly benefitted by it, and would not give it up for any consideration. She has not had any attack of the trouble since its use.

About ten days ago while on a visit to friends, she was taken with a violent chill, followed by severe headache, and pain in the lower spine, and considerable fever. It was necessary to come home (a distance of nine miles) and she went immediately to bed, using the Electropoise faithfully, from which she obtained a good rest, with no fever next day and no recurrence of the chill, and on the third day she was up and attending to household duties. She feels that her health has greatly improved by the use of the Electropoise.

Hoping that you may meet with still greater success, I remain

Yours truly, J. F. WILSON.

DIED.

BENNETT—Mrs. Nancy Bennett quietly passed over the river of death on the morning of November 26th, 1894. She was about sixty-nine years of age, and for many years was a consistent member of the Morehead City Baptist church. She leaves a son and one daughter and a number of grandchildren to mourn their loss. May God comfort them in their sorrow. BENNETT A. FORTES.

PINER—On Saturday evening, Dec. 1st, the soul of Edwin Piner returned to God who gave it. He was a believer in Christ, and we trust that our loss is his eternal gain. He leaves a young wife and a large circle of relatives and friends, to all of whom we extend our deepest sympathy, and commend them to God, who alone can heal their broken hearts.

SAMUEL J. PORTER.

ARTHUR—Mrs. Abbie Arthur, wife of our beloved brother James Arthur, breathed her last on Monday morning, Dec. 3d. She died trusting in her Saviour, and we are consoled by the thought that she is now at rest. She was about forty years of age, and for a number of years was a faithful member of Morehead City Baptist church. She leaves a husband, four children and a number of relatives and friends to whom we would say, the separation will be short, if you only take her Saviour to be your Saviour.

SAMUEL J. PORTER.

HOOD—Deacon S. H. Hood was born March 3d, 1822, and died at his home in Selma, Johnston county, N. C., October 17th, 1894, aged seventy-two years, seven months and fourteen days. Brother Hood professed hope in Christ when a young man, and was baptized into the fellowship of Hepzibah church, Wake county, by Rev. Berry Horton. He came to Selma church in 1874, by letter, and was elected deacon soon after being received into fellowship. He was faithful in all the relations of life, endeavoring always to discharge his duty as best he knew. He was devoted to his church, and she loved him in return for his devotion to her highest interests.

He was married twice, first to Miss Nancy M. Underhill, Nov. 20th, 1889, to Miss Mollie A. Hatcher. Several children were born of the first marriage, most of whom are now living to mourn the loss of a good father. He leaves quite a number of grand children also, some of whom are just merging into young manhood and womanhood. The widow, children, grandchildren, church and many friends drop tears together in this bereavement; but we sorrow in hope that our brother was prepared for his change, and is now at rest in heaven. We are seeking submission to the will of him who is incapable of making a mistake, and too good to do any thing not right.

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to remove from our Society by death, sister Bettie Ulrich, a cheerful and liberal contributor, a faithful friend and Christian woman; therefore be it

Resolved 1. That we be bow in humble submission to God's will, and strive so to live that we may feel to say, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

Resolved 2. That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved husband and tender little ones, and commend them to him who is too wise to err and too good to be unkind.

Resolved 3. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Society, a copy be sent to the family of the deceased, and to the BIBLICAL RECORDER and Henderson Gold Leaf for publication.

Done by order of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Baptist church of Henderson, Dec. 3d, 1894, and submitted by the committee.

Saved Her Life.

Mrs. C. J. WOOLDRIDGE, of Wortham, Texas, saved the life of her child by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"One of my children had Croup. The case was attended by our physician, and was supposed to be well under control. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it strangling. It had nearly ceased to breathe. Realizing that the child's alarming condition had become possible in spite of the medicines given, I reasoned that such remedies would be of no avail. Having part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses, at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given, the child's breathing grew easier, and, in a short time, she was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not hesitate to say that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved her life."

DIFFERENT TIMES bring different methods. The big, bulky pills such as our grandfathers had to put up with won't do to-day. Medical science has gone beyond them. It has given us something better—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets; tiny as mustard seeds, but more effective than anything you can take. That's because their methods are more natural. They have a peculiar strengthening or tonic effect on the lining membranes of the intestines, which gives a permanent cure. They prevent, relieve, and put an end to Biliousness, Constipation, Jaundice, Dizziness, Sour Stomach, Sick or Bilious Headaches, Indigestion, and every like disorder.

"Incurable" cases of Catarrh are cured, perfectly and permanently, by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. The makers of this medicine guarantee it to benefit or cure, or money refunded. By all dealers in medicines.

A Christmas Surprise.

"There ain't goin' to be any Christmas
At our house," said Little May,
"For pop has lost lots of money,
And we've moved so far away
That Santa Claus cannot find us;
And here there's no ice nor snow,
And over the grass and gravel
His reindeer could not go.

"But I'll hang up my longest stocking Right here in this corner," said she,
"And if Santa Claus comes down the chimney,
My! how surprised he will be!"
That evening a dear little playmate
Stole in through the kitchen way,
And put in the stocking some goodies
And toys for the sleeping May.

Who awoke in the early morning,
And sprang from her bed with a leap,
For into the hanging stocking
She wanted to take a peep;
And then there were tears and laughter,
And shoutings—as you've surmised—
For Santa Claus found his way southward,
And May was the one surprised!

—Josephine Pollard.

Beginning Somewhere.

There is always a "somewhere" we can begin our work for Christ and the church. The work may not be just what we would like; but if it be faithfully performed, it may lead to results of which we could never have dreamed.

The Westminster teacher tells the following story of a young lady who had just united with God's people, thus consecrating herself to the Lord's service:

She was asked to take a class in Sabbath-school, but replied, "I cannot teach; I have had no experience."

"One has to begin somewhere," remarked the superintendent, with a smile of encouragement.

And Miss A. began "somewhere."

She took the lowest class in the school, not the youngest, but the roughest and most undesirable—a class of street arabs. They were dirty, and rough, as uninteresting to the masses as Rembrandt's first dull picture at Rotterdam. But Miss A. earnestly, patiently and sweetly began to sow seed in those young, untutored hearts. Faithfully she worked, trustingly she waited. And the years rolled by, six of them.

At the beginning of the seventh there was a happy party at the tea-table at Miss A.'s home one evening. The dear old superintendent who had advised Miss A. to begin "somewhere" was there, and so were three fine-looking young men, each one a professed Christian.

They were all going away, one "beyond the sea," as assistant to a young missionary, to help in active Christian work; another as general care-taker and cherry companion of an invalid youth belonging to a wealthy, but irreligious family, and sow seeds of immortal life in his soul; the third to enter a college preparatory to study for the ministry. At last the supper was over, and the good-byes were to be spoken.

"Good bye Miss A." said one; "God bless you for your goodness to me."

"I shall always pray for you, Miss A.," said another; "you are the best friend I ever had. The very best except my Lord and Master."

"I shall climb as far as I can, Miss A." said the third, "both for your sake and for the sake of the Christ who died for me."

Their tones were tremulous with tears, and their eyes were dim. Then the superintendent and Miss A. were left alone, and the former said, "You began your work on rather unpromising material, my dear friend, but only God knows where it will end."

Exchange.

Never Knew Him.

A touching story is told of the child of a well-known French painter. The little girl lost her sight in infancy, and her blindness was supposed to be incurable. A famous oculist in Paris, however, performed an operation on her eyes and restored her sight.

Her mother had long been dead, and her father had been her only friend and companion. When she was told that her blindness could be cured, her one thought was that she could see him; and when the cure was complete and the bandages were removed, she ran to him, and, trembling, pored over his features, shutting her eyes now and then and passing her fingers over his face, as if to make sure that it was he.

The father had a noble head and presence, and his every look and motion were watched by his daughter with the keenest delight. For the first time his constant tenderness and care seemed real to her. If he caressed her, or even looked upon her kindly, it brought tears to her eyes.

"To think," she cried, holding his hand close in hers, "that I had this father so many years, and never knew him!"

How many of us are like the little blind girl!

How many young men just entering life have made so close friendships at school or elsewhere, because some bodily effect or poverty has soured their tempers and made them cynical and suspicious! It is their lot, they think, to go alone through the world to find woman shallow and men shams. Luck is against them. They will have nothing to do with friends; they will fight their own way, and ask help of none!

Women who know themselves to be plain and unattractive often feel this morbid jealousy and bitterness; they case themselves in a pride and reserve which keep their lives more solitary than could any prison walls.

The eyes of the soul are shut. If they would open them, they would see that the world is full of true and helpful friends waiting to work and be happy with them.

They would see unentered chances in their own lives, however poor or sorrowful they may be, for healthy and cheerful work, for hearty good-will and love and comradeship.

And under and above and around their ungrateful, discontented lives, they would be conscious of an Almighty love and tenderness, holding them as the sunshine holds the floating mote of dust.

The oldest and wisest of us—scholars, men of business, women of the world—go through life like the blind child, never seeing the hand of Him who sets the sun to light our steps, who feeds us day by day, who makes ready a home for us hereafter.

But this blindness of the soul, whatever men may say about it, is not beyond a cure. We have but to seek the Great Physician, crying with one of old, "Lord, that I might receive my sight!" At His touch our darkness will vanish, and with the new light we shall find ourselves in a new world.

Then, like the happy French child, we shall be ready to exclaim, "To think I had this Father so many years, and never knew Him!"—Youth's Companion.

Health Hints.

A prominent physician says that children's school lunches should not be put up in a lunch basket or tin box, as unpleasant odors always cling to a much-used receptacle. He recommends a fresh, clean napkin wrapped neatly about the food and a paste board box to hold it all. The box can then be thrown away after it has been used once or twice.

To cure a felon, take sassafras bark and grind it—in the coffee mill or otherwise—stir into a poultice with cold water, and apply to the felon. Keep wet by putting in cold water; that is, do not let it dry out. In a short time the felon will be killed.

For a cough, boil one ounce of flax-seed in a pint of water, strain and add a little honey, one ounce of rock candy, and the juice of three lemons; mix and boil well. Drink as hot as possible.

When a person is strangling, make him swallow the white of an egg, but do not beat it. This will almost certainly dislodge the obstruction unless lodged in the trachea.

If you keep your milk and cream in the cellar along with turnips, potatoes and rotten pumpkins, and have no other place to keep milk and cream, sell your cows.

AN OPEN LETTER.

DEAR BRETHREN: It is now time to order Sunday-school Supplies for the coming year, and we wish to suggest that you send your order to the nearest House of the AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY, for the following reasons:

1. The periodicals of the American Baptist Publication Society are the best in the world, sound in doctrine, able in exposition, unexcelled in workmanship.

2. They are published by your own society—by Baptists for Baptists, and on Baptist presses. Only men of recognized ability are employed in their preparation. The Society is not a training school for writers and we do not regard Baptist children as subjects to be practiced upon. Only the best is good enough for Baptists, and the mature talent of the East, West, South, and North is demanded for the work.

3. All the profits of the Society go to mission work—distributed in localities where help is most needed.

4. The Society is one of our great Baptist missionary organizations, fully equipped to do its own work, owning its building and material, and doing its own manufacturing.

5. The Society has established branch Houses at convenient points, bringing its complete stock to your very doors. Help to make it an efficient helper in the Master's cause. It is yours—stand by it.

6. It is possible to tear down a grand institution to build up others, but the business sagacity of such procedure remains to be demonstrated. Economy points to Baptist unity in work instead of division and increased expense.

Lastly, dear brother, we ask your active interest in our success. Patronize the Society, contribute to its Missionary and Bible work, attend its annual meetings, and help to conduct it. It asks for your wisdom, your advice, and your prayers, to extend its influence for the Master.

Yours fraternally,

Charles H. Dana Sec'y

THERE is consolation for all troubled law-makers: if they do what they promised to do, no matter whether it is for good or bad, they cannot be blamed. The people who elect a man to make laws, thereby declare that they are willing to sustain him in so far as he does what he told them he would do, before election. A man who does less than he promises need not anticipate further trusts; one who does more, is either a philanthropist or indiscreet.

Representatives need never be troubled about their votes, if they vote as they promised they would. And it is a truth that questions do not come before legislative bodies until they have been passed upon by the electors of the law makers. When a law-maker seems in doubt, we begin to suspect him of wishing to do what he knows his electors would not have him do.

The people will tolerate mistakes of their own making; they will suffer without rebuking, if by their own orders they suffer; but they will not tolerate misrepresentation, and they will rebuke perversion or disregard of their trusts. If a representative seeks to allow the people to rule through him, that is all that can be asked; and if such a one does not receive the plaudit, it will be because the people are less grateful for faithful service, than jealous of their interests.

PLANS—the Baltimore plan by bankers, and the government plan by Carlisle and his aides—for the relief of the present financial conditions and ultimate restoration of general financial stability, have been the topic of much recent discussion.

It is a good rule not to remove or change anything until you can do so for the better. There are ten thousand people who have plans; and some of them may be good and wise,—but we do not know about that. However, we do know that the bankers and the government have tried at least two plans with dismal success; and they have also promised relief after the tariff was determined, vainly for the most part. And we think the peoples' plan ought to be tried next, even if the bankers think they ought to have another chance.

No one doubts but that most of the people have set their faith upon free coinage of silver at the ratio of sixteen to one; and we do not doubt but that if this plan were given a fair trial the people would be easier, whether finances were or not.

There are several things that ought to be written down on this subject of finance. One is that the English should be allowed to get just as alarmed as they please, and the money lenders and brokers too, if they choose. They would soon learn that it doesn't pay to create panics. Another is that whether they know or not, it is the privilege of the people to say what system of finance this Nation shall adopt. They can bear the blame; they have to endure the consequences any way. And another is that this government of ours will always be able to pay its debts, whether the bankers and brokers think so or not.

IT IS bad enough that saloons are permitted to sell whiskey and other drinks. It is revolting to think of respectable people allowing bar keepers to set up in their community, knowing that they are a temptation and a snare. But what terms can be employed to express the indignant sensation that one feels on hearing that a father and mother have given a reception and served punch so freely that several "gentlemen" were intoxicated! Can they denounce the saloon, if drunkard children bring their gray hairs in sorrow to the grave? How pitiable weaklings who took punch because the conventionalities of society make it necessary that they seem to appreciate such things, whether or not! Can the thoughtless women who served punch blush that men with whom they have frequent intercourse were intoxicated? Receptions at which punch is served are conservators of that liberal sentiment that shields hell's chief door, the saloon. Drinkers of egg-nog Christmas morning are desolate fathers of prodigals, when the snows that do not melt have settled upon them. If the fathers and mothers will take the stand against liquor and tobacco that they ought to take, the legislators will not have to trouble themselves.

As the matter is, however, it is necessary that something be done by law-makers; and it is the duty of every father and mother to try to impress this need upon the man who has been chosen to represent them. If the drunkards of fifteen years hence could pass in line before the Legislature about to meet, there is not a man there but would vote to drive every liquor seller from the State; for in the line there would be some one, whom each legislator now looks upon as promising usefulness, degraded and an outcast.

IF IT is true that scientists have found a remedy for diphtheria, every father and mother on earth has reason to thank God.

No more touching letter has ever come to the RECORDER box than a recent one bearing the sympathetic expressions of a community to "those bereft by diphtheria." The epidemic has been severe in many sections of the country. Every year it has been the harbinger of cruel and untimely deaths in many homes; and shadows hang this day over thousands of hearts that would be as bright as the sunshine if the little one were emptying his stocking.

The name of the remedy is anti-toxin; and the papers say it has cured eighty five per cent. of the cases in which it has been used. God grant that the hopes now reposed in it may not be vain.

THE United States has enough of long speeches and dilly-dallying,—at least, some people think that is what actions have suggested. The fourteen hour speech in the Senate during the financial discussion, and the others that were made for delay rather than to persuade, to wear out rather than to win, cost more dearly than appears.

In the Senate, as matters stand at this writing, a strong minority is about as safe as a weak majority. It doesn't require many Senators to prevent action; and in this day and time the minority does not decline to try to rule, just because it hasn't most of the votes. A closure rule is needed, is needed on general principles. It may be very pleasant to Senators to speak to empty seats, but the general run of folks who have to pay for that kind of representation do not relish it. A rule by which debate can be closed as soon as all phases of a question have been presented—a closure rule—ought to be adopted.

THIS Christmas might bring joy to every man, woman and child. It will probably not, but if every reader of these lines will do something for some one whom he has reason to think is not quite so happy as he himself is, it will be a merry week to many now looking forward gloomily, and merrier to many who anticipate only the joy of holiday.

Long years ago when people had more thought for God's creatures, it was a custom to make a gift even to the birds on Christmas day; and many a farmer used to lay the Christmas shock of wheat upon his roof. Is it to be wondered that in those days there was less care for the morrow and the dollar was looked upon as a medium rather than a master? Is it to be wondered that consciences were then clearer, hearts lighter and times easier? When people are so kind that they feel not only for their needy fellowmen but even for God's birds, hard times cannot play a great part.

Many a person would [illegible] something, if he could do it grandly. One longs for a million dollars in order that he may show people how to make princely gifts. But this kind of longing (it seldom becomes giving) does not ease the world. The instrumentality through which the world must be made better is the humble kindness that does its best, that looks out in a small way for the hungry sparrow.

A chirping bird makes your heart lighter; consciousness of having set a soul aglow with grateful joy is more joyous than songs of birds. Do something for some one who does not expect it; don't try to do much.

"The healing of the world
Is in the ceaseless aiming. A single star
Seems nothing, but a thousand scattered stars
Break up the night and make it beautiful."

The Young People's Movement—A Prophecy.

BY REV. R. VAN DEVENTER.

Will it soon spend itself and give place to some other experiment, or has it come to stay? Has it a mission? If so, and God is in it, it will accomplish that for which it came. Any organization that stands for "loyalty to Christ at all times and in all things," and that can be kept loyal to Christ in all things and at all times, can hardly fail to be a strong auxiliary to the churches.

The terms used, "Culture for Service," "For Christ and the Church—Unification of Baptist Young People" embody the great principles for which the movement stands. If this can be accomplished, the Future will thank the Past for the large foundation prepared for the glorious structure.

WORK WITH AND FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

If the work were being done by any part of the church, there would be no need for another wheel within the existing wheel. The Sunday-school with its efficiency is not doing it, the present organization of the churches does not meet the demands. Before us stretches a field uncultivated.

The time has come, and it seems the impulse is now being felt, which promises rich reward. A door large and effectual is opening; may we have grace to enter and reap for the Master.

Why not work for the old people? Dr. Gambrell said, "Some of us have grown old and gray trying to change old men and women. We have buried them, but we have not changed them."

It is very difficult to bend a tree after it is grown, but easy enough to do so when it is a sapling.

Brethren who did not enjoy the advantages of the young of to-day, and who were not encouraged to enter active service, express their regrets, and feel that it is too late for them to begin.

We have heard about the "dead-line," how preachers are shelved because they have ceased to grow, and are not trying to keep up in the race. Preachers are not the only class that reaches this dangerous point. Preachers know that while the pulpit may settle into inanity, the pew may reach the point where it feels it can take no part in the work, and do nothing towards pushing forward the cause of the Lord. The pastor's opportunity has come to put information and activity into the pew; may we have grace to seize it. "Feed my lambs" is the command. If it be necessary to gather them in a special fold for feeding, let it be done until they are ready to feed with the flock.

WORK TO MAKE LOYAL CHURCH-MEMBERS

That there is weakness at this point, and no fort can be stronger than its weakest point, is evident. Many have no firm, strong conviction. They drift into Baptist churches, and an adverse current may take them out. They are in Baptist churches because of circumstances, and other circumstances will take them to other churches. Let us stop the drifting.

The complaint comes that many keep their church letters in their trunks, others go to the more fashionable church, while others lose all interest in the church. It might be well to seek the cause and the remedy. You say you have a contempt for a Metho-Episco-Presby-Baptist. How can we expect our young people to be faithful to that which does not appeal to their conviction, and to have a zeal for that about which they know nothing. We should not blame them so much for assuming the beg your-pardon attitudes for being a Baptist, while they are ignorant of their noble lineage, the noblest under heaven.

The masses of our people, old and young, do not know what part the Baptists took in the Reformation on the continent, in England, and the struggle they made for religious liberty in the new world. Let them know when the world was bowing to the Pope, how the Baptists firmly stood for the supreme authority of God's Word. When it was counted a crime to dissent from the church, the Baptists insisted, even unto death, for the right of conscience in matters spiritual. When toleration was offered, the Baptists would have nothing but soul liberty. Let our young people know these things, let them be made conscious of the great cloud of witnesses that compass them about, and they will be self-respecting and loyal to the faith once delivered them.

FEDERATION.

Alienation is feared. The estrangement of our young people is prophesied. Activities will be turned into other channels. The history of the movement has not chronicled such results. It is felt by those who have tried the movement that it will not draw away. Were it in the hands of those who are not loyal to the churches, there might be danger, but so long as the Convention shall give shape to its policy and direct the work, there will be no alienation. There is need of our people, old and young, being drawn to the churches and their work. While we are casting the net out in the deep, let us not forget to cast it about those who need being drawn into closer sympathy with the work. We need their help; inspire them to put their shoulder to the wheel and push all together. We need their enthusiasm; encourage them to rally around the standard.

The social life of our times tends to draw away. Many influences are at work to neutralize and even destroy Christian influence. Let the churches come to the help of the tempted and aid them in gaining the victory over the enemy. We should be willing to do as much for our young people as the world is doing against them, to make as earnest an effort to draw them to the churches as is being made to draw them away.

There are organizations pretending to be Christian, but they are more social than Christian, that are attracting our young people at the expense of the churches. Here young Christians are invited to be trained for church work, but the training unfits them for local church work. To turn our young people to these institutions, means future paralysis of the denominational activities. It was the desire of Paul "that ye may with one mind and one mouth glorify God." This ideal state will never be realized until the churches do more training, until they do more inculcating. The young people's movement promises to do this, and instead of alienation there will be federation.

In Old Virginia.

It has never been my purpose, dear RECORDER, to desert you, who have so often been kind to me; nor surrender the tie of tender interest binding me to the Old North State. But you know events sometimes have an iron logic and often must do the things we would not. Thus it happened that my pen has so long delayed its message of news and sentiment. Do not again say: "We must give up our own Henry W. Battle!" it made me sad. In Old Virginia I am happy, with a North Carolinian presiding over heart and home,—with North Carolinians in Richmond on one side, and in Suffolk and Norfolk upon the other. And if I would realize the tie, binding so closely that State is almost blended with State, I have but to visit one of the many battle-fields near my home, and mark how North Carolina sowed Virginia soil thick with heroic seed.

The truth is, in the geography of the Master's kingdom, State lines, save for economic purposes, are but the conveniences of speech, and not the boundaries of territorial possession. Let me delight myself by the thought that I am, in a very real sense, noble North Carolina's still.

May I tell you some things about your possessions in Virginia? The first thing I would mention would be men. You call to mind the fine poem on "What Constitutes a State?" Yes, and you remember it is men. Manhood is both the source and the measure of statehood. When, recently, a great representative body of the Baptists of the Old Dominion was in session, I gazed upon the vast throng of wonderfully gifted and useful men, and propounded to myself the question: whence came they? the question, as by the magic of a magician's spell, summoned before the mind's eye a majestic procession of States—far off Pennsylvania, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama—and, as they swept past (while the eloquent F. B. Beale was speaking) I marked that each State turned a searching glance full of pride and tenderness upon the audience. North Carolina in her regal loveliness wore no blush! Let me tell you, there is no more Christlike spirit, nor more faithful minister of the Word, in all Virginia than W. L. Wright; there is no more zealous son of genius than L. G. Broughton; there is no more progressive mind nor braver heart than J. F. Love; there is no more consecrated and successful laborer in the vineyard than W. F. Watson; there is no nobler friend and brother than Editor Speight—and if to the number, my pen has made too small, be added those sons of sanctified thunder, J. S. Dill and J. J. Hall, the expression of tender pride I fancied on North Carolina's countenance is abundantly justified. She greets her noble sister, Virginia (mother of Presidents and Baptist preachers), and whispers: "My children and your children, my God and your God!"

Again, it seems to me that RICHMOND belongs, in a peculiar and very precious sense, to North Carolina and to the entire South. It has been well said, "Richmond is distinguished as the historic metropolis of the South and as the necropolis of many of its noblest heroes." Upon this subject some of us will not permit our hearts to coin their emotions into words, before a Richmond audience, for fear our listeners might serenely accept whatever is said as an attempt to gild refined gold or add perfume to the violet—(their gold and their violet.) But, beyond doubt, great is Richmond on the James! Great in her splendid citizenship; great in her gems of architecture and facilities for commerce; great as a centre of religious enterprise penetrating the whole world; great as the select fane of learning. Here Southern youth may turn from printed page to history in river and sod, poetry in stone, philosophy in example, and inspiration in memories that cannot die! The other day it was my privilege to be a guest at the hospitable board of the Young Woman's College of Richmond, which is the splendid successor to the Richmond Female Institute. Dr. James Nelson, as president of the institution, is eminently fitted for his high and responsible position. And about him he has wisely gathered a corps of instructors of unsurpassed excellence, in all the departments of a thoroughly equipped college. No brighter, happier, company of school girls ever sat down to do simple justice to a bountiful repast than that I saw at the Woman's College. It was really delightful to see with what consummate grace and infinite relish they came from astronomy, with quadrants and telescopes, to gastronomy, with knives and forks. The President said: "There has not been a single case of fatal sickness in the boarding department of this institution during all the years." Yet the standard of scholarship is now exceedingly high, and two, at least, of the Professors of Richmond College are regularly engaged instructors in the Woman's College. If North Carolinians will send their daughters out of the State to be educated, let them consider beautiful Richmond and the Woman's College.

One of the most interesting gatherings I have attended was the recent at Richmond. I was especially pleased by the sentiment of unwavering loyalty to the local church which pervaded the entire meeting. The inviolable dignity and authority of the New Testament church was reiterated again and again—and the entire movement claimed to be but a new phase of its heaven-ordained activities. The Convention seemed to me to be a success; and I am among those who believe that this mighty and far-reaching ground swell of young religious enthusiasm can be so directed as to be made one of the most potent and blessed agencies of the age. Oh for zeal and wisdom!

THE PRESIDENT OF RICHMOND COLLEGE!

who will it be? Good timber in sight, and willing to be shaped into form by a single stroke of the Trustees. When that stroke comes (and it is impending) somebody is going to feel hurt, and somebody is going to feel—not hurt. May the grand old college go on her way prospering and rejoicing!

Pardon so long a letter—as I do not write often, bear with me, and accept assurances of my abiding love for the Old North State and all her interests.

Afterthoughts About the Charlotte Convention.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—After reaching the terminus of the railroad, and having a day's journey to make by private conveyance to reach home, I find myself shut in this morning by the abundance of rain and swollen streams. During the past night the lightnings have flashed, the thunders roared, and the rains poured in torrents, and as I am shut in, at least for the day, I will give some of my impressions of our Convention in Charlotte.

I have occasionally attended the sessions of our State Conventions for twenty years, and I unhesitatingly say this was the best session I have ever attended. The spirit of the meeting was good throughout. I am sure I never saw the brethren more courteous and kind to each other. Certainly Bro. Marsh never presided with more becoming dignity, fairness and impartiality than at this session. The Convention did a wise thing in continuing him in the chair.

The speeches, taken as a whole, were the best I have ever heard. I was charmed with Bro. Hufham's excellent speech on Wake Forest College. While he was delivering that address I overheard Bro. Tichenor say to another brother, "that is one of the best speeches I ever heard."

Then surely Brother Skinner was never more himself than at Charlotte. He did so pleasantly remind those of us that are younger that we don't know it all. It is a good thing now and then to have just the right man to put on the breaks slightly.

Bro. Stringfield made an earnest, soul-moving appeal for the education of our daughters. My heart was with him. We ought to do as much for our girls as we are doing for our boys.

All our own brethren of the Convention who spoke at all spoke well. The Tryon street church must be a good audience-room, or there was something in the atmosphere, for certainly the brethren never did better.

I was much pleased with the prominent part our older brethren took in the work of the Convention. I have been fearful there was a growing tendancy upon the part of the older brethren to surrender the work of the Convention into the hands of the young brethren, and that young heads and young hearts might run wild.

Then the visiting brethren were in good trim. I never before heard brethren Bitting and Bell make better speeches, but Brother Kerfoot of the Seminary made a great speech, and I am sure our Seminary has never been more ably represented at our Convention, when I was present, than at Charlotte. I have heard Drs. Broaden, Boyce, Whitsitt and Robertson, but none, in my opinion, ever surpassed Bro. Kerfoot. He made many of us feel that if it were possible we would yet take a course in the Seminary.

It was a great pleasure to see and hear our returned missionaries. It brings us into a deeper and broader sympathy with them and their work.

Surely our Convention was never in a more benevolent spirit. The brethren, and some of the sisters, too, seemed to realize that "It is more blessed to give than to receive." But the giving may have been done in rather too much of a high pressure atmosphere.

The postponement of a State organization for our young people a year was wise and timely. It is to be hoped by the organiza-

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

HELP FOREIGN MISSIONS: It is a good way to end and begin the year. Do not try to make a princely gift; a princely sacrifice is much better. God help North Carolina to do all that is expected of it this year!

REMEMBER the Home Board debt and the Convention's promise of $500. That is a small amount to ask of 175,000 people who have received the greatest gift ever given. One might raise it in an hour. It will be raised quickly if every one will make a small contribution.

THE Baptist Woman's College ought to be built and endowed. But this does not mean that the institutions, in the hands of Baptists in North Carolina, for the higher education of young women, are not as good, generally speaking, and better, from a Baptist standpoint, than any similar institutions in the State. We have never intentionally implied that they were not; but it does no harm to state the truth squarely, and it may remove some unwholesome impressions.

THE RECORDER has been urging the importance of doctrinal preaching. We believe that the Baptists of North Carolina, while many of them are ardent, useful Baptists, as a class stand in great need of indoctrination. The fierceness of modern criticism and the danger of the tendency to liberalism and interdenominationalism make it especially desirable that Baptists be thoroughly Baptist. The RECORDER is glad to announce that its next issue will begin a series of straightforward doctrinal editorials, to which we invite the especial attention of all our readers.

THIS is the last RECORDER of 1894. This number is mailed Monday in order that our printers and the rest of the office may have Christmas week all to themselves and their families. The next RECORDER will be dated January 9th, 1895.

God has been good to us this year; and we are deeply grateful to him. We thank him especially for appreciative, sympathetic readers, whose kind words have often come as a benediction in time of doubt and misgiving.

THE RECORDER wishes every reader a joyful Christmas and a New Year rich with the goodness and mercy of our Heavenly Father.

IT WAS brought out at the Convention that that worthy object, Ministerial Relief, is not given a place for acknowledgments in Associational letters. Mere mention of this fact ought to be sufficient to insure the setting apart of a column for such acknowledgments.

Many of the pastors confess reluctance in mentioning the worthiness of ministerial relief to their churches; and while we do not see that this is the proper view of the matter, it may be well to urge that some active layman be secured to work for this object in each church.

We do not believe that any gifts will do more good to giver and receiver or please God better than gifts for the faithful servants, whom the Master has called to the ranks of the honorably retired. The widows and the children of workers gone before, they who shared the servant's toil, who gave him hope and strength, appeal as strongly to our sympathies and as fully deserve our aid as any human beings can.

THE RECORDER has perfected arrangements whereby every reader of this paper who sends us enough money to advance his or her subscription up to May, 1895, will secure a Baptist Almanac.

Every Baptist ought to have this Almanac. In addition to the usual features, there are statistics very valuable to Baptists; and the leading article, "The Baptists and the Quakers of North Carolina were the chief supporters of the Regulation and the heroes of the Battle of Alamance, May 16th, 1771," by Dr. Cobb, ought to be preserved by all who take pride in the history of their denomination.

Every one who sends us a new subscriber on our nineteen weeks fifty cents offer will get an Almanac free.

Every new nineteen weeks subscriber who sends fifty cents and a one cent stamp for postage, will get an Almanac free.

Now let us see how many homes we can put the RECORDER and the Baptist Almanac into. Help us; it will help you.

The RECORDER nineteen weeks goes from Dec. 19th until MAY 1st, 1895! And a first class Almanac besides!!

This arrangement is limited. Send now.

THE WIDENING PROSPECT.

When Christ bade his followers, in that last great commission, to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, sweeping though the terms must have seemed, and though manifestly superhuman the task, "all the world" at that time was not so great a field as to-day's prospect presents. Nineteen centuries of Christianity have not touched but half the world.

The Apostles were not overwhelmed, but on the other hand were incited to action by the task that they were facing. They were too ardent for doing, to lose time calculating when the work would be finished or how. They knew the Saviour was with them always; and they had enough of faith in him to work hopefully facing all odds.

With each recurring year reports of progress are made. There is no doubt of the progress; but it does not require more than a look to discover that one hundred years of missions have not been more than a beginning. But we can thank God that the foot print has been made.

We so often forget that the most densely populated districts in the world are in outer darkness, and that it is hard to penetrate them. China cannot be said to know the influence of the gospel. Four hundred million people can scarcely be expected to feel the influence of the conversion of fifty thousand. A few preachers, not so many as are in the State of North Carolina, cannot be expected to make themselves known in the life of a nation seven times more populous than the United States, and occupying a great deal more territory; and, moreover, the language of one district is so dissimilar to that of another, that one is limited in his work to certain fields. We have just touched China; we are on the borderland of Africa; Romanism in Italy is being aroused.

People who celebrate the birth of Christ this week, whether they be pious or not, are not likely to reflect that Christmas is not a universal occasion. The acquaintance of most of us does not extend to where Christmas is not observed; and thus it is natural to conclude that the day is universally kept. The fact that it is celebrated with gladness all over this land could hardly be used as evidence that this is a Christian land. The fact that half the world has no reason to be glad for the birth of a Saviour is evidence of darkness and gloom.

This close of the year with millions in darkness suggests much. The duty of God's people is to go on. No people, not even the Apostles, have been confronted with a duty so great, nor have any had so large an opportunity. The prospect has opened and widened until now there is no doubting where the work must be done, no doubting the size of the field.

There is hope, reasonable hope, too. God's people ought to rely on faith for hope; but facts are not impertinent. The work of converted heathen is a fruitful source of hope. It is often said that the heathen must be used to convert the heathen. It is not at all unreasonable that heathen looking upon the improved station of their converted fellows, learn from them more readily than from the missionories. And while it is true that joining the church in this land does not warrant work for the salvation of souls, it is rarely the case that converts in heathen countries do not exert an active influence for good upon their fellows. The numbers of native preachers and workers are sufficient evidence of this.

Thus great progress may be expected. One conversion will be used as the beginning of many; and, ere long, the prospect that has been widening as new country was opened and new centries made, will be narrowing. When the latter sets in, it will not be a slow movement, but a period of great, but rapid, spiritual transition, that will beget a slower mental and social elevation.

If this generation does not grasp this great opportunity (rather, undertake this matchless duty) of setting in motion the impetus that will precipitate this transition, another will. All that is needed is a great movement in Christendom, in order that basis in heathendom may be secured for a great movement.

These are generalities. One forgets that Baptists are a good part of Christendom, and that North Carolina is much Baptist in population. This opportunity is presented to the Baptists of North Carolina; this duty is the duty of North Carolina Baptists; and the time is the present time.

IF ANY one is so blindly ignorant as to have been persuaded that Baptists do not believe in and support higher education, let him consider Wake Forest, let him consider the Louisville Seminary, let him consider that North Carolina Baptists voluntarily contribute three thousand dollars annually for the higher education of indigent students, let him look around and perceive that Baptists have more sons attending institutions of higher education in North Carolina, in proportion to their numbers and their means, than any other class.

It does not answer Prest. Taylor's articles to say that Baptists are unfriendly to higher education, or that they are seeking to "tear down" any institution; it does interfere with the truth; it does betray consciousness of weakness.

It is probable that the defenders of State-aid will some day perceive that it had been more creditable (it could not have been less successful) to attempt to meet arguments, rather than to impugn motives and appeal to prejudice. But the average human being is likely to lose his wits and resort to unfairness when he is faced with disagreeable and insuperible logic.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. W. S. Ballard will take up the work at Southport.

...."Thou crownest the year with goodness."—Psalms 11.

....Rev. V. M. Carter changes his address from Jerusalem, Davie county, to Salisbury, N. C.

....It is reported that Rev. O. L. Stringfield has resigned care of our Raleigh Third church.

....The Southern Baptist Convention meets next May at Washington. Good enough.

....Rev. Baylus Cade is announced to become associate editor of the Raleigh daily Caucasian.

....Rev. J. J. Adams has returned from Georgia, and his friends can address him at Holly Springs.

....Correspondents will please address Rev. P. G. Hartsell at Concord instead of Big Lick, N. C.

....Rev. G. W. White will serve the Green's Cross Roads church next year. The salary has been increased.

....Rev. E. Allison reports good meetings in Transylvania county. Sixty two additions to two churches lately.

....Renew your subscription and get a Baptist Almanac free. Please act quickly. See first column, second page.

....Rev. J. B. Hawthorne is now President of our Southern Home Board, Ex-Gov. W. J. Northern having resigned.

....We are glad to know that Prof. J. D. Hodges is making great success with his Business College at Augusta, N. C.

....Rev. J. W. Cobb's postoffice should be Lumber Bridge instead of Maxton. The J. W. Cobb at Maxton is not a minister.

....Rev. I. S Boyles has been announced as the winner of the Senior oratorical medal given by the Phi. Society of Wake Forest.

....One would think that the Religious Herald is aspiring to be the organ of B. Y. P. U. A. ism. We shall not dispute its title.

....Rev. A. L. Stough has accepted a call to Flint Hill, instead of Pineville, as we understood the brother on the train to say.

....Rev. J. H. Vernon of Pollocksville passed through Raleigh, Friday, on his way North, for treatment. We hope he will be entirely restored.

....Rev F. H. Poston, late of Smithfield, should henceforward be addressed at Cordele, Ga. He writes that he is well pleased with his new field.

....Rev. J. O. Alderman's name ought to have been among those of the members of the North Carolina Baptist Historical Society. We beg pardon.

....Rev. M. J. Willilloughby, a North Carolinian and a Wake Forest man, of Marion, S. C., has accepted a call to Beach Island church, South Carolina.

....One thousand dollars for Foreign Missions from North Carolina before January 1st, will put us ahead of any other State, proportionately. Let us raise it.

....Rev. Dr. N. B. Cobb has resigned at Gardner's. The latter, Warren Plains, Macon and Littleton have agreed to unite for the support of one man as pastor.

....Bro. Henry C. Vedder, editor of the Examiner and Professor elect of Church History at Crozer Theological Seminary, will be ordained to the full work of the ministry.

....The program of the Mecklenburg and Cabarrus Union Meeting reached us several hours after the RECORDER had gone to press, and was therefore, not published with the others last week.

....Rev. C. C. Brown is working to perfect a Mutual Benefit Association in South Carolina, the object being to protect the families of Baptist preachers in South Carolina with insurance.

....Rev. W. F. Fry, who is engaged in the Lord's service as pastor at Bayboro, Bay Creek and Oregon churches, had the kindness to send us several new subscribers last week. His kindness is appreciated.

....Dr. F. M. Ellis has resigned the pastorate of Eutaw Place, Baltimore, to become pastor of Washington Avenue church, Brooklyn, N. Y. His departure from Baltimore is a decided loss to the South.

....Our beloved brother, Rev. T. Harrison of Rockingham, continues unable to get about, being paralysed. But his trust is strong, and there is gratitude in the words he wrote last week, "Good eyes, a good library, what a blessing!" May the Lord keep him.

....Bro. P. A. Dunn, the oldest member of the Convention present at Charlotte, is a layman who has been unusually valuable to his denomination. He has been, and is now, a quiet but a safe worker.

....Rev. R E Peele of Wilmington came to Raleigh last week to attend the meeting of the State Mission Board. Bro. Peele reports good progress in the Brooklyn field. He left Raleigh for Wake Forest and Henderson.

....Dr. W. A. Nelson has resigned care of the church at Hawkinsville, Ga., in order to do evangelistic work throughout the wire grass region of Georgia. His engagement to assist Dr. Gambrell will not conflict with this work.

....If marriages are a sign of prosperity, the RECORDER reader has reason to feel hopeful. It does seem that such a flood of weddings ought to raise the tide of human happiness, that is, if the story books know anything about it.

....Rev. C. W. Blanchard called to see us last week. He is now located at Cary, where he preaches. He is vigorously in for campaigning the State for Wake Forest College. Such pastors as Bro. Blanchard are good testimonies to Wake Forest.

....Rev. Jno. R. Moore has been chosen an editor of the Wake Forest Student. The magazine for December has been received. It deserves the support of the alumni. The Seminary Magazine for December is, as usual, helpful and interesting.

....Cards are out for the marriage at Boone, Watauga county, on the 19th inst., of Mr. E S. Coffey, a rising young lawyer of that town and a graduate of Wake Forest, to Miss Annie Parks. Rev. J. G. Pulliam will perform the ceremony.

....We were glad to have a visit from the venerable Dr. R. H. Graves last week. Dr. Graves is well pleased with his visits to North Carolina, and we are pleased with him. When he returns to China he will become a self supporting missionary.

....Many young Baptist women of Owensboro, Ky., have withdrawn from the King's Daughters because that order is assuming to administer the ordinances. Now let Bro. Hale give them a course of lectures on the duties of church members to their churches.

....Can we not get every pastor to canvass, or get him to secure some one to canvass his church for the RECORDER? Many have helped us. We have made arrangements that warrant us in promising that the RECORDER will be unusually helpful the coming year.

....It is the RECORDER's opinion that the Southern Baptist papers which have published Secretary Banes' "Open Letter" ought to print Secretary Bell's letter, printed in this paper. Let us make it practicable for our Board to equip itself with presses, etc.

....The Board of Missions and Sunday-schools will hold its next session Jan. 22d, 1895, at 7.30 o'clock p. m. All applications for aid in mission work should be in the hands of the Secretary by that time. No business of importance was transacted at the recent meeting at Raleigh.

....A New York speculator is sending out an advertisement of questionable stock, under the title, "Some Interesting Information About Stocks and the Big Profits Made by Alert Buyers." That is dangerous, sinful reading, and we are surprised that any religious paper prints it.

....Pastor Jenkins reports a fruitful meeting at Waynesville. There were many conversions, and repentant, anxious sinners prevented the meeting from closing, says the W. N. C. Baptist. Rev. J. T Betts, the new pastor of Asheville French Broad church, has been aiding in this meeting.

....That is a queer father or mother who forgets the orphan, whom God has not seen fit to bless with loving parents. A box for the Orphanage may be the source of more real, appreciated comfort than usually gets into a house of a wealthy man in a year. "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

....When a foot ball player gets knocked over and is about to lose the ball, he calls "down." Whereupon the rule requires his fellows let up on him. In human affairs the custom is to cry "persecuted." One never calls "down" or "persecuted" until he is hopeless of otherwise maintaining his stand.

....Rev. Geo. Wharton, who resigned at Waynesville a year or more ago to accept work in Mississippi, has returned to this State, and is located at Clyde. Bro. Blount, late pastor at Clyde, is undergoing treatment at Baltimore, which, we are glad to know, promises to completely restore him.

....It struck us as such as a matter of course that we failed to note the good work of President Marsh at Charlotte. His performance of the delicate functions of the Chair could not be improved on. He is gentle but firm, kind and discriminating. The wisdom of continuing one man several terms is fully demonstrated.

....Brethren Prince and Wilson have an announcement of their institution in this paper. They are graduates of Wake Forest and are highly commended. Brother E E. Hilliard of the Scotland Neck Democrat was in our office one day last week and he was pleased to speak in handsome terms of the success of this school.

....Send us a subscriber (who will receive the RECORDER from Dec. 19th until May 1st for fifty cents) and get a Baptist Almanac free. See first column, second page. ....Send a one cent stamp with the subscription and you and the subscriber each will receive a Baptist Almanac (full of information, Baptist statistics, list of new judges, other officers, courts, etc., the best list of Baptist preachers ever perfected, Baptist history, etc.,) free. Act now. The number is limited.

....Rev. Jonathan Wood and family have returned to Raleigh from Raton, New Mexico, where Bro. Wood has been preaching successfully for two years or more. We are glad to note the improved state of Brother Wood's health, and we hope he will be permitted to remain in North Carolina.

....Rev. H. Morton reports having lately held the best meeting ever conducted at Denton. Brother Haywood Morris helped and did good work. There were eight professions, three have been baptized, and others will follow. Bro. Morris also helped Bro. Morton at Lick church, after which fifteen were added to the church.

....Rev. C. A. Jenkens is doing great service at Goldsboro. He preached to a congregation filling aisles and galleries the 16th inst., on "The Importance and Significance of Baptism," after which he administered the ordinance of baptism to ten persons, the second baptizing of late. The church was cleared of debt that day.

....Now let all begin to pull together for Wake Forest College and the Woman's College. We believe God has great things in store for us; and they will be showered upon us, if we will go forward with faith. Times are bound to improve; but it will help us to endure the meanwhile, if we will persist in serving the interests of the Lord.

....The N. C. Christian Advocate announces that Rev. W. B. Lee was appointed at the late session of the North Carolina Conference to work in Brazil. Our contemporary continues, "This makes two North Carolina preachers in the Foreign Mission field." Pardon, brother, but there are nine North Carolina Baptist preachers on foreign fields and nine women.

....Revs. W. L. Grissom and H. M. Blair are now editors of the North Carolina Christian Advocate. Bro. Grissom has been connected with the paper some time, but Bro. Blair is a new acquisition. Dr. D. Atkins, the retiring editor, has done good work. He was actively interested in the anti saloon movement. The new regime has our kindest greetings and good wishes.

....Rev. C. J. F. Anderson writes: "On last Sunday, Dec. 16th, I closed my pastorate with the church at Siler City. The Lord has graciously blessed this church during the past year, the membership having considerably more than doubled. Rev. K. C. Horner, a young brother of talent and consecration, will succeed me. May the Lord continue His blessings upon this people."

....Rev. W. B. Morton and Judge elect E W. Timberlake of Louisburg were pleasant visitors to our office last week. It has been told of Bro. Timberlake that when on the campaign he was urged by his political friends to spend some money for whiskey, he declined, saying that he preferred to be defeated by whiskey men rather than win by whiskey. So much for honor and religion.

....It will be remembered that Rev. M. A. Adams has been preaching a series of sermons on marriage. The following from him is not surprising: "Married last night (18th), Mr. George A. Miller to Miss Alice C. Wooten; will marry to morrow evening at six o'clock, Mr. McDuffie to Miss Myrtle Tucker. Others to follow." Bro. Adams baptized two persons the 16th; five others await the ordinance.

....Rev. J. K Fant of Littleton has received a call to Barnwell, S. C. The Baptist Courier says: "We hope he will accept and come back home. Bro. Fant is well known in this State (S. C.) where he was born, raised and educated, and where he has been a successful pastor." We are well satisfied with Bro. Fant at Littleton, and we hope he may see fit to remain with his friends in North Carolina.

....It is hard to buy a good razor. In the store you try one after another clipping a hair. It will turn out that the blade that cuts neatly a hair will give one good shave, and then you can never get a fine edge on it again. The boys at college who are cleverest somehow get dull when in life's duties. The distinguished graduate is the extinguished alumnus for the balance of his days. —Richmond Christian Advocate.

....Our esteemed neighbor, The Christian Sun of Raleigh, celebrated the centennial of the institution of the "Christian Church," of which it is the organ for the South, with a magnificent edition of 10,000 copies. Within the handsome covers, which were embellished with pictures of Editor Moffit, Agent Hurley, and Elon College, there was an admirable array of illustrated reading matter. The issue, as is the Sun, was worthy of the church it represents.

....Rev. J. G. Pulliam, who has been preaching in California, has returned to this State and accepted a call to Smithfield. Bro. Pulliam is a graduate of Judson College, a former student of the Seminary and a safe preacher. He made a speech at the Young People's Meeting before the Convention, in which he said that a reaction has set in against the perversion of the correct idea of the B. Y. P. U. A. in the North and West; and that Drs. Lorimer and Henson said many strong things along that line at Denver. Bro. Pulliam was quoted as using the word opposition instead of reaction, as above.

....The RECORDER is pleased to lay before its readers this week a strong article from that earnest leader of the young people, Rev. R. Van Deventer, an eloquent letter from gifted, patriotic Henry W. Battle, the completion of the President's account of the woman's meetings at Charlotte, an informing article from Secretary Bell, which we heartily commend to our readers, some hopeful observations by a "water bound delegate," a taste of South Carolina on education soup, an interesting report from the State Normal and Industrial School, a manly letter bearing on the State aid question from an alumnus of the University, Dr. J. L. Carroll, some timely reading on eighth page, and all the news, including two happy letters from beloved foreign missionaries.

....The Wilmington Messenger has discovered that there are thirty-six ministerial students at Wake Forest, and seems to be gratified to know that there are two hundred Baptist preachers in the State, who have had "scholastic training." The Messenger is informed that there are upwards of fifty ministerial students at Wake Forest, and about six hundred Baptist preachers in North Carolina who have had scholastic training. There are nearly a hundred who have had training at theological seminaries.

....Rev. J. B. Harrell writes encouragingly from Wilmington Dec. 12th: "My work has opened very hopefully here. I am among very appreciative people. We are few in number, but determined to succeed. The pastor and his wife were made quite happy last night when a number of the brethren and sisters came to see them bringing a supply of good things to eat, large enough to last them several weeks. I hope and pray that the Lord shall help me to accomplish good for him among these people."

....Rev. O. C. Horton writes Dec. 18th: "It was quite a pleasure to have Rev. R. H. Graves, our missionary from China, and Rev. J. G. Pulliam of Boone, N. C., in our home for two or three hours on 17 h inst. Such treats are rare, and are the more highly appreciated because they come so seldom. Bro. Pulliam has been called to the care of Smithfield Baptist church, and will likely accept and make his future home there, serving Smithfield and other churches near by. We heard him deliver one good sermon to the people of Smithfield."

....Bro. John Mitchell sends us an urgent appeal for help. We have space now for only a few words. Let the churches help him as soon as possible. Here is how the matter stands: "There are thirty five young ministers on the Board and three hundred dollars per month are needed to meet current expenses The indebtedness of the Board is now a little over five hundred dollars, and must be increased, unless the contributions shall be sufficient to pay the monthly dues. For the last two weeks the acknowledgments in the RECORDER have been nothing. This is distressing. May it not continue."

....Rev. J. L. White leaves Asheville for Macon, Ga., the last of January. We lament his departure from North Carolina. Although young and not long out of college, Bro. White is known all over this State as a powerful preacher and a successful worker. His fame as an evangelist extends into several States. His consecrated talent is not to be doubted. He and his accomplished wife will be prized acquisitions to Georgia, and they will be followed thither by the loving remembrance of many North Carolinians. North Carolina has sent out another son who will increase her reputation as a grower of great men.

....The attitude of the State in reference to higher education, provoked warm discussion in the Western North Carolina Conference at Statesville. For a while it was a genuine battle of giants. Gleaming blades were crossed in mighty onset, and many bones and skeletons of vanquished arguments were left to bleach upon the field. The educational question, however, was left intact, and State frauds are to be looked into by Dr. Jim Atkins and others. There will be a good sized racket yet before these men are done.—N. C. Christ. Advocate, Dec. 12. The RECORDER knows Dr. Jim Atkins; and he has a good eye for frauds.

....Pastor Hardaway writes from Oxford: "The meeting recently held in the Oxford Baptist church was a very helpful one to the church. Christians were revived and strengthened, and there were from fifteen to twenty professions. We have thus far received two by letter and twelve by baptism, with perhaps a half a dozen more to follow. All of these, however, did not profess in the meeting just closed. Rev. J. E. Hutson, the Virginia evangelist, did the preaching, and all all were delighted with his earnest presentation of Bible truth. Bro. Hutson is the best and safest evangelist I know." We will publish a letter from Bro. Hardaway in next paper.

....It is easy to quote a man's precise words and yet misrepresent him. Infidels often so misrepresent the Scriptures. It is a sign of desperation. The following note that is being widely published is a pertinent illustration: "Those who were expecting the Methodist Conference, recently held at Durham, to take part in the fight against State schools have been disappointed. Bishop Wilson, who presided over that body, in an address, said: 'I am opposed to the church having anything to do with legislation or with secular matters. Let the church stick to its divine mission.'" These are probably the Bishop's words, but they were couched in a paragraph in which he made the distinction that education is not a secular matter, but is a part of the church's mission.

....Prof. Frederick W. Boatwright has been elected President of Richmond College. Prof. Puryear has been the able chairman of the faculty many years. Prof. Boatwright is less than thirty years of age, progressive and able; and although we have heard that his election is opposed, we are confident that all will be well with "Old Richmond." His election has occasioned very disgraceful reports of resentment on the part of the students. There were two factions of the trustees, one inclined to elect Chairman Puryear, the other to elect Prof. Boatwright. The latter prevailed, and the Herald reported great "great unanimity" of action; but the students and others are reported in the secular papers to have made disgraceful and humiliating demonstrations. Richmond College is too precious an institution to be thus injured; "Old Virginia" is too venerable to be thus humiliated. The RECORDER can speak of the matter disinterestedly. Let Prest. Boatwright take up the trust reposed in him; if every young man who has contributed to the disgraceful demonstrations leaves the college, the institution will be the better for it.

Lawyers to the Front.

In the RECORDER of Dec. 5th, I made the following statement, viz.:

"THE LORD'S SUPPER.

At the Atlantic Association, in October last, I heard Rev. C. A. Jenkens of Goldsboro preach on 'The Lord's Supper.' The sermon was, by request of the Association, published in the RECORDER of Nov. 28. I know of no better, short, Scriptural, practical presentation of 'the Lord's Supper.' I am anxious to serve the cause of truth and our Baptist cause, by having at least 25,000 copies of this sermon printed in tract form, in good type, and in good shape, and distributed in this State. I can have this done for one hundred dollars. I await the pleasure of some brother or sister who can enable me to do this much needed work. Here is an opportunity to serve the Lord's cause. Who will do it?"

The Chief Justice elect of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, Judge W. T. Faircloth, an alumnus of Wake Forest College, a Trustee of said institution, a Trustee of our Baptist Orphanage, a Trustee of the Woman's College in Raleigh, and a member of the Goldsboro Baptist church, writes me under date of Dec. 12th, that he will pay twenty five dollars towards the cost of publishing the sermon by his pastor.

Geo. W. Blount, an alumnus of Wake Forest, a Trustee of this institution, and a member of the Baptist church of Wilson, a lawyer of distinction, says that he will take fifty copies at ten cents per copy. Who will write next? Let us do this one thing now.

C. DURHAM.

Littleton Notes.

Dear Recorder:—I am pleased to learn of the harmonious, enthusiastic session of the Convention in Charlotte. I could be with you only in spirit. It was my last time at Enfield; and, as usual, I had a good time. They are a noble little band of faithful workers. Some consecrated souls have been added to their number, and others are coming: and under the leadership of the Bro. McKaughan, I predict slow but steady progress. God bless them; God be blessed for them.

Warren Plains and Macon are each finishing up a neat and substantial house of worship. We are not yet out of the woods; but by the grace of God, we expect to succeed. While building their commodious church house, Warren Plains has not fallen back in her contributions to Christian benevolence; while Macon takes regular offerings from the people for missions, and expects to organize a Sunday school after Christmas; and we thank God and take courage. Our band is few, but true.

Littleton, too, is making progress all along the line. Baptisms are not infrequent. Occasionally, the Lord opens the eyes of some of our Pedobaptist friends to see His way more clearly, and we lead them down into the water. I baptized a worthy Methodist sister recently, and she arose from the water shouting—the answer of a good conscience toward God. We feel encouraged, too, as to the material development.

Prof. Bagley's school is doing well, considering the hard times. I have never known a more faithful, conscientious teacher—always doing his best on the material before Prof. Blankenship, his assistant, is not only quite efficient in the business course, but is an excellent model for the boys as a Christian gentleman, and his influence as a Christian worker is being felt in the whole town.

Fraternally, J. K. FANT.

A Correction.

In the BIBLICAL RECORDER of Dec. 19th, I notice the following:

"Note that a motion in the South Carolina Convention endorsing the action of the trustees of Furman University in opening that institution to females, was killed; and a committee was appointed to consider the matter and report next Convention. They are learning better."

This is correct in part. A committee of nine was appointed on co-education in Furman University to report next year. The brother who offered the resolution said that he wished it to be understood that he was in favor of co-education. The President of Furman University endorsed the resolution, and other advocates of co-education spoke in favor of the resolution. The resolution passed without a dissenting vote.

It is not correct, however, that "a motion in the South Carolina Convention endorsing the action of the trustees of Furman University in opening that institution to females, was killed." Bro. C. C. Brown offered a substitute to the first resolution (calling for a committee of nine, &c.), that the Convention approve the action of the faculty and trustees of the University in opening the institution to young women. This substitute was not killed; it was not voted down; it was not voted on at all; it was withdrawn. It was withdrawn at the request of the friends and advocates of co education. They asked Bro. Brown to withdraw it, because they had no objection to the appointment of the committee. They are perfectly willing for the matter to be considered by a committee of their brethren.

The Convention has never killed or voted down anything on the subject of co education. At the Convention in Anderson, a year ago, the report of the trustees, which was adopted by the Convention, said:

"The trustees have approved the action of the faculty in opening the classes of the Collegiate Department to young women who may apply for admission, and who may be found to be prepared to prosecute the studies required. Three students of this class have been received and are now pursuing the studies selected by them in the regular classes with interest and success."

This year at Chester, the report of the President of Furman University was adopted by the trustees, and then read to the Convention and adopted by the Convention. The report said:

"Three of our students are young women, two of whom were with us last year. We have only to repeat, with increased emphasis, as the result of our experience thus far, our entire satisfaction with this arrangement. If there is a tendency to evil in any respect, either to the young men or to the young women, it has entirely escaped our notice. The presence of a larger number of young women, such as have been invited to enter the institution, would, we believe, make more manifest the advantages that have been already seen.

It should be added, in this connection, that some applicants (young women) were not encouraged to enter the institution, as we did not think them prepared for work in our college classes."

My purpose in writing is not to open this subject in the columns of the BIBLICAL RECORDER, nor to defend the action of the faculty and trustees of Furman University, but simply to correct an error into which the BIBLICAL RECORDER, usually so correct in its statements, has unwittingly fallen.

A. J. S. THOMAS.

[The following in the Baptist Courier's account of the South Carolina Convention is the basis of the note which Bro. Thomas corrects:

"Bro. Forrester offered the following:

Resolved, That a committee of nine be appointed to consider the subject of co education in Furman University and to report to the next meeting of this Convention.

Bro. C. C. Brown proposed a substitute endorsing the action of the trustees in opening the institution to women, but after some discussion the substitute was withdrawn and the resolution of Bro. Forrester was adopted."

Certainly Bro. Brown would not have withdrawn his resolution, if it had not seemed better than to let it be voted down. Yes, our South Carolina brethren are learning better; and the RECORDER might enlighten them considerably, if it were disposed to print some matter on the subject that the Courier ought to have printed.—EDITOR OF RECORDER.]

WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE.

Since the statement appended to Brother Thomas' correction was written, the following has been received from Rev. C. C. Brown, D. D., who offered the dead substitute:

SUMTER, S. C., Dec. 18, 1894.

Beloved Recorder:—The following appears in your issue of the 19th:

"Note that a motion in the South Carolina Convention endorsing the action of the trustees of Furman University in opening that institution to females, was killed; and a committee was appointed to consider the matter and report next Convention. They are learning better."

The record you make is a true one. The thing happened. But the motion to appoint the "committee to consider and report" was made by a brother who prefaced his resolution by saying he was in favor of co education.

[Bro. Brown goes on to further explain the matter; but it seems to us that any one ought to see through it as it is.—EDITOR RECORDER.]

Our Sunday-school Board and its Work.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I am very much obliged to you for your kind offer to give me the space I needed in which to say some things concerning our Sunday-school Board and its work. I gladly avail myself of the privilege. There are many things which I could say, but will limit myself to a few.

1. Since the Baptists of the South, through their representatives in the Southern Baptist Convention, organized a Sunday-school Board and instructed it to publish for them a Sunday-school series, it would seem that these same Baptists ought, as a matter of course, to give this Board their patronage and support. If not, they imposed a heavy burden on the men whom they put to do this work. The series does not belong to the men who compose the Board, as a private possession, nor even as a Society would own it. But it belongs to the Baptists of the South as their own property, and the Board is only a committee to whom they have committed the work of running it for them.

2. This Board, acting for the Baptists of the South, has had to come into competition from its beginning on its own field, with an old, wealthy organization, worth hundreds of thousands of dollars, and which is continually calling on the people for money for its work, and which evidently would, if it could, crush out all rivals and establish in this country a great, powerful monopoly for the publishing of Baptist books, periodicals, &c.

3. Yet, brought into competition and constant comparison with this great moneyed institution, sixty years old, your Board, though not yet four years old, has built up a large business in S. S. literature, and has given to the denomination a series of S. S. helps that hold their own in comparison with any in the land as to the great excellence of their expositions and other features which go to make up a first-class series of helps.

4. Not only so, but in the three and a half years of its existence, the Board has not only met all its own expenses, but has given out of its business profits, over $11,000 to the S. S. work in our own bounds, and over $1,000 to the work in our foreign fields. Yet it has never asked one cent in the way of contributions from anybody for its work.

5. In its work it has not considered only its own prosperity, but has sought in every way in its power to advance the interests of all the Boards of our Convention. Its periodicals are constantly giving missionary information to our S. S. scholars, and creating and fostering in them a missionary spirit. Who else does this for our mission work? It has this year arranged for and carried out a "Missionary Day in the Sunday schools," which will bring to the two Boards, Home and Foreign, at least seven thousand dollars, and that without a cent of profit to itself. Who else does this sort of work for us?

6. Some sneers have been cast at the Board because it does not yet own its own presses, &c., for doing its printing, but gives out its printing by contract. As well complain of a three year old child because he has'n't the strength of a man of forty; and as well sneer at some of the greatest publishers in this country. More and more, great publishers are doing no printing—having that done by contract. The American Baptist Publication Society was organized away back in the twenties, and yet it did not own its own plant until some time in the seventies. And when any of its friends—as I have known some to do—seek to cast a slur on our Board because we do not yet own our plant, they forget the history of their own Society. Let Southern Baptists stand by their own Board and it will not be fifty years old, nor twenty, before it has its own plant.

7. Previous to the establishment of our Kind Words Series, under the Home Board, in 1885, none of our Southern men, so far as I have been able to learn, were ever allowed the opportunity to do any expository work in any S. S. series anywhere. Nobody seemed to know that we had any men in the South who could do such work. About that time, however, somebody discovered that there was a man in Richmond, Va., who could do do such work well—he had been doing it in Kind Words—and ever since, one Southern man who was trained in the training school of the Southern periodicals, has been given a high place elsewhere. And it has been to the credit of our Series that it has found a number of our own Southern men who can do as good work along these lines as any, East, West, North or South.

8 In all its operations, our Board, representing the high Christian integrity of the South has carefully abstained from any measures for furthering its interests which in the least degree smacked of trickery or questionable business methods. And more over, it has pursued a policy of peace. It has gone on its way, in the fear of God and with an honest desire to serve the brethren, and has let people say what they would. And God has blessed the work. It has grown and is growing, and unless present indications fail of realization, will continue to grow and yet do a great work for our Lord. If anybody wants to fight it, they can fight on, and not be fought back. If anybody wants to sneer at it, well and good, it can stand it. If anybody wants to cast slurs at it, they can do it with safety. As long as the brethren of the South are true to it, and God continues his favor to it, all will be well with it. And these two blessings it is enjoying now.

Again thanking you for your kindness, which the RECORDER has ever shown our Board and its work, I remain,

Yours very truly,

T. P. BELL, C. S. S. S. Bd.

Seasonable Gifts.

The RECORDER cannot boast a fine eye for the exquisite or the artistic, but we would be very blind and well nigh soulless did we not thoroughly admire and highly appreciate the work of Raphael Tuck & Sons Company, Fine Art and Book Publishers, London, Paris, and New York (368 Broadway.)

Last week we had the pleasure of examining and permitting our more artistic friends to examine the handsomest work in the shape of Christmas and New Year Cards, Calendars and Booklets that have ever been in our office. The autograph cards were exquisitely dainty and marvellously tasteful. The Calendars and Booklets are unreservedly commended to the reader as seasonable gifts that any one will appreciate.

Something new in the publishing line are Patent Dressing Dolls. By facile adjustment of costumes one may have Cinderilla or Princess, Little Red Riding Hood or Bo Peep, etc., etc. These new inventions, so tastefully and artistically designed, cannot fail to make children happy. There are four sets, each set containing one paper doll with several complete interchangeable costumes.

Raphael Tuck & Sons Company have long maintained a safe superiority over all other fine art publishers. We have been so fortunate as to examine their work from year to year; and while we have praised them heretofore, we feel no hesitancy in saying that they have surpassed themselves this season.

Glad Tidings from the Missionaries.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—We hope to reach Yakohama, Japan, to-morrow, Wednesday, a. m. We have had a long and stormy voyage. To-day is our eighteenth on the ocean, and fifteen of them have been very stormy—a succession of storms. We have all suffered with sea-sickness, and some of us feel that we suffered untold and indescribable misery. But now we are rejoicing and praising God because we are all well again and nearing the end of our journey.

The RECORDER was the only paper that met us in Tacoma to give us a last and affectionate farewell. God bless the RECORDER! We hope to have a visit from you soon after our arrival, and that you will be a regular visitor, bringing with you many from the homeland, whom we know and love.

Sincerely, R. T. BRYAN.

S. S. Tacoma, Nov. 20, 1894.

Your attention is directed to the advertisement of W. L. Moore, photographer, in this paper. He does a large business by mail, and he will be sure to please you.

From Rev. R. J. Willingham.

Dear Brother:—It is almost needless to say I enjoyed that grand meeting in Charlotte. Who could have failed to enjoy it,—so much brotherly love and good cheer in the Master's work. I am very much in hopes North Carolina will have paid her full proportion, $6,000, asked, for the Foreign Mission work by January 1st. She has the most missionaries of any of our States in the foreign fields, now let her come up and set a good example to all the others in contributing money, as well as men and women.

I hope all the pastors will be deeply interested in this work. Help us.

Best wishes, fraternally.

R. J. WILLINGHAM, Cor Sec.

An Endowment for the University.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Dec. 19.

I want to call the attention of the Alumni and friends of this venerable institution to the propriety and importance of utilizing its approaching Centennial for the provision of an endowment that shall lift it out of the arena of political and ecclesiastical agitation and uncertainty, and place it upon a peaceful and permanent basis.

I do not propose in this brief article to set forth in detail the reason why I think this should be done. It seems to me that they will be obvious to every thoughtful mind. I wish simply to make the suggestion, and invite an expression of opinion from University men. Hard as the times are, I believe that with adequate effort there can be raised within the limits of this Centennial, $250 000, and perhaps more, for this noble purpose. With such a foundation laid, there will be no trouble afterward in getting money for the University.

I would like very much for the suggestion to be considered by the Trustees, so that if it be deemed advisable to make the attempt, arrangements may be made to begin a vigorous campaign, with an efficient agent in every Congressional district in the State, with the opening of the new year. It will be a great pity for the enthusiasm that will be kindled in behalf of the old Alma Mater during the next year to expend itself in barren sentiment and empty hurrah, when it might, with proper effort, be made the means of doing her invaluable good. What is to be the substantial outcome of the University Centennial, is the intensely practical question for University men to consider at once.

If anything is to be done, it is important to begin promptly. It is the opportunity of a century! It will be criminal negligence to suffer it to pass by unimproved.

I will thank any papers in the State that may regard with favor the suggestion herein made to copy it with their endorsement.—J. L. Carroll, in News and Observer.

FOR IRRITATION OF THE THROAT caused by Cold or use of the voice, "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are exceedingly beneficial.

Professor Edward W. Bemis, of the University of Chicago, has made a careful investigation of the questions as to whether American labor organizations are opposed to trade instruction either through the apprenticeship system or by trade schools, and whether they are controlled by foreigners. The results of his work have been published by the American Academy of Political and Social Science in a monograph entitled "The Relation of Labor Organizations to the American Boy and to Trade Instruction."

Prof. Bemis clearly shows that the pessimistic utterances which have characterized many of the previous writers on the subject, and particularly the late Col. Auchmuty, are not warranted by the real facts. Paper. 8vo. Price, 25 cents.

$50,000 Worth of Books at Reduced Price.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—We have about fifty thousand dollars' worth of books, and have concluded to reduce our general and miscellaneous stock in order to confine ourselves more strictly to theological and religious books.

Those contemplating replenishing libraries or making Christmas presents, are requested to send to the Baptist Book Concern for price-lists, as many of our books will be offered at one-half price.

W. P. HARVEY,
N. W. Cor. Third and Jefferson Sts.
Louisville, Ky., Dec. 6, 1894.

From Goldsboro.

Brother Bailey: Our church has enjoyed a delightful meeting, conducted by our Pastor, which closed last week. The whole membership of the church seemed very much benefited. A number of people professed religion and joined the church, and others will soon follow. Our people are very much attached to Bro. Jenkens, and we raised an extra purse of thirty dollars to send him and wife to the Convention.

The ladies of our church had prayer meeting every evening during the protracted meeting which all entered into heartily.

We feel that God has greatly blessed us this year, and now as we enter upon another Conventional year, let us look forward for still greater blessings, believing that He who does all things well will give them to us.

MRS. A. S. TYSON.

Goldsboro, Dec. 9, 1894.

Rev. R. P. Kerr, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Richmond, Va., has published a card in the Baptist Herald denying that he has ever traveled anywhere on money contributed by a liquor dealer, of which Rev. Jno. E. Connally accused him in a sermon at the King's Mountain Association. Bro. Connally did not make a specific charge; he said he had heard the report, and he denounced the act in proper terms. We are glad to know that the report is false, as stated by Bro. Connally's denunciation of such an act.

of that time we may all be of the same mind.

The preaching on Sunday must have been of a high order. Everybody seemed pleased, and nearly every one seemed to think he had the best preacher and heard the best sermon. This scribe heard Bro. Carter preach a good gospel sermon at Tryon St. Baptist church in the morning. At 2 p. m. he heard Bro. Shaw talk interestingly to railroad men. At 4:45 he heard Bro. N. B. Broughton discourse profitably and entertainingly in the Y. M. C. A. hall on the kind of men Charlotte wants, and the kind she does not want; and at night he heard Bro. Willingham preach a good sermon in the Second Presbyterian church on family religion. Bro. Willingham must have impressed all of us an excellent brother.

Surely no session of the Convention was ever more handsomely entertained than the good people of Charlotte entertained this one. We all owe brethren Pritchard and Pruett a debt of gratitude as a committee on hospitality. None could have done their duty better.

The Lord be praised for this good Convention.

Fourth Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Societies.

[CONCLUDED.]

A general discussion on "How to Observe the Week of Prayer for Missions" followed. Mrs. Edwards gave some very helpful suggestions. The Week of Prayer had been observed by her society by the ladies meeting every other afternoon, and the whole church meeting every alternate night in prayer for missions. Speaking in this connection of the Christmas offering for China, which occurs during the Week of Prayer, she urged the ladies to train the children for a missionary Christmas exercise and let them take part in this beautiful offering. "It is so easy to interest children in missions," she said.

Mrs. Battle of Durham told how at first a very few had joined in the observance of the Week of Prayer, how the number grew larger as the week advanced, and how from it had grown a woman's prayer meeting, which had been carried on all through the year. The blessing of that week had been a constant blessing.

The third and last session of the meeting was opened Saturday morning by devotional exercises led by Miss Heck, the key thought being the triumph of Christ's kingdom and his followers. Isa. 26: 1—4; Matt. 26: 29, 32; 1 John 2: 17; 3: 2; Matt. 26: 31—40; Isa. 25: 8, 9.

The minutes were read by Mrs. Duffy.

A rich treat was in store for the meeting in having three of our missionaries from as many fields, and Dr. Willingham, Secretary of the Foreign Board. Dr. Willingham took charge of the meeting and introduced first Mr. Mosely from Mexico. As was known to all, Mr. Mosely was in this country on account of the publication by the Woman's Missionary Union of a tract by him entitled "Three Centuries of Romanism in Mexico." This tract making its way back to Mexico, it was claimed made political utterances, and was made the occasion of his imprisonment. It seemed to him a strange providence. His work was being greatly blessed. He had baptized a large number within the year. He was taken from his work and shut up in prison. With him was imprisoned a young professor, a man of learning, having completed his education in Europe. Though so learned, he had never seen a Bible. To him Mr. Mosely preached Christ. Day by day they read and studied the Scriptures together. Only a day or two before he had heard that this man, his fellow-prisoner, had professed conversion and said, should he be released from prison, he meant to become a Baptist preacher. Perhaps this man might become an apostle to his people, and this be the reason why he was called from his work of preaching to the many to teach this one lovely prisoner. Though he was temporarily in this country on account of the opposition created by this tract, his heart was in Mexico and he longed to return to the country of his adoption.

Mr. McCallum of Japan: He was the happiest man in the Convention because the night before money had been raised to send out a man to Japan and keep him there five years. But where was the money to support this man's wife, for missionaries in Japan must be married? Unmarried people were not respected. An unmarried woman was thought to have no sense—married, all questions were brought to her to decide—his own young wife was asked by other women how to raise, to feed and care for their children. He told of the transforming power of the gospel on a chosen Japanese Coolie and gave the unconscious testimony of his former companions in wickedness, who said he would not gamble or drink any more, but was like "a man born over again." Japanese men and women were being "born over again," and the church of Christ was growing. He would soon return joyfully to his work. Being asked to sing a hymn in Japanese, he said it was difficult to go from one linguistical extreme to the other, Japanese and English being totally different. He sang the child hymn, "Jesus loves me" (if we remember correctly), the time being the same as used with us.

Dr. Graves, our chosen missionary to China, was next introduced. In introducing him, Dr. Willingham said that this soldier of the Cross of long service had recently told him that owing to the debt on the Board, the need for more funds, and having some little property, he and his wife would for the future draw no salary, but return to their field as self-supporting missionaries; still, however, as missionaries of the Board. Dr. Graves said that while Mr. McCallum had said unmarried women were not wanted as missionaries in Japan, this was not so in China. There was a large field of usefulness for them, and those on the field were doing a noble work. The Chinese women of the churches were often noble, active Christian women. He told of one woman who at once heard the gospel with joy, and when the Chinese preacher refused to baptize her after she had heard the gospel but once, followed him and some converts into the water and baptized herself, saying she would do what other Christians did, for she, too, was a Christian. Afterwards she was taught more fully in the Scriptures, baptized, and now when she learns to read, will become a Bible woman. He said he brought a message from the Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Union:—she earnestly asked all societies to join in the Christmas offering for the enlargement of the work in China. The societies of the South were urged to raise this Christmas $10,000 for this work. Dr. Graves sang a familiar hymn in Chinese, the whole audience joining in the chorus.

Dr. Willingham spoke briefly, as the time was short. Women, he said, suffered most at the hands of the evil one. When man was low, woman was lower. The Devil, it would seem, delighted to put his heel upon her. In Palestine, the land of Christ, he had seen a great, burly man sitting by the road-side overseeing a lot of sickly, frail-looking women making and mending the road. In Africa a woman, with her baby tied to her back, carried a number seven stove on her head five miles and received twelve cents, which was double or treble pay. These were sad sisters. By our exalted position we owed them more of help and comfort.

After the gentlemen had withdrawn, twenty or twenty-five children marched in to music and took their places on and around the low rostrum, in front of the audience. In introducing this exercise, Miss Heck said: Success or failure depends on what we try to do. She did not propose to give a missionary entertainment but only to illustrate a method of teaching a mission band of small children, using some of the methods used in modern infant-class work. She hoped that each one present would say, when the exercise was finished, that any one could do as well as she had done. The children sung with spirit and sweetness, being assisted by Mrs. Dowd and Mrs. Thomas Franklin. The names of the countries in which the Southern Baptist Convention has missions, was then taught by the flag of each country. The Catholic countries were taken in order—Mexico, Brasil, Cuba, Italy. In these countries the children were taught to pray to Christ through the intercession of the Virgin Mary. The heathen countries in which we had missions were taken up in order—Japan, China, Africa—where the children prayed to idols. The names of the countries were thoroughly learned and a song with the refrain:

"Raise the cross of Jesus,
Let the flags unfurl,
Sunday-schools are singing
All around the world," was sung and the eight flags, the flag of the United States being in the center, with each little right hand, was moved in unison with the words.

Miss Heck then passed on to the main lesson, the monthly subject of study—Cuba. She gave a brief account of the casting away of Diaz, his sickness and conversion in New York, his return home, and of the first conversion under his ministry, his little seven-year old sister, Clotilda. The bright, prompt answers of the children with which the exercise was varied showed they understood and were interested in all that was said by the leader whom they had never seen before. Especially were they interested when she raised a napkin and revealed a table on which were piled oranges, sugar and coffee with which she illustrated the products and climate of the country.

Finally, she gave them some practical work to do in gathering picture cards to send in small packages to the missionaries in Mexico, to be used in Sunday-school work, a request Mr. Mosely had just made in behalf of the workers there.

The simple little exercise over, the children, to whom its success by their prompt and understanding answers and their good singing was due, marched out, and the regular order of business was resumed.

Mrs. Edwards, for the committee on plans of work, submitted the following report:

"1. Knowing that so many of our sisters have no part in this work, so dear to the hearts of many of us, and feeling that we must have an increase in our membership, we urge each society to pledge itself to make every effort during the coming year to double its membership, and to form a society in every neighboring church where there is none. Also to encourage and aid associadional meetings by sending delegate to them.

"2. We would emphasize the necessity of consecrating our means to the Lord. We need systematic, loving, prayerful giving; laying by in store as the Lord has prospered us; giving until we feel it; denying ourselves for Jesus' sake. We should beware of spasmodic giving, as this is apt to result in inactivity.

"3. We would urge that the secretaries report promptly at the end of each quarter, sending in all money on hand, so that the Lord's work be not hindered; and let the secretaries of all societies see to it that the work done by the societies is reported in the church letter to the association.

"4. We would remind the societies that that there is an expense fund for printing and postage of Convention committee, and urge that every member contribute ten cents a year over and above the regular contributions.

"5. Feeling that in order to keep in full sympathy with our missionaries we must hear from them regularly, we recommend that as far as possible every member should subscribe to the Foreign Mission Journal and the Home Field.

"6. Work among the children and young people seems to your committee one of the most important lines of work in the past, and should continue to be. The future of our work depends upon the training of the children; then in the name of the Master let us train the children, and mould their opinions while it can be done. We are all a unit in the sentiment that we must all work for Jesus.

"Then let us consecrate our sentiment to common sense action, doing the duty next at hand, and in this way we will be lifted to a higher plane, and by our influence lifting others into the happy light of doing and giving for a loving Saviour whose promise is, 'I will never leave thee nor forsake thee—I am with thee to the end of the world.'

MRS. BATTLE,
MRS. AYDLETT,
MRS. CHAPIN,
MRS. EDWARDS,
Committee."

Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. Battle spoke to the report, which was adopted by a unanimous vote.

Mrs. Poteat, Wake Forest, submitted the report of the committee on resolutions, which was also adopted unanimously:

"That we express to our president and other officers our hearty appreciation of the intelligence and devotion which have characterized their work.

"That inasmuch as the addresses of visiting brethren have contributed greatly to the interest and value of these meetings, we record here our thanks to them.

"That the thanks of the Woman's Missionary Societies of North Carolina, are due and are hereby tendered to the Seaboard Air Line and the Southern Railway for courtesies extended to members during the present session of the Baptist State Convention.

"That the pleasures of our meetings are due largely to the beautiful and hospitable city in which it has been held; and that we express to those who have made our sojourn within its gates so delightful our warmest appreciation and gratitude.

MRS. W. L. POTEAT,
MRS. T. C. CARLYLE,
MRS. PAYNE,
MRS. WILLIAMS,
Committee.

A second collection to put a North Carolina cot in the hospital for women and children in Cuba, the amount necessary being twenty-five dollars, was taken.

It was announced that Sunday afternoon a memorial meeting in memory of Mrs. Eliza Moring Yates and Mr. and Mrs. Newton would be held, and at that time a proposition would be submitted to the ladies to raise, during the coming year, a memorial sum to the memory of Mrs. Yates.

The hour of adjournment having arrived, Mrs. Edwards, at the request of the President, made a few closing remarks and led in prayer.

The meeting adjourned to meet next year in Greensboro.

After the adjournment, it was good to see the handshaking, the kisses and the farewells, as all crowded to the front, helped themselves to missionary literature, made new acquaintances or renewed old ones. This adjourned meeting had in it elements that were as good as the formal session which had gone before.

THE MEMORIAL MEETING

on Tuesday afternoon was not so largely attended as we had hoped, the Sunday-schools of Charlotte all meeting in the afternoon, and there being other services at the same hour. This was to be regretted both on account of the nature of the meeting and the character of the speeches and the speakers. As we hope to be able in the future to present several of those addresses in full, will only briefly maintain them here.

Dr. T. M. Skinner, who knew both Dr. and Mrs. Yates, intimately and long, spoke of the life and character of Mrs. Yates. She was pre-eminently a woman, working in a woman's way. Her husband was a prince among men because she like a princess moved at his side.

She was "Mother Yates" to all the missionaries, to whom she gave a mother's welcome and a mother's love. Our mission had lost its mother.

Dr. T. P. Bell of Nashville followed. He was glad of this opportunity to pay a tribute to the memory of Bro. Newton. First, he was a good man. Second, he was a successful man. Third, he was a noble man. Under these heads he paid a most glowing tribute to his missionary, speaking of the sad death of his wife preceding his so closely, and dwelling with admiration on the heroism of Miss Alberta Newton, who stands alone where three so lately stood. "I am glad," he said, "to lay this tribute on the grave of this noble man—but no, he has no grave: he lies buried beneath the ocean waves till the trumpet call of God shall bid the sea give up her dead."

Rev. R. Van Deventer spoke with a rich grasp of the subject of the manifold changes which had taken place in China since 1846.

Dr. Willingham spoke of memorials. The best memorial a man could have was to live in the lives of his children. Mr. and Mrs. Newton had a memorial in the mission work in their noble daughter, who wrote: "I will stay here and do the work my father and mother sought to do."

Should not the women of North Carolina honor themselves by raising a memorial to Mrs. Yates. What should it be? A marble slab on some high hill? A beautiful window in some grand church? Would she wish these? Better still than these:—put a life, a voice in China—a life to take up her work, a voice to echo the words she taught. If, in the coming year, the women of North Carolina would raise a thousand dollars to place this living memorial in China, he thought the Board would pledge itself to keep it there.

Dr. Graves closed the meeting with prayer for workers to take the places of those who are gone, and for the workers at home and abroad.

So closed the fourth annual meeting, which was marked with one thought, one purpose, one endeavor—the service of God and the upbuilding of his kingdom.

At Chappell's Church.

Rev. Josiah Elliott, pastor of Chappell's Hill church, held some afternoon meetings with this church. Owing to sickness and being deprived of ministerial help, it did not continue long. There were two deaths during the time where he was called on to render service.

God helped our pastor preach. The Spirit was powerful among us, and we had a precious meeting. There were twenty-three accessions to the church.

Bro. Elliott has been unanimously elected as pastor for the year 1895. He entered the ministry January, 1883, and took charge of our little church and began to preach religion from house to house. Under his leadership we have built a splendid house of worship. For his service the first year we gave him $55, and gave $8 to missions. We now give the pastor $150 and $35 to missions.

Through these years only seven votes have been given for any one else. He baptized our children and watches over them like a father. He has a grip upon the people and the people upon him. His life is one of sacrifice. His power is in his daily living and speaking. As a church we thank God that the only Joe Elliott we ever heard of, who is a minister, was sent to us. All praise and honor be given to our Father.

Resolutions Adopted by Green Level Church.

WHEREAS, Rev. C. W. Blanchard, who has so faithfully served us as pastor for more than five years, is now, by the will of the Lord, we trust, about to be separated from us, and labor in other fields. Therefore, be it Resolved 1. That we, the members of Green Level Baptist church, do hereby express our appreciation of the extension and upbuilding of the work of this church during the pastorate of Bro. Blanchard.

Resolved 2. That we do heartily commend him to other churches, and say that any church, when thinking of calling a pastor, will do well to give him its consideration.

Resolved 3. That, in parting with Bro. Blanchard, we extend our love and sympathy, and pray that the blessings of God may rest on him and his wherever he may go, and in whatever work he may be engaged in, may it meet the will and approval of him who said "Go work in my vineyard."

Resolved 4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, and a copy sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication. J. S. BAUCOM, Clerk.

First.

The Young Reaper was the first Sunday-School periodical issued by the American Baptist Publication Society, and ever since its first appearance in 1857, it has steadily advanced in favor. It has no superior among the many Sunday school papers. It goes like God's sunshine into our schools. It makes glad the hearts of our boys and girls. We get both excellence and cheapness in The Young Reaper. Its thirty-four years of honest work and honorable history entitles it to leadership, and it has it.

Resignation of Rev. G. L. Merrell.

WHEREAS, Rev. Geo. L. Merrell, pastor of Moore's Chapel Baptist church at Franklinsville has tendered his resignation as pastor, after having served five years in succession so acceptably and faithfully, having accepted its pastorate when the church house was only in its incipiency, where our dear Bro. Joseph Moore of blessed memory left it, with only house covered in and weatherboarded; and whereas, he has done so much in perfecting Bro. Moore's plans, so that now we have a good house to worship in, and has in all the intricate affairs of the church been a safe counsellor and advisor, and under whose administration as pastor the membership has increased from fifteen to fifty members in a stronghold of opposition, and has so wisely demeaned himself that not a breath of reproach has fallen on his name;

Resolved, That the Moore's Chapel church would recommend any who may be in need of a pastor that Bro. Merrell is one of the safest pastors and advisors they can secure, a fair preacher, an exemplary Christian and a citizen that any church would be fortunate in securing. J. D. HACKNEY,
E. K. MOFFITT,

Strong Testimony.

Dear Bro. Batley:—Having seen a copy of the BIBLICAL RECORDER with Bro. C. A. Jenkens' sermon on "Close Communion." I cannot be satisfied without it. I am a Baptist, and wish every Baptist in America could read Bro. Jenkens sermon. I think it is the best thing I ever read outside of the Bible. If it does not make a man any stronger Baptist it will encourage him to know he is right. Enclosed find six cents in stamps for which send me a copy of the RECORDER. D. B. BENNETT.

We have about fifty copies of the RECORDER containing Bro. Jenkens' sermon, and we will send one free to each of the first fifty subscribers sent us at fifty cents for nineteen weeks. That is, the RECORDER twenty weeks for 50 cents.—BIBLICAL RECORDER, Raleigh, N. C.

Nothing can be substituted for the Royal Baking Powder and give as good results.

No other leavening agent will make such light, sweet, delicious, wholesome food.

If some grocers urge another baking powder upon you, it is because of the greater profit upon it. This of itself is evidence of the superiority of the "Royal." To give greater profit the other must be a lower cost powder, and to cost less it must be made with cheaper and inferior materials, and thus, though selling for the same, give less value to the consumer.

To insure the finest cake, the most wholesome food, be sure that no substitute for Royal Baking Powder is accepted by you.

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs.

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON, RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its massing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

All Well with Bro. Bostick and the Gospel Mission.

Dear Recorder:—We are now in the prefectural city of Taianfu, having reached here two weeks ago. We are over two hundred miles from Pingtu, the most interior station of the F. M. Board. We are over sixty miles from the nearest English Baptist station, and sixty miles from the nearest point at which Presbyterians live. No foreigner has hitherto lived in this Prefecture except some high church of England people. The prefecture contains seven counties and about 2,000,000 of human beings—lost in sin and idolatry.

We and the Crawfords will probably live here in this city, while the others will occupy as soon as they can three or four other cities.

This is a fine region of country. The climate high and dry. The mountains rise all around us except at the west where is a great plain that extends across the Yellow river and far on to the west across other provinces.

The people here seem friendly. Some efforts were made last spring by some wealthy persons to oppose our getting houses here, but that seems now to have passed away. We are frequently called devils by the boys, but they will ere long come to know that we are brethren and be friendly. We move about freely in the streets and preach, and can generally find some apparently willing listeners.

Our trip from Pingtu here was a hard one, we being on the road twelve days and our older little girl being sick all the way. We are very grateful now to be here and to have all well. Specially were we glad to find Dr and Sister Crawford recovered from their extreme illness which lasted through a large part of the summer. They are now in quite good health and hard at work.

Good bless you and all the brethren.

Fraternally, G. P. BOSTICK.

Making Teachers and Cultivating the Industrial Arts.

An unique entertainment in the way of a "County Fair" was given by the students of the State Normal and Industrial School on Friday night, November 30th. All of the representations were well gotten up and nothing more charming could be imagined than the panorama of scenes, from the rollicking "Jack Tars" of New Hanover to the star adorned girls of Buncombe, the "Land of the Sky."

The Wayne county girls were dressed in the faded costume of the picaninny with faces blacked and each one carried "dat watermillian." They danced and sang in the good old fashioned way till one of the professors was so inspired with the performance that he jumped up on the rostrum and began to "pat" for them.

* * * * *

Rockingham took the prize, which was a beautiful picture of Pilot Mountain. Prof. M. C. S. Noble, of Wilmington presented it. The two young ladies in front carried a cradle in which they were rocking a ham.

The Guilford girls made a fine appearance. Part of them wore the suits of the "Guilford Grays" and the others were dressed in white and gold, the Normal colors, wearing small white crowns on which were written, "State Normal School."

* * * * *

Iredellites appeared in unique but unstable costumes of Statesville Landmarks, trimmed with roots and herbs.

There was also a banner with Vice President Stevenson's picture and the words, "Our Adlai," on it. We stopped on the rostrum to sing a few verses of doggerel to the tune of Dr. McIver's favorite selection, the "Old North State."

[This appeared in the Statesville Landmark, and seems to have been written by a student.]

The following appeared in the Concord Standard:

"The Wayne county girls were dressed in the bright costumes of the picaninny and each one carried 'Dat Water Million.' They danced and sang in the good old fashioned way, and so inspired one of the professors that he hoppe l up on the rostrum and patted for them."

Now, that was inspiring, wasn't it?

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

Mrs. Vance will soon publish a biography of her husband, the late Senator Vance.

Vice-President Stevenson has been summoned to Asheville at the bedside of his invalid daughter, who is not expected to live.

A party of Hollanders, now residing in Michigan, have purchased land in the vicinity of Raleigh, where they will engage extensively in the cultivation of celery.

The joint legislative committee appointed to examine the books, vouchers, etc., of the State Treasurer have completed their work. The books were found to be in a very satisfactory condition.

What threatened to be a serious strike by all employees of the Southern Railway Company has been averted by an amicable agreement in Washington between the railroad officials and representatives of the employees.

A Charlotte gentleman has purchased a large farm on which he intends to place one thousand head of Texas cattle. They will be fed entirely on bran and meal obtained from the cotton seed oil mills of that city.

The agricultural department has received reports which indicate an increase of 100 per cent. in the raising of hogs in this State for the past two years. It is also said that the cotton acreage will be materially reduced.

Lou Parrish, a seventeen-year-old white girl, convicted of fatally stabbing a young white man who openly defamed her character, and sentenced to seventeen years hard labor in the penitentiary, has been pardoned on the condition that she be placed in a reformatory for criminals of her character. Accordingly she has been sent to a Baltimore reformatory, where she will remain until the authorities consider her character reformed.

General News.

An automatic gallows was recently successfully operated in Connecticut for the first time.

President Cleveland has been spending a few days in the vicinity of Georgetown, South Carolina, hunting duck.

The bill, which provides for the completion of the Nicaragua Canal by the United States Government has received the attention of the Senate during the past week.

Eugene V. Debs, leader of the great Chicago strike, has been sentenced to six months imprisonment for contempt of court in disregarding an injunction. An appeal has been taken.

It has been decided by the Federal Court that Gov. Tillman had no right to take the arms from the State troops when they disobeyed orders. On the face of it we believe he does have such right.

Congress has perfected arrangements making collection of the income tax possible; 308 additional deputy collectors are to be appointed and $227,095 appropriated. Collections begin July 1st.

While engaged in a prize fight in New Orleans, one Bowen received a severe blow at the hands of Geo. Lavigne, which resulted in his death. Prize fighting will hereafter be prohibited in New Orleans.

S. C. Seeley, the defalting book keeper of the Shoe & Leather Bank of New York who stole over $800 000 and fled to Chicago, has been captured and returned to New York where he pleaded guilty to the charge of false entry on the books and abstracting the funds of the bank.

Joyous throbbing life offered to the chronic invalid would be regarded with distrust! Long suffering leaves the patient hopeless—he believes no more in any cure. Would that such hopeless ones could read the testimonials of

Brown's Iron Bitters

They point a way to relief and health, and they are genuine!

SWEET WATER, TEXAS.

For twelve long years I was a great sufferer from kidney and other troubles, and at times was confined to my bed. I tried a number of medicines recommended by sympathizing friends and prescribed by physicians without receiving the least benefit. Then I gave Brown's Iron Bitters a trial, and two bottles brought me off my back. Today I am well and hearty. W. T. COOK.

and then this:

TEN BROOKE, TENN.

After being under the care of a physician for eight years, I commenced taking Brown's Iron Bitters with the result that I am entirely cured. It is the best remedy I have ever taken, and I certainly wish that every woman suffering as I did could know its value.

SMITHVILLE, GA., Nov. 3d. 1894.

Dear Sir:—Since March, 1893, I have used the Electropoise in my family with satisfactory results, for rheumatism, neuralgia, indigestion, kidney trouble and fever. My wife, for whom it was purchased, had been a great sufferer for a long time, her health being completely broken down. Now she is in better health than for fifteen years though she has not taken a drop of medicine since beginning its use. I would not be without it for many times its cost.

Very truly, G. M. PATTERSON,

Give the Farmer Facts.

What the farmer wants is facts. No one has realized this more than the great seed firm of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich., who for forty years have been studying the wants and condition of planters, large and small, and as a result have created the largest seed business in the whole world. Without doubt, a strict adherence to the policy of dealing in facts represents the secret of their success. They know their seeds are right before they are sent to the many thousand dealers from whom the planter gets them. The dealer knows this to be a fact requiring no further question, and the planter finds it to be a substantial fact when harvest time comes. Another illustration of the value of this method is found in Ferry's Seed Annual, in which there is nothing but facts. Facts that prove of the greatest value to every planter; facts about how, when and where to plant, that can be had from no other source. There are no worthy facts left out, and no unworthy theories let in. This book is sent free to every one who asks for it. A postal card with your name and address sent the firm will bring it to you.

A Strong Endorsement.

The Rev. Chas. A. G. Thomas, pastor of the West Market Street Baptist church, Greensboro, N. C., in a recent letter to the Atlantic Baptist, Norfolk, Va., under the head of "Personals and Locals" says:—

Judge W. H. Eller has again become manager of the Greensboro Keeley Institute. Judge Eller is a Baptist, as is also Dr. W. C. Melton, the physician in charge. They are both members of the Greensboro Baptist church. Judge Eller is one of our best attendants; but the doctor, like the most of doctors, finds the work of visiting the sick of more importance than church worship. However, the former manager says he is the best on the treatment of the morphine habit he has ever known.

I am sometimes asked what I think of the Keeley Institute. My answer is: If I were in the chains of the drink habit I should get to Keeley as fast as steam could carry me. I wish every drinking man could come to this Institute. It is the best thing on earth outside of religion. A Baptist deacon who was saved by the treatment said it helped his religion very much There have been since I have been in Greensboro lawyers, merchants, teachers, preachers and women, all of whom in joyful words bear testimony to this wonderful treatment. I have in mind now a noble young woman who was brought under the power of morphine and drawn into an early grave, but she might have been saved had she taken this treatment. I have endorsed from the pulpit, and expect to bear testimony to what I have seen here. It does not save all, but the great majority of those who come are freed from the appetite which has cursed the lives of so many. CHAS. A. G. THOMAS

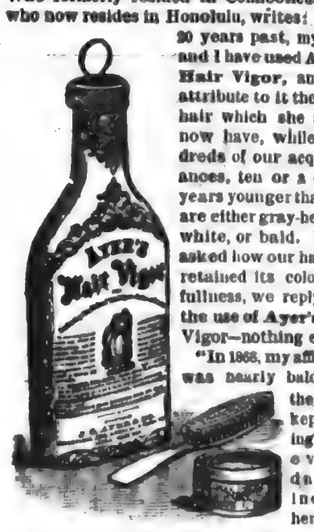
DIED.

WILLIAMS—Died November 27th, 1894, in Franklin county, N. C., sister Charity Helen Williams, daughter of Rev. Matthew S. and Lucinda Williams, in her sixty-third year. She was a consistent Christian and a member of the Baptist church fifty-two years, and passed away triumphantly.

After funeral service conducted by the writer, her remains were interred in the family graveyard at home. I. T. NEWTON.

EVES—Charles C. Eves departed this life near Salem church, Pasquotank county, Nov. 24th, 1894, in the thirty-ninth year of his age. He leaves a wife and eight children to mourn the loss of a devoted husband and fond and faithful father. He was an active and well known citizen. As a member of the Salem church he was frequently honored as her delegate to associations and union meetings, and always took an active part in church affairs. The church was packed at his funeral, and the deepest feeling manifested by all. His body was laid by the side of his honored father in the churchyard and his spirit commended to the Father in heaven. His illness was brief. He felt no fear as he approached the dark valley of the shadow of death, knowing that his Chief Shepherd with rod and staff had gone before. C. S. B.

WYNN—Died at her home in Chatham county, N. C., on the afternoon of Nov. 15th, 1894, Mrs. Irene Olive Wynn, in the forty-eighth year of her age. She possessed unvarying gentleness and fortitude, and a piety so retiring, as rarely to disclose itself in words, but so influential as to produce uniform benevolence of conduct. Her last days were particularly striking, and I do not know that in the course of reading the story of mankind, and still less in my observations upon the existing portion, I ever met with anything so unostentatiously beautiful. After bidding her husband and children farewell, and requesting them to meet her in heaven, she turned to her sister for whom she had evinced inexpressible affection and said, "I hope I will go to sleep and never wake again in this world." Her prayer was answered. W. T. MC.



GODDIN—Died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. F. P. Dunn, in Forestville, N. C., Nov. 17th, 1894, Mrs. A. R. Goddin, in the sixty-third year of her age. She was the eldest daughter of Capt. B. W. Branch of Halifax county. In 1849 she was married to Mr. Edward Tillery of Halifax, and in 1863 to Dr. N. A. H. Goddin.

On the threshold of young womanhood the Saviour won her heart, and for two score years or more her citizenship was in heaven. Unassuming, diffident even, she was nevertheless positive in her convictions and obedient to the behests of duty. In church work she was zealous and efficient, never declining, while health permitted, to undertake any task that might be assigned her. Hers was often the cup of bitterness, but faith and hope were also hers and made her submissive and brave. She heroically strove to live, but did not seem to dread to die.

The Forestville church sustains a grievous loss, and all who knew her mourn. To the bereaved daughter and to all the sorrowing ones may the God of all comfort graciously reveal himself in this dark hour. R.

A Gentleman

Who formerly resided in Connecticut, but who now resides in Honolulu, writes: "For 20 years past, my wife and I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor, and we attribute to it the dark hair which she and I now have, while hundreds of our acquaintances, ten or a dozen years younger than we, are either gray-headed, white, or bald. When asked how our hair has retained its color and fullness, we reply, 'By the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor—nothing else.'"

"In 1868, my affianced was nearly bald, and the hair kept falling out every day. I induced her to use Ayer's Hair Vigor, and very soon, it not only checked any further loss of hair, but produced an entirely new growth, which has remained luxuriant and glossy to this day. I can recommend this preparation to all in need of a genuine hair-restorer. It is all that it is claimed to be."—Antonio Alarrun, Bastrop, Tex.

Harper's Magazine

IN 1895

The Simpletons, a new novel by Thomas Hardy, will be begun in the December 1894, and continued to November, 1895. Whoever may be one's favorite among English novelists, it will be conceded by all critics that Thomas Hardy stands foremost as a master artist in fiction, and The Simpletons may be expected to arouse enthusiasm not inferior in degree to that which has marked Trilby—the most successful story of the year. Another leading feature will be the Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc, by the Sieur Louis de Conte, Her Page and Secretary, under which guise the most popular of living American magazine writers will present the story of the Maid of Orleans. In the January Number will appear a profusely illustrated paper on Charleston and the Carolinas, the first of a series of Southern Papers.

Northern Africa is attracting more attention than at any other time since it was the seat of empires. The next volume of HARPER'S MAGAZINE will contain four illustrated articles on this region, and three of them will depict the present life there. Julian Ralph will prepare for the MAGAZINE a series of eight stories, depicting typical phases of Chinese Life and Manners. Besides the long stories, there will begin in the January Number the first chapters of A Three-Part Novelette, by Richard Harding Davis—the longest work yet attempted by this writer. Complete short stories by popular writers will continue to be a feature of the MAGAZINE.

Send for Illustrated Prospectus.

The Volumes of the MAGAZINE begin with the Numbers for June and December of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of order. Cloth cases, for binding, 50 cents each—by mail, postpaid. Title page and Index sent on application.

Remittances should be made by Postoffice Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

ST. NICHOLAS
FOR YOUNG FOLKS
Edited by Mary Mapes Dodge. IN 1895.

The greatest year in the history of this magazine, now without a rival in its field, is the one just closing. Plans for the coming year assure even greater success than in the past.

RUDYARD KIPLING

wrote his famous "Jungle Stories" for ST. NICHOLAS, and it is a welcome announcement that these will be continued in 1895.

NAPOLEON
FOR YOUNG READERS.

While THE CENTURY will have for its leading feature the new Life of the French Emperor by Prof. Sloane, one of the most popular of ST. NICHOLAS writers takes the same character for his inspiration.

A BOY OF THE FIRST EMPIRE,
BY ELBRIDGE S. BROOKS,

is the story of a little lad from the streets of Paris (but of good family), who renders a service to Napoleon, and becomes one of his pages and finally an aide. He is with him at the most critical times of his life—at the departure for Elba, in the glories of the life at Fontainebleau, and finally at Waterloo. The story glows with pageantry, and is a truthful and accurate account, based upon the best authorities and verified by the latest information, of the life of "the man of destiny." It is really a delightful story-history of Napoleon.

WEST POINT AND MAN-OF-WAR LIFE

will receive attention, Lieutenant Putnam writing of cadet life at the military academy, while Ensign Elliott, of the flag-ship "Chicago," will describe the experiences of our hardy seamen on the modern ships of war.

INSPIRING TALES
FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT will write a series to be called "HERO-TALES FROM AMERICAN HISTORY," recounting famous deeds of heroism about which young people ought to know. Prof. BRANDER MATTHEWS will include in his entertaining papers on "THE GREAT AMERICAN AUTHORS" accounts of the lives of Bryant, Emerson, Longfellow, Hawthorne, Whittier, Poe and Lowell. STORIES OF FAMOUS HORSES in history and mythology—Bucephalus, Napoleon's and Sheridan's horses, etc.—will be told by James Baldwin, author of "STORIES FROM THE NORTHERN MYTHS." CITY FIRE DEPARTMENTS will be treated, and there will be two or three papers on THE BOYS' BRIGADE. THE SERIAL STORIES are many. One called "CHIRP AND THE WONDERFUL LAMP" recounts the marvelous adventures of a modern boy who became the accidental purchaser of Aladdin's lamp and summoned the jinn while cleaning it. A delightful story of college girls, "THE THREE FRESHMEN," will appeal to every girl; and "TEDDY AND CARROTS," James Otis's serial of newsboy life, will be read by every boy. A serial story by FRANCES COURTENAY BAYLOR is one of the features.

Farewell, Old Year.

Farewell, Old Year, we walk no more together;
I catch the sweetness of thy latest sigh;
And, crowned with yellow brake and withered heather,
I see thee stand beneath this cloudy sky.

Here in the dim light of a gray December,
We part in smiles, and yet we met in tears;
Watching thy chilly dawn, I well remember,
I thought thee saddest born of all the years.

I knew not then what precious gifts were hidden
Under the mist that veiled thy path from sight;
I knew not then that joy would come unbidden,
To make thy closing hours divinely bright.

I only saw the dreary clouds unbroken,
I only heard the splash of icy rain;
And in that winter gloom I found no token
To tell me that the sun would shine again.

O dear Old Year! I wronged a Father's kindness;
I would not trust Him with my load of care.
I stumbled on in weariness and blindness,
And lo! He blessed me with an answered prayer!

Good-bye, kind Year, we walk no more together,
But here in quiet happiness we part;
And from thy wreath of faded fern and heather
I take some sprays and wear them on my heart.

—Christian Age.

Christmas.

The silence of the solemn midnight, centuries ago, was broken by angels chanting over the birth of a babe, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will to men." Now Christendom pauses in its industries, that it may commemorate the nativity of that babe, the son of a Jewish peasant girl.

It does well. Many who observe Christmas Day have not hailed Him as Master; but on believer and unbeliever has fallen the benediction of His life. Whatever of contrast there is in politics, society, religion, between the first century and the nineteenth, is due to the advent of that Jewish peasant.

Paganism left man as it found him. Christianity has elevated him. Alone of all religions it has met the cravings of the human heart. When He whose birth Christmas celebrates came into the world, all men, save the Jew, were without God and without hope. He revealed unto them God, the Father and the power of an endless life.

Might had been consecrated as rightly, cruelty as law, and selfishness as a principle. This Jewish peasant taught men so to pray, that to the fatherhood of God they should link the brotherhood of man, and thus learn justice, mercy, and love. These seem elementary truths to Christendom, but to the Pagan world they were the darkest of unsolved problems.

Then the tendency was to barbarism: now, through Christianity, a sustained moral progress is possible to nations. And whatever of advance there has been, during the nineteen centuries, in a beneficent civilization, is but the expression of that expulsive and impulsive life which the Christ breathed into the world.

Paganism knew nothing of those political dogmas on which the new civilization is founded, the equality of men and the sacredness of human rights. They are trite words now. Why! Because the religion of Christ has emphasized the equality of all men before the Father. It has taught that there is no man so degraded but that to him may come the right and the power to become a son of God.

No Pagan religion held out a hand to woman. But the Nazarene enforced the fact that, to use the quaint thought of Matthew Henry, she had not been taken from his feet, to be beneath him, nor from his head, to be above him, but from his side, to be his companion. A woman bathed the Saviour's feet—fitting homage to Him who enthroned her beside man.

That the world might not become pandemonium, heathenism made it a penal colony, in which there was no law but force, no code save that of blood. Christianity has transformed the prison into the school of reform. It was modulated force by right, and tempered justice with mercy. Compare the criminal code of Christendom with that of Pagan Rome, and it will be seen how the Son of Mary has cast out devils.

Labor, education, philanthropy, international law, and morals would, if we had the space, enable us to make still more vivid the contrast between this Christmas, and that whose dawning the angels chanted.

Slowly, but surely, the kingdom of the Messiah is leavening the nations of the earth. What it did for Huns, Vandals, Saxons, Goths, it is doing for India, China, Japan, and the islands of the sea.

At this Christmas season, we, surveying the illustrations of the angelic song given by eighteen centuries, may add thereto the inspiring Gloria, "As it was, is now, and ever shall be, world without end, Amen."—Youth's Companion.

A Wonderful Cure for Cancer.

There is no further need to cut cancers out with knives or burn them out with plasters. Dr. Scott Mason of Richmond, Va., has a cure for this dreadful affliction that supercedes all other methods in positive cure and rapid healing. Not only this, but it is painless when used and the only cure suitable for old people. It seeks out the diseased growths and destroys their vitality, causing the cancer to pass away leaving only an ordinary healthy sore which rapidly heals. The cure is specially favorable for cancer of mouth, nose, ear, and other delicate parts on account of high sensitiveness and great difficulty to use present remedies. Cases heretofore considered incurable are being turned over to Dr. Mason from all parts of the country and are rapidly cured.

Dr. Mason's cure is sent by express everywhere and applied at home without further cost. Those afflicted should write to Dr. Scott Mason, Richmond, Va., giving full description of case and get his price for a cure.

The Christmas Carols.

George Moore, the eminent English philanthropist, who has recently died, began life in extreme poverty.

His biographer, Samuel Smiles, gives a pitiful account of his crying in the streets of London because he had no friends and could not find work.

His middle life was passed in well earned affluence, and his last years were spent in the grand old castle of the ancient Percys, which he had gazed upon in awe in boyhood, and which his great wealth at last enabled him to purchase for a home.

His moral life was a succession of growths.

He was exposed to great temptations in youth, but when he came to feel that the tendency of his life was wrong in any direction, he arrested the wrong course by prompt decision.

It was these decisions, these constant turnings from evil courses into life's best ways, that led him at last to a career of worldly success, piety, and philanthropy.

He thus describes one of the dangerous periods of his first apprenticeship:

"My master gave way to drinking, and set before me a bad example. I lodged in the public house nearly all the time, and saw nothing but wickedness and drinking. I played cards almost every night. I sometimes played the whole night through. Gambling was my passion and it might have been my ruin."

It was Christmas morning. The apprentice lad had spent the night at the card-table. He had retired long after midnight, with a conscience ill at ease, and the prospect of dismissal from his master's service before him.

Suddenly his ear was arrested by strains of music.

The gray light was breaking, and the waits, as is the custom in England, were abroad playing carols.

The music brought before his mind, like a vision, his old home, the future dangers of his present course, and, in contrast with his own eclipsed life, the luminous Bethlehem story.

"Come, all ye faithful,
Joyful and triumphant,
Come ye, O come ye to Bethlehem!
Come and adore him.
Born the king of angels,
Let's hasten to adore him,
Let's hasten to adore him,
Let's hasten to adore him,
Christ, our Lord."

"Better thoughts," he says, "came over me with the sweet carols. I felt overwhelmed with remorse and penitence. I thought of my dear father, and feared that I might break his heart and bring his gray hairs in sorrow to the grave. I resolved to give up card-playing and gambling. This resolve, by the grace of God, I have firmly carried out."

Many years passed, and George Moore's life became an expression of gratitude to God for the grace that had been given him at these critical periods of youth. "George Moore's Christmases" became a famous feature of London's charities, and he himself had learned to sing in spirit the refrain:

"Let's hasten to adore him,
Let's hasten to adore him,
Let's hasten to adore him,
Christ, our Lord!"

It's Dangerous Ground

that you stand on—with a cough or a cold, and your blood impure. Out of just these conditions comes Consumption.

You must do something. In the earlier stages of Consumption, and in all the conditions that lead to it, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a certain remedy. This scrofulous affection of the lungs, like every other form of Scrofula, can be cured by it. In severe, lingering Coughs, all Bronchial, Throat, and Lung Affections, and every disease that can be reached through the blood, it is the only medicine so effective that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back. Nervous prostration and debility are conquered by it.

So thorough is the excellence of Ayer's Hair Vigor that it can be used with benefit by any person, no matter what may be the condition of the hair, and, in every case, it occasions satisfaction and pleasure, in addition to the benefit which invariably comes from its use.

Two sorrie thynges there be—
Aye, three:
A nest from which ye fledglings have been taken,
A lamb forsaken,
A petal from ye wilde rose rudely shaken.

Of gladde thynges there be more—
Aye, four:
A larke above ye olde nest blithely singing,
A wild rose clinging
In safety to ye rock, a shepherde bringing
A lamb, found, in his arms, and Chrystmesse bells a ringing. [Selected.

Dust baths are of more importance than some people think. A fowl that is not provided with this accommodation has no means of helping to fight the lice.

A "RUN DOWN" and "used-up" feeling is the first warning that your liver isn't doing its work. With a torpid liver and the impure blood that follows it, you're an easy prey to all sorts of ailments. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures every one of them.

PIERCE Guarantees a CURE.

MRS. BRANSFORD.

I can truthfully say that I believe your Golden Medical Discovery saved my life. When I began your treatment two years ago, I had been given up by the Doctor, and my friends had lost all hope of my recovery. I had suffered for years with torpid liver; I had chronic pleurisy and catarrh in a very bad form. Attended with hemorrhages—was confined to my bed two months. In a few days after beginning your medicine I could perceive a slight change for the better; in three months I felt almost like a new person. Yours very gratefully,

A PRIMER OF MUSIC

By WM. MASON, MUS. DOC. and W. S. B. MATHEWS.

This work covers entirely new ground. It is not alone a Primer of the Pianoforte, with information about the Keyboard Notations and peculiarities of the instrument, but much more. It is a

Primer of Musicianship, having in it the foundations of Harmony, Musical Form, Principle of Phrasing, the correct way of playing all the embellishments and ornaments, the

and other interesting and mind-awakening instruction. While intended for the use of young pupils, the ground it covers is so much more extensive than that usually covered by elementary piano lessons, that pupils as far along as the fourth and fifth grades will find here much matter which they have previously neglected.

Some recent matters of interest and probable importance are:—

The last days and the adjournment, by limitation, of the Lexow committee. This committee was appointed by a Republican legislature to investigate the condition of affairs in the Democratic city of New York. The committee has brought enough corruption to light to more than justify its existence, but nevertheless, similar committees ought to be appointed to investigate the government of cities in Republican hands. The police of New York are appointed by a non-partizan commission, and there are representatives of all parties on the force. Corruption was found on either hand. Byrnes, the superintendent of police, indisputably the chief detective manager living, has resigned his position, the Lexow investigation being the occasion. He will probably be retained, as the city cannot dispense with his services. He knows rogues and their methods, and he manages men as not one man in a million can. Byrnes and Parkhurst are enemies. Parkhurst deserves great credit for his work in the renovation of political New York. It is thought that the Lexow committee will be reappointed by the Legislature now in session, in order that the investigation may be as thorough as possible. The prosecuting officer for this committee, lawyer Goff, should be given credit for admirable, honest and unswerving work. He has been elected Recorder, succeeding the somewhat notable Recorder Smythe.—

Jno. Burns of England, chief laboring-man's advocate in the world, is making speeches in America. He is meeting with considerable criticism. He is reported to be an honest, vigorous man of the people. He has not used the confidence that the people of England repose in him for other than the people's good. He is not an office-seeker; and this, though negative, is a virtue worth the having.—

***

The Carlisle bill, for the relief and renovation of our currency system, the early death of which has, from the first, been so promising that it has seemed futile to publish its details, has not succeeded, and probably will not, in passing the House of Representatives. It is generally believed that the Nicaragua canal bill cannot get through the Senate; and if it does, the House would not approve it. Several appropriation measures have passed the House. It is probably not as generally known as it might be that our National Legislature has not reached that degree of presumption that has been exhibited by legislative bodies which make eternal appropriations. Congress has to vote every year for appropriations for the President's salary, for the President's butler's salary, for the pensions and other expenditures. Our North Carolina Legislature has been making eternal appropriations to the State University, the State Normal and Industrial, and to other institutions.

In Nebraska there is great suffering. Crops failed, prices low, mine products a drug on a weak market, the people ill-prepared for the rigors of winter; some are dying, thousands are suffering. Carloads of food are being sent from many cities.—

Leading Populists have been in session at St. Louis, considering the principles for which they stand, and the ways and means of achieving them. The meeting was not altogether harmonious, the delegates differing, some asserting that silver free coinage at sixteen to one must be their shibboleth, others that government ownership or control of railway and telegraph systems, etc., ought also to be a part of their platform.

In Europe all seems quiet. Mr. Gladstone, every one will rejoice to know, has recovered his eye-sight. One never hears from the new Czar, Emperor William appears to be settling down, and the new President of France is keeping steadily quiet.—

The oppression and horrifying massacre of Armenians by Kurds and Turks, has been the subject of several revolting reports. It has been stated on good authority that 15,000 Armenians were killed, neither age nor sex being respected. Thirty five villages were sacked and burned. The occasion of the massacre was the failure of the Americans to pay grinding taxes levied by both Kurds and Turks. The English government is taking an aggresive interest in the situation and will probably seize the opportunity to gain further foothold in the East.

It is thought that peace between Japan and China will be shortly effected. Hon. John W. Foster, one of the most distinguished citizens of the United States, probably our most astute diplomat, has left America to intercede with Japan in behalf of China. Japan seems to be inclined to exercise a magnanimous spirit in victory.

This war has been a fruitful source of news in a dull season. Once in a while, as on November 6th, when something really happened, the papers forgot the Orient, and the war assumed its proper insignificant place. But when news became scarce, seafights, reprisals, falling forts and probable subjugations of all China, would again become frequent.

A missionary told us not long ago that fighting was yet going on in Brazil. The papers were once filled with accounts of rebellion in that country, but we had been thinking that peace was entirely restored months ago. Two years hence the Japan–China war will appear as the Brazilian rebellion now appears, except probably the former will have yielded results of more considerable significance.

Japan is being civilized. Its influence will be for civilizing China. The war may result in a general opening of the gates, a demolition of a barbarous traditionalism, and the advent of life and progress.

It is not a task to find good people who are sincerely apprehensive of an evil day, if a change in the government of the city of Raleigh results from the late change in the government of the State. In any direction one may hear expressions of grave foreboding. It is no great matter to meet up with numbers of people who profess to believe that the present condition of affairs is good enough; the office-holders all appear to think so, and their relations and house servants probably share their good opinion. In the intense heaviness of their office loving hearts, some have been known to wax prophetic, voicing unspeakably direful visions. Others burn with indignation at the bare suggestion that improvement is possible; and the ominous mutterings in one quarter would cause us to fear that "good society" will turn up its nose and shake the dust of the capital city from its disgusted feet, but we happen to know that good society cannot buy a ticket, even if perchance it should be told whither to go.

Now we make no claim to foreknowledge. We cannot say what will be; but we can say there is room and need for improvement. We do know some facts, and we are cognizant of some principles. We know that any community that permits the sale of liquor can be improved; we know that one in which boys may throw dice or play pool for drinks needs improvement. And we know more: A city in which on Christmas eve and all day Christmas men and boys were pooling money and throwing dice and drawing lots for cigars, canes, gold coins and other things,—we know that it is not a task to improve the government of such a city. We do know that in Raleigh, in the business portion, almost within speaking distance of the market place, that center of authority and well-fed, rotund dignity, men and boys have been engaged in a species of gambling—openly, indeed flagrantly—identical with that which the power of the United States was required to root out of Louisiana. The meanwhile our police have kept the even tenor of their unutterable watchfulness, all about the market place has dozed and dreamed in blessed assurance that our city is the best and safest under heaven; Dignity has kept her high seat, Respectability has taken its grocery-store drinks and gone its good natured way, and the fathers of the young men and the boys pooling money for chances on tobacco or drinks have been painting pictures of negro rule, or looking at such pictures more realistically depicted by some office-holder, dreading the advent of the Legislature. Negro rule is worse; but is negro rule necessarily the alternative?

The principles involved in this matter of municipal government are not in party platforms, and they are the more wholesome because they are not. Is it gambling, that three or five or twenty five men pool five or twenty five or fifty cents each on some article, the thrower of the highest number by dice to take the article? Is it against the law to gamble? Grant these affirmatively, and then the question and core of the matter is determined as one holds whether mayors and police are set to enforce the law or are maintained for ornamental purposes. A moral people should see to it—it is a duty, not a privilege—that those set to protect their interests have the moral conviction and the courage to stand up against liquor sellers, petty gambling-dens and other menaces to good government.

Ninety-nine of every hundred men chosen to office by the people are ambitious of advancement; a greater proportion even than this are desirous of at least holding the office that has been placed in their hands. There is unquestionable attraction in public life.

Men in office are solicitous of the public attitude in respect to them, as indicated by individual exponents. The larger part of the people never come in contact with their representatives, never say or write them a word in regard to their desires and opinions. A few are careful to have their men know that they voted for them to do thus or so, and that if they do not "vote right" they will vote against him next time. These few rule the country—these and the people who use money instead of ink or breath and threats.

A practical instance may suffice. Nearly all the voters in North Carolina recognize the evils of liquor-selling; but only an insignificant proportion of them make the extinction of this evil one of their aims, or if they do, they do not make it known. The liquor sellers, on the other hand, stand boldly forth and declare that they will wield all their influence—and they boast wildly—against any man who dare oppose their interests. And the legislator, seeing that he will lose a supporter by voting against liquor, the attitude of indifference on the part of the general public assuring him that the latter will not be likely to take note how he votes on the matter, naturally votes for liquor-selling, or approves it by not taking an aggressive stand against the evil.

The duty of all men of moral sense is plain: support no man who supports whiskey men, and let the man and the world know it.

It is easy to write a letter to the men who represent your county. If two or ten or twenty people can be gotten to sign the same letter, so much the better.

Extinction of the saloon means more to North Carolina than all possible immigration, more than a decade of material development,—means more, intellectually and physically, than can be comprehended.

Christian Unity.

"Being dead yet speaketh."

The year 1892 is numbered with the past, and many dear ones have gone with the old year. It seems that more preachers have died in the last year than usual. The new year is here, but like the old, is passing away; "be ye also ready." Owing to the political strife of 1892, doubtless there is a good deal of disunion and bad feeling among the Christian class of our grand old country. We hope this spirit will all vanish, and like the old year be numbered with the past.

God's children need to be more of a oneness. The strength and beauty of the churches consists in Christian unity. Sad to say that some have refused to take their denominational paper; churches have disagreed on pastors, &c. Shame upon us who are called the salt of the earth and light of the world. Think of our dear Lord as he pleads for the unity of his redeemed. John 17. "Holy Father keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one as we are," "that they all may be one, as thou, Father, art in me and I in thee that they all may be one in us."

St Paul dwells much on this subject. "By one spirit are we all baptized into one body and have all been made to drink of the same spirit." I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no division among you, but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment."

From the Lord's intercessory prayer we learn that all who are the subjects of grace are the gift of the Father to the Son, that to such the Son gives eternal life; that the beginning of this eternal life is to know the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom he has sent; that this knowledge is imparted by Jesus Christ through the spirit of truth, the comforter; that this knowledge is of a sanctifying nature, and leads to a separation from the world and a union to each other. Hence all strife, division and contention disfigure the beauty and tarnish the glory of the church. Paul sharply reproves the church at Corinth for their want of unity. "Ye are yet carnal, for whereas there is among you envying and strife and divisions, are ye not carnal and walk as men?"

It is not expected for all who profess to believe in the truths of the Bible to see everything alike and follow in every minute particular the same track of thinking and acting. But this unity may and ought to be maintained in the grand essentials of the gospel.

Dear brethren, as God has let us live to see another year come in, let us get closer to our Saviour; let us come confessing our sins, and praying the Holy Spirit to purge away the old leaven of malice and wickedness, and fill us with sincerity and truth that we may become a new lump.

"Sweet is the joy by those possess'd
Who know and love the Lord:
No guilty fears disturb their rest
While leaning on his word."

J. B. MAYNARD.

Morrisville, N. C.

The Royall Chair.

It is now nearly two years since suggestions came from many quarters that a Chair in the College which he had so long and faithfully served should bear the name of Doctor William Royall, and should be endowed as a perpetual monument to his memory. A move was made in this direction at the Alumni banquet during the Commencement exercises of 1893. When it became more and more evident that the clouds of financial stringency and panic were lowering over the land, it did not seem judicious to the Executive Committee to press the movement at that time. All efforts were, therefore, temporarily suspended.

Money is probably scarcer, and the prices of many staple productions are certainly lower than two years ago. But there is now a spirit of hopefulness and an abundance of supplies. This was not the case then. The Trustees and very many of the Alumni of the College have come to feel that active efforts should be no longer delayed. That this decision is wise will hardly be questioned by any one when it is remembered that, unless we at once avail ourselves of it, we cannot expect the generous proposition of the Baptist Education Society to remain open to the College. This offer is that if the friends of the College will pledge at once $30,000, the Society will agree to give $5,000. Three years are allowed in which to collect the cash. The Society will pay its proportion from year to year on a certificate of our Treasurer as to actual receipts.

This work ought to be, and doubtless will be, largely done by the Alumni of the College. I am sending now to old students in every direction three blank notes, carefully numbered and recorded, with a brief printed statement. Some who may receive them may not, upon reflecting, feel it to be their duty to give anything. From these I ask nothing. In all of my previous agency work, I have taken for granted that each man knew his own business better than I did and needed no help from me in interpreting his own duty after knowing the facts. So I say now, as I have said in previous movements, let every man be persuaded in his own mind. We desire no money in our endowment which is not given cheerfully and from right motives.

But I know that there are hundreds who have greater or less ability to help; and I believe that these will count it a privilege to aid in perpetuating the memory of a great Christian thinker, scholar and teacher, and in placing upon solid foundations another Chair in the College.

I very much hope that I shall be able to announce, ere very long, that the $30,000 have been subscribed, and that notes for this amount are in the Treasurer's hands. But this, it is to be hoped, will be but the beginning of a general movement toward giving the College, within the next two or three years, something like an adequate endowment for doing the work which the Baptists of North Carolina have the right to expect and demand of it. Efforts will be made to reach the great Baptist family of North Carolina as has never been done before. I hope that there will be a number who, after calm reflection, can see their way to give a thousand dollars each; that others will give half that amount; that many will give their hundreds; that the poor will give their mites; that the children in the Sunday-schools will contribute their nickels and pennies. We are working and building for the future. Success in this endeavor will be fertilizing and helpful in every other department of the work of the Conventions.

After the first of January, I shall be aided by Bro. C. W. Blanchard. His heart is in the work, and he is believed by those who know him best to be eminently well qualified for it by his prudence, energy and tact. Most heartily do I commend him to the confidence of the brethren, and bespeak for him and his work their sympathy and aid.

In a great movement of this kind there are two sides which are equally important. One is the side of beneficence, the other is the business side. To the first I have already alluded. The second ought to be managed with as much care and strictness as the business of a bank. Money may be paid to Bro. Blanchard, or T. H. Briggs, Treas., Raleigh, or to myself. It is best in all cases to give and take receipts. All cash received by Bro. Blanchard or myself will be immediately forwarded to the Treasurer. All sums received by him will be acknowledged in the Recorder. If, in any case, proper acknowledgment fails to appear, enquiry should be made at once.

I cannot but feel encouraged. The responses that reach me from many quarters inspire me with hope. When this effort shall have closed, I doubt not that it can be said in the final report, "We make known to you, brethren, the peace of God bestowed on the Baptist churches of North Carolina; how that in a great trial of affliction the abundance of their joy and their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality. For to their power I bear record, yea, and beyond their power they were willing of themselves; praying us with much entreaty that we would receive the gift."

Do and dare before you die;
Something worthy and sublime,
Leave behind to conquer time;
Glorious 'tis to live for aye,
When these forms have passed away."

A Motto for '95.

"I mark only the hours that shine," was the inscription on an ancient sun-dial in Italy. Oh, how much of heart-ache it would save, if every Christian would act on this as a motto. But, alas! it is too often that, forgetful of all the bright hours of a gracious experience, we mark and remember only those of gloom. And yet, it is true of a very few, if any, that the bright hours of life do not largely outnumber the dark ones; and the exceptional nature of the latter is, doubtless, one reason why we mark them. But here, as elsewhere, it would seem, the rule, and not the exceptions, should be most impressive. If we had the glad and thankful hearts we should have for the thousand mercies we receive from our kind and loving Father, surely we would not be so inclined to dwell with sadness on the one distressing and afflictive providence that accompanied them. And to every one this, or a greater proportion of mercies to sorrows will be found to be true. But the mercies we receive and enjoy, as a matter of course, and alas too often without gratitude—the sorrows cast us down and overwhelm us, and we forget past blessings in present distresses. This is not only weakness but sin in a Christian.

The trend in this direction may be seen in our prayers. How much there is of supplication for blessings! how little of thanksgiving for past mercies! And, yet, all men agree that gratitude is one of the most ennobling virtues, want of it the debasing vice. This is not less, but more so, when that ingratitude is towards God; for the best of us do not deserve the least of his mercies, and they come, in all their abundant fulness and richness from the depths of his own great heart of love to unworthy recipients. How vile, then, not to be, at least, grateful for them! But we never shall be until we begin more carefully to "mark the hours that shine." Let us habituate ourselves to the contemplation of the mercies of our God by a daily review of them, with a prayer in our hearts that we may be duly thankful to him from whom they have so graciously proceeded.

This thankfulness will be helped if, at the same time, we call to mind the thousand ways in which by one act we have proved our unworthiness of such goodness. Such contemplation will work our gratitude, warm our hearts, and re-enkindle our zeal; and, at the same time, by contrast minimize our calamities. Persistence in such contemplation will ultimately bring us to such a spiritual frame that, like the sun dial, we will "mark only the hours that shine."

Is There Anything in a Name?

The Baptists have some strange ways as well as some which are commendable and praiseworthy. I learned at the Convention and also through the Recorder, that it is proposed to change the name "Baptist Female University" to "Baptist Woman's College." If there is any special or peculiar attractiveness in the latter, my short-sighted vision fails to take it in. "Baptist Female University" strikes me as far more preferable than "Woman's College." It is indicated that it is to be a school for women of advanced years, and not for girls. "Woman's College" carries with it a homeliness of sound and would suit the times of a hundred years ago or the period of the middle ages; but whoever heard of this name in modern times?

I may be off in point of information, but I have my first woman's college to hear of as yet. Did any of you ever know of a "Man's College"? Generally schools for young people have associated with them life, activity—the flow of young and vigorous blood, but the period of womanhood is when the pulse is slower, when life has reached its ebb-tide. A stranger might think it was a home for old women, which the Baptists had gotten up—a sort of "convent" for the aged and unmarried women of the denomination. The name to grace one of the most important enterprises ever started by the Baptists in the State ought to be one in keeping with the vigorous and active age in which we live.

Then, again, this new-born child has already been named and recognised as an addition in the Baptist family, and it strikes me that it would not be good policy to give it a "nic name" of a commonplace sort.

For girls I always did believe in attractive, winning names, and now why daub on to this, the most beautiful and lovely child in the family, a commonplace and homely name? "Woman's College" suits very well alongside of that of "Convent," "Reformatory School," "The Home of the Infirm," or "Asylum," or something of that sort. But for the sake of common sense and the growing Baptist brotherhood, and what we hope to be in the coming years, let the name stand, or, if you will change it, call it "Female College," not "Woman's College."

The Biblical Recorder

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 9, 1895

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

THE first article in this number, "Christian Unity," was found carefully laid away among the papers and letters of the RECORDER. Coming to light so opportunely, and being so happily applicable to 1894-'95 conditions, a reading sufficed to determine its publication. Bro. Maynard, the author, is now with God. In life he was absorbed with pious interest in the welfare of his denomination, and was marked by all who came in contact with him as a man of unusual godliness, a Christian who indeed and in truth bore testimony to his Master. If he could speak to his brethren and sisters from beside the throne on High, he could not, it seems to us, bear them a holier message than that which God seems to have sent through him two years ago.

The article by Dr. Taylor, "The Royall Chair," and that by Bro. Blanchard, formally open a campaign for endowment for Wake Forest that we earnestly hope will meet the hearty sympathy of all the Baptists everywhere. The education of the young men of North Carolina will not improbably depend entirely on voluntarily supported institutions of learning. This is the only right and safe system, and we who have contended so strenuously for it will do well to increase and magnify our facilities for this work. Wake Forest may have five hundred students in a few years.

The endowment of the Royall Chair is a highly useful and worthy mode of honoring a great and worthy servant of God. Not only this, but the endowment of such a chair is greatly needed.

We find it difficult to take Bro. Conrad seriously; but the best of men sometimes look at matters from a misguiding point of view, and we know Bro. Conrad was never more serious than in this protest. However, we beg to differ with him. We like the name. "Woman" is better than "Female" in every possible respect; "woman" is better than lady always in non-aristocratic countries. Yes, it is a homely word; and in these flighty days we are glad to make sure of a homely word now and then. University, as Bro. Stradley pointed out, may be misleading. College is, on the other hand, just expressive and comprehensive enough for dignity and meaning. Brother Conrad's contrasts and comparisons are unhappy, and we think "the golden second thought" would have kept them in the inkpot. It is a graceful, womanly name—Woman's College. There is about it a tone of modesty and that dignity which attaches inherently to modesty. And more than all, the Baptists of North Carolina need a Woman's College, not a Female University.

Dr. Skinner's tribute to "Mother" Yates has been alluded to. It belongs properly in the Woman's Missionary Column, having been prepared at the instance of our Woman's Missionary Union. As usual with Dr. Skinner's efforts there are lessons imbedded in this article that are worth any one's attention.

Of course the reader will be interested in the account of the Georgia anti-barroom measure, and the letter from China, which with many others from less distant fields, we are glad to lay before our readers as we begin the course of another year,—throughout which we invoke the loving kindness of God upon all of us.

THE attention of the people of North Carolina turns every other winter to the State Capital. This year they are more intent than ever, many in doubt, many in hope, many in fear. The Legislators may be sure the people are scrutinising their every act; they may be sure that whatsoever they do, by that they will be judged. It is probable that most of them know what is expected by their their constituents; if any are in doubt, they should make haste to remove it. We shall follow the work of the body attentively; and we confidently promise our readers that they will be kept informed of all that is important to know of the actions of this responsible Assembly. Questions of interest, that deserve the prayerful interest of every citizen of the State, will necessarily arise. And, as many of our readers take no other paper, and as publication of select and reliable news is a function of this paper, we shall print the voters on such questions as may seem of sufficient importance and print other information as may seem advisable.

THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF BAPTIST CHURCHES.—NO. 1.

When Christ said, "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it," he virtually asserted three fundamental truths.

1. He declared that the church had not been built, but was to be reared a new institution, unlike anything of the past. As the church was yet to be built, it of course could not be Judaism reconstructed; for it is expressly stated that the law came by Moses, but grace and truth by Jesus Christ. The writer of Hebrews teaches plainly that Christianity introduces a new and distinct order of things when he says, "In that he saith, 'A new covenant,' he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away." Evidently, then, the Saviour did not model his church after the Jewish congregation and ritual, for they had been built long before; and having served their day, they were abolished when a brighter and better dispensation was inaugurated. We are careful to mark this fact because of its important bearing upon the rise of doctrinal error in the apostolic churches; and because we design to show in a subsequent paper that adherence to Judaism in the early churches was the Antichrist of Scripture, which gave rise to gradual departure from the teaching of the Apostles, until it culminated in the establishment of the Roman Catholic apostasy. And moreover, we shall have occasion to demonstrate that Judaism is at the base of every Pedobaptist church in the world.

2. The Saviour asserted the divine origin of the church. To build a church suited to the needs of all mankind was too great an undertaking for any but a divine hand. Men can do many things, but they cannot found scriptural churches. Even inspired men, as Peter, James, John, Paul, did not dream of such a task; much less should we expect uninspired men to hazard the experiment. Indeed, there has never been any need of such an attempt on the part of any man or any set of men; for Christ has already built his church, perfectly adapted to all the interests of men. In one of the profoundest utterances that ever fell from his lips, the Son of God declared, "I will build my church." What bold impiety, then, for a Romish council, or an English king, or a German professor, to propose the establishment of a church according to their liking! Every village in the land has as much right to construct a church to embody its religious beliefs and idiosyncrasies as they. Every shoemaker in that village, moreover, has as much authority to publish his articles of faith and call for adherents as had the first Pope, or Martin Luther, or John Calvin, or Henry VIII, or John Wesley. With great suspicion says the church of Christ, "Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye?"

3. Our Lord asserted the permanence of his church. From the days of John the Baptist until now there have been true believers in the world, holding up the Son of God as the object of supreme faith, observing withal whatsoever he taught them. The light has never been allowed to go out; at times it has flickered, at times it has burned dim; but by the grace of God it has never been extinguished. In the ages that were blackest with ecclesiastical error and crime, the light of divine truth shed its cheering ray, sometimes at the martyr's stake, sometimes in mountains and caves. President Edwards, in his History of Redemption, confirms this view as follows:

"In every age of this dark time there appeared particular persons in all parts of Christendom, who bore testimony against the corruptions and tyranny of the church of Rome. There is no age of Antichrist, even in the darkest times, but ecclesiastical historians mention many by name who manifested an abhorrence of the pope and his idolatrous worship, and pleaded for the ancient purity of doctrine and worship. God was pleased to maintain an uninterrupted succession of many witnesses through the whole time, in Germany, France, Britain, and other countries; private persons and ministers, some magistrates and persons of great distinction. And there were members in every age who were persecuted and put to death for this testimony."

That the faith and practice of the Baptists of to day conform to the teaching of the New Testament is evident from a candid comparison; and that these principles should have endured through the throes of the ages, is no less a mark of their superhuman origin than a miracle of grace. Baptist faith may well be considered indestructible. In the beginning it was assailed by Jews and heathen; later by Catholics and Protestants. If there had been power to exterminate in ingenious argument, in malicious invective, in fire and sword, persecution, war, and martyrdom, a pure Gospel had long ago performed its last ministries for men.

SEVEN THOUSAND

Despite the hard times and the number of stops incident thereto, the RECORDER has one thousand more subscribers than it had last May. This is gratifying indeed. We believe the good influence of it is being felt throughout the denomination. We believe our friends can co operate with us and run the number up to SEVEN THOUSAND in a few weeks. We need 7,000 subscribers.

We have made a special offer. It costs us to make this offer, but we believe it will pay in the long run. We will send the RECORDER from January 9th to May 15th to any new subscriber for fifty cents; and if a one cent stamp is also enclosed we will send a Baptist Almanac, if they are not all taken; (we have about 700). The sender of a new subscriber will also receive an Almanac, if a one cent stamp is enclosed for postage. Other Almanac offers are withdrawn.

This offer is made because the RECORDER has completed arrangements for a series of editorials that will begin a new era in North Carolina Baptist life. If the Baptists of North Carolina will study these editorials, at the conclusion they will be better informed and better grounded in their denomination and in the Christian religion than any people in the State. That something of the kind is needed, is apparent to every one who has been among the people.

The editorials begin this week. There will be two more editorials on the present subject, which is of fundamental importance. There will be an exhaustive discussion of the doctrines from various standpoints, and the prominent features of Baptist church life, historically and at the present time, will be dwelt upon at length. The author of these articles has spent years in doctrinal work, has been a pastor of both country and city churches, is full of consecrated experience and is cognizant of the task and the opportunity that has been set for him.

We urge every pastor to get up clubs in his church or appoint some one to get up clubs, that this effort may have the largest possible influence.

We hope those who read the editorials will take occasion whenever they choose to criticise or comment on them.

THE Examiner, spiteful at the South, of course, since Dr. Wayland has become editor of it, heads an editorial "A Nut for Southern Teeth," in which it states that Rev. G. W. Greene has issued an address to Baptist missionaries in China, advocating a neutral word for translating baptize, in order that there may be unity. We know Bro. Greene better than the spiteful Wayland, and we shall be slow to believe the charge. If, however, Bro. Greene has so far forgot himself, it is a matter for Southern Baptists and Northern Baptists to regret.

REMARKS by the North Carolina Christian Advocate bearing on the late dispute at Charlotte are printed elsewhere. We heartily endorse the earnest words of our contemporary; it says just what ought to be said and being entirely disinterested, except as all people are interested in consistency and justice, what it says is the more to be valued.

It is indeed idle to complain of religious people's asserting their religion in their daily conduct. To profess religion and not try to make it a chief consideration in all the acts of one's life, is weak hypocrisy.

In behalf of the Baptist Convention we thank our contemporary for its testimony against the Charlotte Observer's strictures.

BRO. WILLINGHAM doesn't say so, but we fear he was disappointed when, January 1st, he sent the following to the "Dear Brethren of North Caroline:

"According to an apportionment of the amount needed to pay off all obligations and support our missionaries in the field this year, we should look to your State from May 1st, 1894, to January 1st, 1895, for $6,000. In that time we have received $4,323 73 from the State Convention, and $663 30 from the Western Convention. Total, $4,986 93.

'Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come.'—1 Cor. 16: 2.

The work is the Lord's and we are his."

Never mind; the $6,000 will be raised, and if we know our brethren the $9,000 will be reported when the Convention meets at Washington. Let us to the work now. French missions, pray missions, push missions, for the good of men and the glory of God.

WE ARE very grateful for the kind expressions that many letters from our subscribers have contained of late. We purpose publishing some of them when we get the space to spare; but we hope no one will take it that we are not appreciative, because we do not make mention of their kind words.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....The Greenville church has extended a call to Dr. J. D. Hufham of Shelby.

....Pastors in need of assistance should consider our four months fifty cents offer.

....Rev. J. H. Vernon of Pollocksville is taking needed rest. He has our sympathy in his afflictions.

....Rev. I. T. Newton has resigned the pastorate of Wakefield, one of the strongest points in Wake county.

....The Board of Missions and Sunday-schools will meet Tuesday, Jan. 22d, 1895, at 7:30 o'clock, in the Mission Rooms.

....T. W. Bickett, Esq., one of the most talented of Wake Forest graduates, is now located at Louisburg in the practice of law.

....We were glad to have visits from brethren P. H. Smith of Hillsboro and J. W. Summers of McLainesville during the holidays.

....Our neighbor, the Christian Sun, is half a century old—in years. It is old enough to be dignified and young enough to be bright. We wish it well.

....186 members were recently dismissed in a body from Walnut Street church, Louisville; they organized another Baptist church, their own having grown too large.

....Prof. W. J. Ferrall of Wake Forest delivered the Christmas address before the Stanhope school, of which brethren Boyles and Pippin are principals.

....Bro. S. Gilmore, whom we have come to esteem as one of our most valued friends sent us four new subscribers Christmas day. A happy year to him.

....The handsome First Baptist church at Chattanoga, Tenn., was burned out by fire during the holidays. It cost $100,000. The loss was $20,000, covered by insurance.

....If every Baptist in the South will give seven cents to Foreign Missions between now and May 1st, our Board will have raised $90,000, enough to discharge every obligation. Help.

....We rejoice to learn that Rev. J. M. Hilliard is coming nearer by. He has accepted a call, says the Baptist, to Green Level, Wake county. Bro. Hillard lives at High Point.

....Rev J. L. Shinn, of Morganton, will please except thanks for a club of new subscribers on our Almanac offer. We are not surprised to know that his field of churches is doing well.

....Rev. A. A. Smith a North Carolinan at Wilmington, Vermont, who takes the RECORDER "for the sake of keeping in touch with his Southern brethren," is doing well in his pastorate.

....Judge W. T. Faircloth, before taking the oath of office as Chief Justice, sent his resignation as a Trustee of Wake Forest College, and also as Trustee of the Baptist Female University.

....From June 30, 1894, to January 3, 1895, our Orphanage received $5,140 20 and $497 84 worth of provisions, clothing, etc. "The most valuable boxes ever received here have come this winter," says Charity and Children.

....Rev. W. S. Ballard has formerly taken charge at Southport, at which place his correspondents should now address him. We are glad to know that Bro. Ballard is much encouraged by the hearty welcome the people have given him.

....Dr. J. A. Mundy, who came from Greenville, S. C., and so quickend the Wilson brethren and sisters that they have grown strong and have built a handsome church-house, has been called to Henderson. He will probably accept.

....Prof. J. C. Clifford of Wakefield Academy was a pleasant visitor to this office last week. He has been compelled to make additions to his faculty, and now has one of the best preparatory and business institutions in this section.

....We will be excused for suggesting that our subscribers preserve the articles now being published in the second column, second page of the RECORDER. We are sure they will be a constant source of strength.

....Selma, Asheville, Lumberton, Greenville, Thomasville and either Wilson or Henderson are in need of good and faithful pastors. It appears that the resignation epidemic is being felt in our State. Changes, however, are often quickening.

....Our able contemporary The Norfolk Virginian, began the new year with a magnificent trade edition, creditable to itself and to the great seaport that it represents. The Virginian has our thanks for a tasteful calendar. Prosperity attend you.

....Pastor Hight C. Moore of Monroe writes: "Our Children's Band gave a concert Christmas night to a very large audience. A collection was taken for Foreign Missions amounting to $20 00. Everything hopeful and aggressive in our church work."

....If you have weak or indifferent members in your church, if your hearers know but little of the Baptist church relatively, historical or otherwise, see to it that the RECORDER is sent among them the next nineteen weeks. It will prove a most efficient helper. All it asks is a trial; and it meets you half way on that. Begin subscriptions with this number, as it is important that each article be read.

....The Foreign Mission Journal for January comes out in a new dress, illustrated and better printed. The illustrations in each issue for 1895 will make us feel like we know our missionaries better. The price for the Journal is only thirty-five cents for a year. Subscribe at once and get the January issue with pictures of Drs. R. H. Graves and R. T. Bryan. Address F. M. Journal, Richmond, Va.

....Can we not get every pastor to canvass, or get him to secure some one to canvass his church for the RECORDER? Many have helped us. We have made arrangements that warrant us in promising that the RECORDER will be unusually helpful the coming year.

....Mr. Thos. J. Pence, who graduated from Wake Forest College last June, has accepted the city editorship of the Raleigh Daily Press. His college friends will doubtless be pleased to know that he is making a reliable, newsy paper, promising an honorable career.

....Rev. P. H. Pernell, Eastville, Va., writes: "I have been here nearly four years on this field, and the Lord has greatly blessed my labors here. Seventy five have been added to my churches this year. My people are kind to me and seem to anticipate my every need."

....Rev. O. C. Horton's quiet and unexpected change of address from Selma to East Durham, where he is now pastor, adds a strong man to our Durham forces. Bro. Horton's work at Selma has been of such a nature, so strongly built up, that he can leave them with confidence in their future.

....We thank a good sister for calling our attention to the work at Ronda, where Rev. J. E. Greene is doing lasting work. Last year was the first during which they have had a regular pastor, and although they are poor and have not had help from the State Board, they are making progress.

....Rev. W. S. Royall writes from his new field; Bedford City, Va.: "I have welcomed sixty new members into my church here since Nov. 1st—forty by baptism. I rejoice in the magnificent Convention recently held in Charlotte. The brethren seemed filled with the spirit of Joshua and Caleb."

....The Baltimore Baptist, later the Baptist, is now the Evangel. More convenient, anyhow. It has been calling itself the "brightest and best" dollar paper; after March 1st, the price goes up to $1 50. The collapse of the Kentucky Baptist ($1. a year), which was always bright, though erratic, is having its effect.

....Since the last paper Rev. I. T. Newton says to Dr. Durham that he will take twenty five copies of Rev. C. A. Jenken's sermon on "The Lord's Supper" at ten cents per copy. Who next? Let the brethren say how many copies they will take, and at what price, so that the 25,000 copies may be published.

....Rev. J. R. Pace of Whitaker's, who is always actively engaged in working for the upbuilding of the cause, feels encouraged with the work on his field. About seventy five persons have asked for prayers under his preaching lately, and he hopes his brethren and sisters will pray God to help them and him.

....Bro. W. A. Whitted of Durham, one of the RECORDER'S life time readers called to see us last week. Our Durham interests are quickening. Between five and seven thousand dollars will be spent in the next several weeks improving the First church, which is growing stronger and stronger under Bro. Tyree's ministry.

....We would be unjust not to recognise the good work done by Rev. Jno. C. Hocutt at Burlington, where he is succeeded by Bro. Van Deventer. The Burlington section has been largely worked in recent years by Bro. Hocutt and now it bids fair to grow into a Baptist stronghold. The development of this field is speaking evidence of the influence of a faithful, able man in a weak place.

....We have got to get seven thousand subscribers. We know we can, if you, pastors especially, but any reader who will, cooperate with us. It will build up any community for Baptists, if the series of articles that we have arranged can be disseminated among its residents, no one is too poor to pay fifty cents for the RECORDER from January 9th to May 15th. Begin subscriptions with January 9th, as not one of the articles should be missed.

....We were glad to have visits from State Senator Farthing from Watauga, brethren Babb of Hertford and Eaton of Morehead, Monday. Bro. Farthing informed us that his aged father, Bro. D. Farthing of Hattie is quite sick, which we were very sorry to hear. Bro. D. Farthing is probably the oldest of RECORDER readers, being ninety years old and having been among our earliest subscribers. May God see fit to spare his worthy servant yet many years.

....Every one will be glad to know that Rev. R. Van Deventer will remain in North Carolina. He is now pastor at Burlington, that thriving little city in North Carolina's most promising manufacturing section. Bro. Van Deventer's service at Henderson, where he has been pastor many years, has been highly successful. His worth, however, is felt all over the State. We have unfeigned pleasure in announcing that he will remain in North Carolina.

....Rev. O. L. Stringfield has given up his work at the Raleigh Fayetteville Street church, which under his pastorate has built a beautiful new building, in which it worships every Sunday, and has grown into a vigorous congregation of 150 members. The pastors of this church can always rely on several working laymen who will do his work when the Lord calls them to other duties. Bro. Stringfield was very reluctant to resign, but so impressed is he with the immediate demand for and the prospect of the early establishment of the Baptist Woman's College, that he feels that he owes it to the institution and to his brethren to give his undivided energies to it. In a conversation last week Bro. Stringfield told us he had every reason for encouragement in the work, that he felt that he represented the most popular enterprise in the State and that he was bound to succeed. He is now travelling. He expects to preach more than ever and better.

....Rev. P. F. Hargett, who has been attending the Seminary, is back again engaged in his work at Chesterfield, S. C.

....Rev. L. L. Starrett, Bro. P. H. Smith of Hillsboro informs us, would hereafter be addressed at Saunders, Cabarrus county. We should like to have Bro. Starrett's former address.

....Our sympathy goes out to Bro. Sam'l Bobbitt, who, Bro. Spilman informs us, lost his home by fire, without insurance, before Christmas. Bro. Bobbitt is the worthy senior deacon of Davis' Shore Baptist church.

....Rev. J. A. Wray of Winston called to see the RECORDER on his return from a pleasant stay at Wake Forest during the holidays. Bro. Wray is highly gratified with his Broad Street Church. His people are helping him in the work.

....Rev. R. E. Peele gave Raleigh the pleasure of a visit, during which he preached two interesting sermons, while on a trip for funds for the Wilmington Brooklyn church. We are glad to know that his trip was comparatively successful. The claim of our Wilmington brethren is peculiarly strong.

....Our offers from now until the Almanacs are exhausted is as follows: Each new subscriber who sends fifty cents will get the RECORDER from January 9th to May 15th, and if a one cent stamp is enclosed for postage, a Baptist Almanac. The one who sends us a new subscriber on the preceding proposition will get one Almanac, if a one cent stamp for postage is included. We have printed extra copies of this paper, anticipating large orders.

....Rev. J O Aldridge, the ardent shepherd of our Concord flock, sent us a club of seven new names the other day, for which we are very grateful. That Bro Aldridge's people appreciate a good thing is witnessed by their Christmas gifts to him since he has been among them. Two years ago they presented him with a watch and chain, last year they gave him a handsome overcoat, and this year a purse was placed in his hands with instructions to purchase a baptismal robe.

....Rev. R. W. Spilman, well and favorably known in this his native State, and Kentucky, where he attended the Seminary, is preaching at Kinston. Bro. Stough has gone to Mecklenburg county. The Free Press says of Bro. Stough: "He served the church to which he is going for fifteen years and has received calls repeatedly from it since. Mr. Stough has endeared himself to many of our people, who dislike to part with him. He is thoroughly consecrated to his work, and is a broad, liberal minded Christian."

....Rev. Dr. J. L. Carroll's timely suggestion with regard to endowing the State University recalls that at the commencement of 1880, when the centennial of the University charter was celebrated, Dr. J. L. M. Curry, a renowned educator and a Baptist preacher, begged to be allowed to speak to the great audience in behalf of an endowment for the University. President Battle, however, refused him. So long as institutions can draw on the State for funds, they are not going to trouble about endowment.

....The following comes from Rev. M. J. Willoughby, lately of Marion, S. C.: "I have accepted the church at Beech Island, to preach for them every Sunday. It is only seven or eight miles from Augusta, Ga., but in South Carolina. You see I find it hard to leave this my native State. I am a Tar Heel by adoption, but I have been back here now a little more than five and a half years. But I shall always love North Carolina and the North Carolina brethren. Wake Forest College is especially dear to me. Beech Island got its name from the growth of beech trees."

....A good collection was taken in a general meeting of the Raleigh Baptists at the First Baptist church the last Sunday night in 1894. The occasion was a mass meeting for city missions. Since Rev. A. D. Hunter was engaged as city missionary matters have assumed a very aggressive attitude. The West End Mission is now an able church and bids fair to develop as our Fayetteville Street church has. The Caraleigh work is going on well. The chapel is ready for occupancy. Brethren Hunter, Carter, Pullen, Simms, Broughton, Stringfield and Durham made speeches.

....President John C. Kilgo of Trinity College has printed an article in the N. C. Christian Advocate that ought to be read all over the State. It is titled, "Christian Against State Education." It cannot be said to be a contribution to the struggle against State aid to higher education; but it is very relevant and its trend is vigorously for Christian education by Christian colleges. Pres. Kilgo believes, as we do, that State education is a menace to Christianity. And he is an ardent advocate of church colleges as mediums for the education of children of church members and others. We hope to publish extracts from this article in our next issue.

....RECORDER readers probably recall several allusions to certain questions of a personal nature put to Dr. Taylor by an anonymous writer in the Charlotte Observer September 2d. The questions not only were impertinent but they were misleading. The writer of the questions has persistently withheld his name, although Dr. Taylor offered to answer his questions if he come out as a man would. But he is known. He is a teacher in the North Carolina College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. That he is afraid or ashamed for the public to know that he wrote the disgraceful questions is witnessed by the fact that the Raleigh correspondent of leading State and Virginia papers has been requested not to publish his name. Prof. W. F. Massey is the man. The reader may take it for granted that anonymous writers in defense of State aid are drawing salaries from State-aided institutions; and he may believe what he reads accordingly. All the knowledge on earth could not qualify an anonymous insinuator for a professor's chair.

....Rev. A. McA. Pittman has been called to the pastorate of Corinth and Santee churches on the C. G. and N. R. R. in Orangeburg county, S. C.; and he will move to Elloree and enter upon the work early in January.

....The Charlotte Observer, a daily which we esteem very highly, and regard as a very great credit to the journalism of North Carolina, seems unduly exercised about the church intermeddling with questions of legislation. We do not accept at all the limitations of the rights of the church as set forth in that paper as follows:

"We do not think that any church should use its power to influence action upon political questions. This contravenes the spirit of our government—which is the only branch of the subject with which we have any business to deal—and brings hostile criticism upon the donomination which thus uses its organized power to affect legislation."

This is the old stock objection, and means simply that the church should confine itself to peddling abstract morals and diluted religious sentiment. There are so many questions of legislation, call it politics or what not, which affect the moral interests of the country, to say nothing of incidental legislation affecting the rights of the church in its organized capacity, that we cannot think of her maintaining an attitude of utter silence. Surely the church will not be denied the same rights that have been accorded the Liquor Dealers' Association. We have heard no protest against their right in their organized capacity to use their power in influencing action upon political questions. We do not believe that any church organization can adopt a political platform or ally itself to any one political party. Such a thing is impracticable. But this is quite a different thing from memorializing a legislative body with reference to any moral question, or a question of corporate right.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

The New Orleans House.

A statement of facts has been sent, in printed slips, to most of the pastors and churches in our Convention. I am in receipt of a letter to day, Jan 3rd, from Dr. Tichenor about these collections, and I have written him that our churches would, in my opinion, give the five hundred dollars in the time named. Now let me urge the pastors and churches to attend to this work at once, and thus aid the Home Board in a time of trial. Send all collections to J. D. Boushall, Treas., Raleigh, N. C. C. DURHAM.

The following is the statement:

NEW ORLEANS HOUSE—FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS IN SIXTY DAYS FROM JAN. 1, 1895.

At our Convention in Charlotte December 8, 1894, the report of a judicious committee on Home Missions said: "The advance made in our work in New Orleans is cause of thanksgiving. In this great city, which has been called the graveyard of Baptists, we have now three pastors of efficient and growing churches. The purchase by the Board of a house of worship for the First church, which had lost their meeting-place by fire, is to be commended. North Carolina churches should cheerfully bear their part in paying for it."

Committee.

After the Convention heard a statement by Dr. Tichenor, Corresponding Secretary, about this house, the obligations of the Board, and his appeal to us to provide, by March 1, 1895, for five hundred dollars towards this debt, the following was unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, The Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention will have to pay on January 1, 1895, five thousand dollars on the house of worship for the First Baptist church in the city of New Orleans; therefore,

Resolved, That this Convention will provide by special collections from the churches for the payment of five hundred dollars towards the above amount.

On motion of T. J. Tayler, the resolution was so amended as to request C. Durham, the Corresponding Secretary of the Convention, to raise this amount in sixty days from January 1, 1895.

At a meeting of the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools December 18, 1894, the following was adopted:

Resolved, That we most heartily commend the above proposition to secure, in North Carolina, five hundred dollars in sixty days from January 1, 1895, to aid the payment of the debt on the New Orleans house of worship, and we urge each and every church to take some part in this good work.

Here is an opportunity for us all to unite our contributions and do a great and much needed work in the greatest city in the South.

Please read this statement to your people at your next meeting, and urge them to aid this work at once. Send promptly whatever is secured to J. D. Boushall for the "New Orleans house."

I have received for the Royall Chair, since last issue, from Judge W. T. Faircloth, $100; Rev. A. McA. Pittman, $10.00; J. L. Allen, $4.00. Total, $114.00.

A previous acknowledgment should have been L. G. Cole instead of E. G. Cole.

Wake Forest College Endowment.

With trepidation I now enter the field as Financial Agent for Wake Forest College. Nothing but the profoundest sense of duty could have called me from a quiet pastorate to undertake this so great and responsible task.

The work of the College is of such a character that he who serves it well is a potent factor in extending the Master's kingdom. Wake Forest has long been the pride of the Baptists of North Carolina and is an institution of which they may be justly proud. It is still worthy of this holy pride and maintains the record it has always maintained, ranking among the foremost seats of learning of the South. And in many respects it presents phases of importance to the Baptists of America and perhaps other countries peculiar to itself. It has been truly called "the foster bed for Baptist preachers." Perhaps no other College has trained and sent out so many "ambassadors for Christ" to foreign lands as well as scattered them broadcast into almost every section of our own country. And the demand upon the institution in this work is by no means lessening, but on the contrary the exigencies of the calls for their labors at home and abroad, and the increased number of applicants to prepare to do the work press upon us enlarged expectations for the future and at the same time remind us of the peculiar importance of Wake Forest College to the world at large as an evangelizing force.

Does any North Carolinian dare to say that this institution has not been a blessing to him? Let him look around and make an impartial examination of its lavished beneficence. No lover of Baptist principles (religious liberty, &c.), be he rich or poor, whether educated or unlettered, can fail of owing a tribute to the influence of this College. Let us not say, then, that it will not profit us to contribute to uphold this institution, though we may never have a son or a grandson to educate there. It is the property of the Baptists of North Carolina and is equal in the distribution of its benefits alike to all. It is the mightiest agency in the propagation and uplifting of our every interest. No other investment yields so large dividends as the one made in human brain. If we would be wise, then, let us never tire of an opportunity to sacrifice for such a worthy cause, nor think its enlargement sufficient until it meets the wants of a vastly growing population.

We appreciate fully the present money stringency following the sale of a five cent cotton crop. We know it is hard times, but it is an axiom that "whatever ought to be done can be done." Being fully persuaded that the increase of the endowment of Wake Forest College is a necessity, we work, we hope and pray that it may be in the hearts of the Baptists in and out of the State, to do what, it appears to our wisest brethren, should be done.

We do not want a dollar given grudgingly. We want the heart of the giver with his gift. We would not ask your gifts by arousing prejudices against other institutions, we appeal to you upon the merits of the College itself and its work—what it is, what it has been, and what we hope it to be. Let us one and all with our large gifts or small gifts as a kind Providence permits us to make them, rally to the needs of Wake Forest College, and bequeath to our posterity advantages which it was not the privilege of this generation to enjoy.

We appeal to all the Alumni and old students of Wake Forest who love their Alma Mater, and to the friends of the College who appreciate the worth of the institution, to give their hearty co operation in securing at as little cost as possible the needed endowment to meet the exigencies of the work and equipment of the College.

Yours fraternally,
C. W. BLANCHARD.

Cary, Jan. 1, 1895.

Several Things.

The last session of our Convention was the best we have had for years. To one who who never makes speeches in the Convention there were two or three things in the Convention at Charlotte that were very noticeable as improvements. The brethren who seem to think the meetings will be a failure unless they have something to say on every subject were not there; and those who did speak, spoke better than usual. Upon the whole, I think we had the best speaking we have had for years. The brethren spoke because they had something to say, and not just to say something. The spirit of the meeting also was fine from beginning to end. I suppose every one present returned to his home thanking God for the meeting.

But while thanking God for the Convention in Charlotte, and for all the great things he did for us during the past year, let us set our faces like a flint towards the work before us in the present year, and relying on God go forward like men and push it to a successful end. He who has been with us in the past will continue to be with us. "And lo, I am with you alway," &c.

MANY GOOD THINGS.

Just before Christmas my people began to bring to the Parsonage good and useful things, and for several days this continued; and now we have stored away for many days to come, fancy and heavy groceries, dry goods, chickens, turkeys, etc. Surely no one ever served a better people. Seven years ago I became their pastor, and from that time on all through these years their kindness has not abated. A true and generous people they are.

Our cause here in Yanceyville and at Providence is moving on slowly. Improvement along some lines is manifest, and all are hopeful of still wider development. In these small towns near larger ones we cannot hope to build up churches of much numerical strength, for the reasons, first, there is not much outside material to build out of; and second, the people move off to the larger towns and cities. We take them into the church, and then in a short time have to give them letters to other churches. Still the few who remain must have the gospel.

CASWELL'S PROSPERITY.

Can we speak of prosperity now! In these hard times is it not a thing of the past? An abundance of money is not a necessary element of prosperity. People may do very well and be happy without a great deal of it.

In Caswell county there is an abundance of corn, and a great deal more meat, from what I hear, than has been raised in the county in many years; and then there are thousands of gallons of molasses. So I think, so far as provisions are concerned, the condition of our people is much better than it has been for years.

In point of education the county is far from being what it ought to be; but the interest in education seems to be looking up a little, and it is hoped that in a few years we shall be better off in this respect. We ought to have at least three high schools in the county, but we have not one. We hope also that our public schools will improve.

May the RECORDER have a happy New Year, and a happy all the year.

The War in China—All Well.

Dear Recorder:—Most likely your readers are anxious for some news from China during these days of war and excitement. So far as we know all our missionaries have been kept in safety by our kind Heavenly Father, nor is it very likely that any of us shall be in danger from any cause that can be foreseen. The victorious Japanese army, while pressing on towards Moukden and Pekin, are led by men who understand the requirements of courtesy towards their captives, and the people of China are learning a lesson both of humility and of human kindness from the people whom they despise and call the "little men of Japan." An incident read recently of the treatment of certain Chinese at the hands of their captors, will illustrate this truth. After the battle of Ping-Yang, Corea, the Chinese suffered a severe defeat, and besides the many killed and wounded, all of whom were carefully looked after by their victors, many captives were sent back to Japan, to be held as prisoners of war until peace was established. An interview, later, is described, which took place between these prisoners and some of their captors. They had already enjoyed Japanese hospitality for several days, and when one asked them, "How would you like to return to your friends?" they replied, "We are quite content to remain here, for we get all we need to eat and wear; and if we should return to our army, we should only be killed, or else starve for want of food." They also remarked to their interrogator, "We have not received the wages promised us for months, and will you not use your influence, after peace is restored, to secure our pay for us?" They were amazed at such kind treatment from any foe, especially from the despised Japanese. And the Japanese are equally surprised at their lack of patriotism, remarking, "They care only for their food and money." This is true of the Chinese soldier. He is a hireling, and usually of the lowest order.

The Japanese show a zeal and patriotism on the one hand, which is scarcely less than a passion, as they desire nothing so much as the sustained honor of their country; and on the other, they display the magnanimity of people from Christian lands in their manner of warfare and the treatment of their prisoners.

With pity and disgust we view the barbarity and brutality of the Chinese soldiers. We give an illustration of this: As the Japanese soldiers entered Ping-Yang, from which the Chinese had just fled in utter rout and confusion, one of the sights which greeted them was the gory head of one of the Japanese officers, who fell in a gallant charge very early in the first assault made upon the enemy's outer breastworks; and this bloody trophy had been reared on a pole with others, to inspire patriotism (?) or cruelty or ferocity in the breasts of the gallant Chinese soldiers. The Chinese general had offered a handsome reward for every head or piece of the head of any Japanese soldier brought in by his soldiers.

And how was this repaid by the Japanese very beautifully! The wife of a Chinese boatman who had been pressed into duty by the Japanese to do some transport duty, was kindly and courteously treated until her husband returned; and then they were well rewarded in payment, according to war prices, for labor, and given a passport with permission to return to their country and friends.

This policy in a hostile land is having its effect; and we hope that it will have much to do towards allaying the bitterness of the Chinese people, as the march of the conquering Japanese armies may continue towards the Chinese capital. Unless things change soon, we may hear of these armies making their own terms of peace at the gate of the Emperor's palace. News comes of the defeat of the Chinese army again, this time well within Chinese territory, for two large Japanese armies have entered China itself; and one of these, the victorious army from Corea has the added glory of this recent battle. Another army has landed a few miles to the north of Port Arthur near the Gulf of Pechili, and is investing this place from the landside. This news has created such a panic among the Chinese soldiery that the road to Pekin is reported to be open by to day's paper.

News has come also of the death of the Chinese Empress. It is said she died in July, but the news of it was kept silent in order that one hundred days of mourning which it entails upon every loyal Chinaman may be postponed until after the celebration of the Empress Dowager's sixtieth birthday, for which large national preparation and lavish expense has been made.

China is being fast humiliated, and by a people whom she has affected to despise for centuries. Sad as it is to see this great country grovelling in the dust and dirt of its own degradation, let us hope that God has some useful lessons to teach her rulers and people by this dispensation of his providence, and pray that it may be overruled by him to teach Emperor and people to reverence and serve him, and be the means of opening China thoroughly to the entrance of the gospel. Many incidents of this war illustrate daily more and more plainly the desperate wickedness of this people from the highest to the lowest. Oh, how China needs the gospel! The corruption of China's rulers is something that the Christian world has not dreamed. The people suffer a tyranny from rulers, customs, religions, poverty, ignorance, shame, and what not, that is positively so overwhelming that no human mind can conceive what it really is.

Yesterday and to day, as we went out over the hills for our usual morning walk before beginning the work of the day, we saw a most piteous and horrifying sight that is very common in all parts of China, and in some places distressingly frequent. It was the unburried bodies of two little babes that had been cast out from birth and were being eaten by the dogs as any ordinary refuse would be. Infanticide is not only permitted, but condoned and apologized for on the ground of poverty, and the uselessness of adding another daughter to a family already on the borders of starvation. One case is related of a father who took his little baby girl and hewed it to pieces that no more daughters might be sent to his home.

These sad scenes need no comment on the depravity of their hearts, the value of man life and woman's condition in China. War cannot remedy such desperate evils, and though God may by war remove barriers, it is only the gospel which entered that can save this sin cursed people.

Pray for us in Chinkiang. The preaching goes on regularly. And while the audiences are not as large as before the war commenced, because many are kept away from us by the fear and bitterness the people now feel towards all foreigners, still many do come and hear the gospel of "peace on earth, good will toward men," and the seed of everlasting life is being sown all the time. "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that he would thrust forth more laborers into his harvest." Yours in Christ Jesus,

L. N. CHAFFELL.

From Rose Bay.

Dear Recorder:—I am thankful to inform the brethren in North Carolina and elsewhere that our house of worship at Rose Bay in Hyde county is very nearly completed—about four days more to finish up the painting, then it will be finished. It is a house reflecting much credit on the contractor, Bro. Isaac Harris, and the young man, W. H. Pritchard, whom he has to help him in his work, and to the great Baptist host of North Carolina. I believe the Lord has been in the work from the dock at Elizabeth City with the church material to the landing at Rose Bay. And the Lord has not only blessed the planting of this great enterprise here, but the writer hereof can rejoice and say that though he has had a hard field of labor—many hard things to contend with—yet the Lord has guided and blessed him in his work.

We have a few good and steadfast members here, who earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. There are many others who I believe will unite with us at this place ere long.

I have one request to make of every Baptist who may be so fortunate as to read the RECORDER—a request that every true follower of Christ can easily comply with, viz., pray for me and my work—that the little branch which has sprung up here in Hyde county may grow to the honoring and glorifying of our Father in heaven.

I desire that the dedicatory sermon of our church at Rose Bay be preached by Dr. C. Durham, from the fact that Dr. Durham is not only a fine preacher, but is thoroughly posted on Baptist work. I desire to take him all over my field of work in Hyde county. I hope the beloved Editor of the RECORDER, and many others of the brethren will come to the dedication of the first Missionary Baptist church in Hyde county, which I hope will be about the first of January, 1895. In Memory of Mrs. Eliza Moring Yates.

MEMORIAL ADDRESS DELIVERED BY T. H. SKINNER, D. D., BEFORE THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C. DECEMBER 9TH, 1894.

The death of Mrs. Eliza Moring Yates occurred on the 24th of March, 1894, at Shanghai, China, where she had lived for forty-seven years as a missionary of the Southern Baptist Convention. She survived her distinguished husband, Matthew Tyson Yates, but six years and seven days.

Never did a wife better supplement the lifework of a husband than did this excellent lady minister to and help the great missionary in his labors for more than forty years.

In her sphere she was his equal for efficiency and intelligent discretion in all those difficult and important plans and achievements incident to the establishing and maintaining a Christian mission in a heathen land.

Her retiring modesty concealed her superiority over ordinary people, and this gave her easy access to the poor and helpless, while at the same time it enhanced the beautiful symmetry of her character with the grace of dignified bearing when thrown in contact with the cultured and refined foreign population.

The Rev. John Stevens, in his graceful and impressive address on the occasion of the funeral services of Sister Yates, said in part, "We meet to-day under the shadow of a great sorrow, but we are strengthened with a great consolation: our beloved friend is no more with us, and our sense of loss is deep and painful; but we know that she has entered upon her rest and reward, and therein do we rejoice, yea, and will rejoice. There is happily no occasion to speak now of what her life was; in the highest and best way it speaks for itself. The presence here of this great throng testifies unmistakably to the affection in which she was held, and to the influence which she exerted.

"Although always markedly quiet and unobtrusive, she, throughout her long residence in Shanghai, showed a real and practical interest in all that relates to the well-being of the people, both native and foreign; and there are few among us who have not been in some way blessed through her words and deeds."

This is true and high praise from one who is not a Baptist.

The services at the grave were conducted in Chinese by the venerable Archdeacon Thomson, two appropriate hymns being sung in Chinese by the large congregation that had come together to see the last of their old and dearly valued friend.

The editorial in The North China News says: "The announcement of the death of Mrs. E. M. Yates on Saturday, at the age of seventy-two, will be read with the deepest regret. Mrs. Yates came to Shanghai with her husband, the Rev. M. T. Yates, to found the Southern Baptist Mission here in 1847, and has been identified with Shanghai ever since. She was a lady who made herself beloved by all who came in contact with her, Chinese or foreign; who devoted herself to good works, and whose memory will be green here for many tens of years." "Who devoteth herself to good works." It is deeds rather than words, that make the true missionary, indeed the true Christian anywhere and everywhere, "By their fruits ye shall know them." And again, "Let your light so shine that others seeing your good works shall glorify your Father who is in heaven."

On her last visit to America, last year, her friends all felt that they were beholding her with the eyes of the flesh for the last time.

The unusually stormy return passage across the Pacific ocean was too much for her feeble frame, worn as it was by seventy-two years of labor and anxious toil.

Happy meeting over on the other side must it have been when death's door opened and ushered into each other's presence the great missionary Matthew Tyson Yates, and his devoted fellow-laborer and world companion, Eliza Moring Yates.

Do we know each other there?

This question is often asked, and this fact itself would seem to presuppose the reality. They do not come to us, and therefore can tell us nothing which happens there; but we go to them, and therefore they may well receive information of all which happens here.

They are "a cloud of witnesses" over us and around about us.

Moses and Elias, Abraham, Dives and Lazarus know each other.

There is only one objection, and this proceeds from the feeling. It asks how could we be happy, and know the objects of our earthly love to be absent?

We can only meet this with a simple, humble faith in that All-Providing Wisdom which can enable the human soul to forget all which it might be distressed to remember, and can fill it with all holy and joyous meditations, and can, in a thousand ways, preserve the flowers of memory without its thorns. Perhaps our cup of blessing will be so full to overflowing with Christ and His glory that all else will be in a state of oblivion.

It has been fifty-eight years since we first knew Yates at Wake Forest College, and in the same class, and all along through life we have kept in touch with him and Sister Yates, and it will not be long before "we shall know each other there."

We had not met Mrs. Yates until the first visit of the great missionary to his native clime in 1859–'60. They arrived late in the day and registered at the Yarborough House. We had been on the watch for them, intending to escort them to our house, but the delay of the train had disconcerted our plans. However, we called at the Yarborough before they began to unpack, and we insisted, with that cordial hospitality incident to those times, that they should immediately remove to our home. They yielded to the invitation and abode with us some days. The inspiration of that visit remains with us to the present time.

The reader of character would easily have discovered that the Divine Providence had not sent Dr. Yates to China without an equipment so necessary and indispensible as a wise, conservative, judicious and executive companion; as his wife afterwards proved to be.

The hidden forces of nature, though silent, are the most powerful always. At the right moment the electricity darts and explodes to the literal of man and beast. The tides of ocean, how they come and go, telling always of weather four or five, purifying the earth both in its waters and atmosphere, so our secret impulses are the most conservative, and at the same time most potential. When you hear a man say, "Come see me to-morrow; I will consult my wife about it," you may know that there is wisdom in that cranium. I never knew two people who seemed to be so completely one as Dr. and Mrs. Yates. She the most modest of women, and he the Gibraltar of strength; the two when united formed the one pyramid of beauty, grace and power.

The two made one missionary.

Adam and Eve made one man.

These two people improved on that; they made one missionary.

There is nothing that Yates ever did in China that could have been so well done had Mrs. Yates been in America. She looked up to him, and he waited on her for counsel and wisdom. The two together accomplished the end.

So it is in all life, if history could be read as facts declare; for the best in every man can be traced to mother, wife and sister, unless he be a castaway.

It is in view of this great fact that we rejoice to see women taking active part in our missionary and other church work. It has been cruelly retarded in our beloved commonwealth too long, but let bygones be bygones, while to the present and the future we must attend. We rejoice that a good start has been made, and now all that is needed is an increase of zeal and daily consecration of the women in their churches to this the central idea of Christianity—the spread of the gospel to the glory of God and the salvation of men. Churches exist in Christ's eye solely for this end, the end for which he lived and died, and lives again forevermore.

I believe women can do more for Christ and humanity than men can do, looked at in themselves. That as instruments they seem more polished and attractive and hence more successful than men, the grace of the Spirit teaching and guiding both alike. Women have more leisure, more opportunity, and withal are gifted with apparatus better suited for the exigencies and trials of the work than those which men possess.

A woman's voice attuned to the music of gentle words, aided by the soft cadence of pitiful sympathy and evangelical love, can unstop the deaf ears of the dead sinner, arrest his attention and plant the name of Jesus in his soul; and then say "Come!" with a winning influence as no man ever could. A woman's smile is more powerful than a military command. Her guardianship is safer, far gentler than any military escort.

A godly woman's touch is as a healing balm to the sunken, lost, self-abhorred sinner.

A woman's tears are more eloquent than any man's utterances, and then her unobtrusiveness, her gentle and all-persuasive example is well-nigh irresistible. These are not words of fulsome flattery; such were most unfitting for this, or any occasion indeed; but they convey real truths concerning women, godly women, who are under obligations thereby to use those gifts for Christ, their best, if not their only friend indeed. Long time has the Master been waiting for you, my sister, to come to the help of the Lord against the mighty.

Surely if the Master of the feast would have a full house and an enthusiastic attendance, let him have the best servants to accomplish it, with the best possible results obtainable.

It's the Master, and not the feast, after all, that the world needs and wants.

If a woman, sinner like the rest of us though she be, can do more for Christ than her housband (husband) O, do let her do it, for the Lord's sake and not the woman's. It is a reflection on her modesty and purity of spirit to object on the ground of her lowering her position and influence, and thus degrading herself by becoming an enthusiastic and consecrated worker in saving the souls of men. What is she in the church for but to work, as all other church members are required in duty to do? And if in the church, why not work in the church, and under the rules and usages of the New Testament, just like all the other disciples are required to do. Now working is not necessarily talking, Christ worked a great deal more than he talked. When assailed by his Jewish enemies, his defense was, "for which of these works would you stone me," and not for which of my sermons, though he spoke as never man spake, and was the prince of preachers for all time.

Among their own sex women ought to talk or speak, but Paul says, "It is a shame for a woman to speak in the church" whether in the conference meeting or the assembly of public prayer or of preaching the word; that is what I think he meant, and so our best scholars and divines say. If my own opinion was asked, and I had no rule and teaching to guide me in the Word of God, it is highly probable that I should err and say yes, let her preach, i. e. preach as used in the popular sense. But I am restricted, and must bow to the inspired record and usages in Apostolic times.

I do not think that the Scriptures teach woman's silence because of "the customs of the East and of the times of Christ and his Apostles, and therefore it does not apply to our times and civilization," as some say. No, I believe that the restriction is meant for women as such, for that as well as for all time, and I think that the restriction was intended for her good and usefulness, and that it is a blessing to her and to all concerned, and indeed that it is one of her chief blessings under the gospel, and one of her chief aids, as a worker under God in behalf of a lost world, that she should not speak in the church, as a man, in the ministry of the Word, preaches to a promiscuous audience.

But if you say that a sister should not be interested in the work of the Lord, but leave it all to the men; that she should be denied all exercise of her soul and heart and body in the activities of Christian love and labor, then I say this is an evidence of ignorance on man's part thus to stigmatize a mother, a wife, a sister, a daughter, and thereby hinder her as a worker in the kingdom of God.

I think I have voiced the sentiments of our dear departed Sister Yates in the words I have used in your presence to-day, and in which now I am happy to know that you agree with me.

O come, noble women, unto the help of the Lord. "In His name" do all that you attempt.

Come naturally, which with your sex means modestly. Avoid notoriety and the sensational, this is bad even in men, "but let earnestness and whole-heartedness" distinguish your every effort to do good in the work of the Lord.

We close with the remark that, no more than men ought women to attempt to do outside, and independent of the church, what both should feel honored in doing in the church, which is the Body as well as the Bride of Christ, your Lord.

Consumption.

The incessant wasting of a consumptive can only be overcome by a powerful concentrated nourishment like Scott's Emulsion. If this wasting is checked and the system is supplied with strength to combat the disease there is hope of recovery.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, does more to cure Consumption than any other known remedy. It is for all Affections of Throat and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis and Wasting. Pamphlet free.

A Wonderful Cure for Cancer.

There is no further need to cut cancers out with knives or burn them out with plasters. Dr. Scott Mason of Richmond, Va., has a cure for this dreadful affliction that supercedes all other methods in positive cure and rapid healing. Not only this, but it is painless when used and the only cure suitable for old people. It seeks out the diseased growths and destroys their vitality, causing the cancer to pass away leaving only an ordinary healthy sore which rapidly heals. The cure is specially favorable for cancer of mouth, nose, ear, and other delicate parts on account of high sensitiveness and great difficulty to use present remedies. Cases heretofore considered incurable are being turned over to Dr. Mason from all parts of the country and are rapidly cured.

Dr. Mason's cure is sent by express everywhere and applied at home without further cost. Those afflicted should write to Dr. Scott Mason, Richmond, Va., giving full description of case and get his price for a cure.

Mr. John W. Pope who was manager of the Alliance Warehouse is now with the Parrish Warehouse as General Manager and will look after your interest, and hopes his friends will come to see him.

You can do as well at Parrish's Warehouse as you can anywhere, and none will appreciate your patronage more than Capt. Parrish. Try him with your next load.

Large demands for smokers, cutters and wrappers. Business always dispatched with promptness and accuracy and full market prices always obtained at Parrish's Warehouse.

In a recent article on Coffee and Cocoa, the eminent German Chemist, Professor Stutzer, speaking of the Dutch process of preparing Cocoa by the addition of potash, and of the process common in Germany in which ammonia is added, says: "The only result of these processes is to make the liquid appear turbid to the eye of the consumer, without effecting a real solution of the Cocoa substances. This artificial manipulation for the purpose of so-called solubility is, therefore, more or less inspired by deception, and always takes place at the cost of purity, pleasant taste, useful action, and aromatic flavor. The treatment of Cocoa by such chemical means is entirely objectionable. . . . Cocoa treated with potash or ammonia would be entirely unsalable but for the supplementary addition of artificial flavors by which a poor substitute for the aroma driven out into the air is offered to the consumer." The delicious Breakfast Cocoa made by Walter Baker & Co., of Dorchester, Mass., is absolutely pure and soluble. No chemicals, or dyes, or artificial flavors are used in it.

AN IMPORTANT CLUB OFFER

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

By special arrangement with the publishers we are enabled to offer SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE for 1895 and a full year's subscription to

The Biblical Recorder

FOR $4.00.

If purchased separately these periodicals would cost $5.00.

IT IS THE PLAN OF SCRIBNER'S to give its readers this year a history of the past 25 years in the United States. (1869–'95.) These years have been unparalleled in the history of the world for national development and material progress. The narrative will be written in a graphic and picturesque style by President Andrews, of Brown University, and capable artists will illustrate it.

ROBERT GRANT, whose "Reflections of a Married Man" will long be remembered, has written a series of articles on "The Art of Living," in which he sets himself to solve, as far as such problems can be solved, questions which beset every well-to do family: The Income—The Dwelling—Household Expenses—Education of Children—Married and Single Life—The Summer Problem, etc., etc. Beautifully illustrated.

GEORGE MEREDITH, whom more than one good authority has pronounced the greatest of living novelists, has written a strong serial, "The Amazing Marriage," to begin in January.

W. D. HOWELLS will contribute a novel entitled "The Story of a Play."

IN THE LAND OF DON QUIXOTE will be a series of three sketches illustrated by a number of Daniel Vierge's wonderful drawings.

SINGLE ARTICLES in great variety have been arranged for and the illustrations will be elaborate.

SCRIBNER'S FOR 1895 WILL BE BETTER THAN EVER.

If you desire only SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE remit $3.00 to the Publishers:

A Missionary's Home Made Glad.

We received from the Ladies Missionary Society of the Baptist Tabernacle in Raleigh a large box of valuable substantial articles for wife and children. It came to our home in a good time, for we did not know when we would get the means to supply our home this winter with shoes, clothing and other useful articles we found in this box. The box was opened in the home, and while the mother was taken from it the many nice articles, the little girls were standing around with eager eyes. She took from the box two large beautiful dolls, and Mary, the little missionary, sprang for her doll like a cat on a mouse, and exclaimed, "They sent them to me and God." When the little shoes and pants for Paul, the baby boy, were found, it was further cause for rejoicing by all of us.

We appreciate this kind token of Christian love, and will ever feel under many obligations to the Tabernacle band of brethren and sisters for their kindness to us. May God bless and prosper them is my prayer.

It's a Secret

that many women owe their beauty to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The reason—beauty of form and face, as well as grace, radiate from the common center—health. The best bodily condition results from good food, fresh air, and exercise, coupled with the judicious use of the "Prescription." In maidenhood, womanhood, and motherhood, it's a supporting tonic that's peculiarly adapted to her needs, regulating, strengthening, and curing the derangements of the sex.

If there be headache, pain in the back, bearing-down sensations, or general debility, or if there be nervous disturbances, nervous prostration, and sleeplessness, the "Prescription" reaches the origin of the trouble and corrects it. It dispels aches and pains, corrects displacements and cures catarrhal inflammation of the lining membranes. It's guaranteed to benefit or cure, or the money paid for it refunded.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation, indigestion, biliousness, headaches and kindred ailments.

If thou wouldst find much favor and peace with God and man, be very low in thine own eyes; forgive thyself little, and others much.—Leighton.

Fair to All.

Nobody hears of the American Baptist Publication Society attacking anything but sin. It does not assail any Board, Society, or Publisher, because such an one may claim to publish Baptist literature. It is not sectional, but is broadly national. The ablest writers of the Baptist hosts, North, South, East and West, prepare its literature for our denomination.

Anti-Barroom Bill.

There is pending before the General Assembly of Georgia a bill brought forward under the auspices of the State Prohibition Convention.

The secular papers, for reasons not necessary to inquire into have denominated the bill "The dispensary bill," and I notice the Index inadvertently followed this lead.

The good people ought to know the truth of this matter. Let me summarize the bill briefly.

At the outstart it kills every bar-room in Georgia by putting them under ban of law. Then it gives to the counties now having barrooms, forty seven in all, as I remember, a local option, as to whether they will have a civil vendor to sell liquors for other than beverage purposes. If any county, by a majority petition of the tax payers, provides for a vendor, he is to be selected under regulations and to conduct the business in a prescribed way. He cannot earn more than $100 a month. Neither State, county, nor municipality provides any liquor nor derives any profit from the business. In short, the bill first kills all the saloons and annuls the partnership of the State in the criminality of the liquor traffic. The proper name for such bill is, Anti-Barroom Bill.

Ought good men to support such a measure? If barrooms are bad they ought. There is no doubt that the liquor traffic is one of the most difficult problems of modern times. It is hard to say what, in all respects, is the best way to deal with it, but there is no difficulty to find the worst way. We have it now demonstrated in our saloons. This bill joins a square issue.

SALOONS OR NO SALOONS

is the plain question. If the bill passes, there may or may not be public vendors appointed; but one thing is certain, their will be no saloons. Every man who favors the bill favors destroying the saloons, and those who oppose it, favor continuing the saloons. —J. B. Gambrell.

Good Work at Salisbury.

The Baptist church has increased rapidly in its membership under Rev. N. S. Jones during the last few years. Pastor Jones observed his fourth anniversary recently and stated that he had received during that time 136 members; last year he added 81 members. The church has raised $4,625 during that time. The amount raised last year exceeded $1,200. Mr. Jones has been an indefatigable worker. He has held on an average of 3 1-5 meetings a week, and preached 560 sermons. Besides, he has held 20 protracted meetings in other fields, preaching at these 200 sermons, making a total average of services held over 5 a week.—Charlotte Observer.

12. Closing hymn.

Extracts from a Catholic Mexican Catechism.

From the "Catechism of the Christian Doctrine," by Padre Ripalda, in common use in schools and families, I take the following:

"Q. When is it well to make the sign of the cross?"

"A. Always when we begin a new work, or when we find ourselves in danger, in temptation, or thinking evil."

"Q. Has the cross virtue to free us from these?

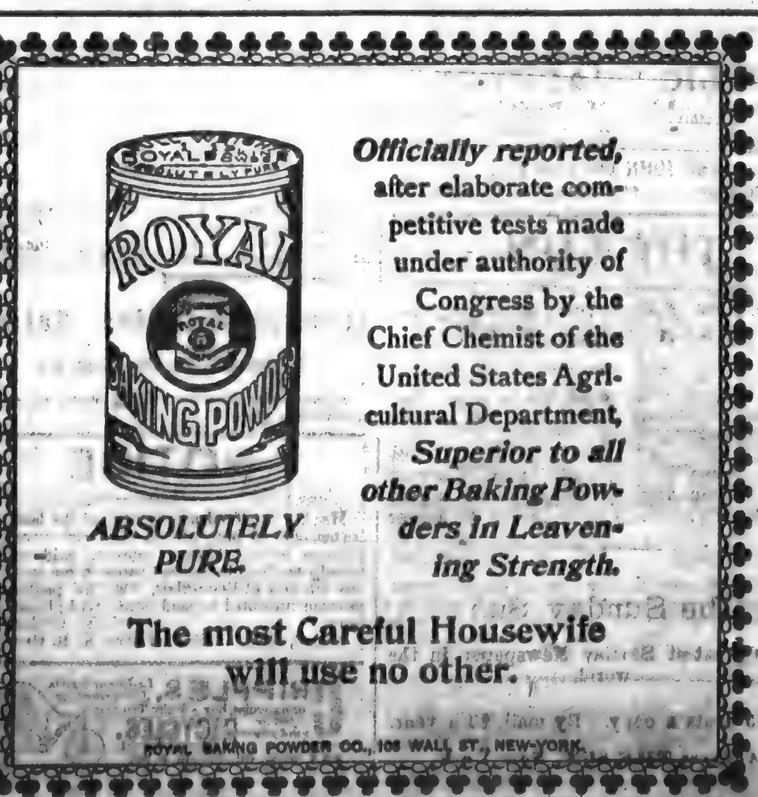
"A. Yes, because by his death on the cross Christ conquered them.

"Q. Who is our lady, the Virgin Mary?

"A. The mother of God, Virgin full of grace and all virtue, Queen of heaven and earth, our lady and intercessor.

"Q. Where is our lady, the Virgin Mary?

"A. In heaven, glorious in body and soul. Venial sin is pardoned by any of the following nine acts:



"By hearing mass with devotion.
"By communing worthily.
"By hearing the word of God.
"By episcopal blessing.
"By saying the Pater Noster.
"By general confession.
"By holy water.
"By holy bread.
"By stroke on the breast.
"All this done and said with devotion."

The Roman Catholics in Our Land.

There are many Protestant Christians even in our own communion, who undervalue or absolutely oppose and decry evangelistic work for Romanists. They are sometimes very severe upon efforts under the auspices of Foreign Missions to enter Romish countries. They say the Roman Catholic Church is a Christian church. It may be corrupt, defective, degenerate, but it is not absolutely apostate. It teaches saving truth, and, with all its glosses and additions, supplies enough of it for salvation. If its adherents fail to discern and receive the truth offered through its services and ministrations, and accept only the error joined with it, that is their fault and folly; and we are not called on to ply them with missionary effort, as if they were utterly destitute of the gospel, when there are myriads and millions wrapped in a darkness compared with which Romanism is light.

Now no one denies that there is Christian truth taught to Romanists and offered variously in the Roman Catholic Church. Nor is it worth while to insist here on the weakening and corrupting of this truth by human additions and alterations. The true test is to be found in the results of the system. We look at the lands where Rome has had full swing and sway, and a chance to show how she can form a community and build a nation. We see there popular ignorance, degradation of morals, poverty and beggary, impurity and falsehood, and all forms of evil, patent and rife, in spite of the ministers and the forms of religion without number on every hand. And we fairly infer that if Rome should ever dominate America as she dominates Italy or Spain or Ireland, we might find her rule as fatal an incubus as those hapless countries have found it. Who could bear to think of a United States of America as priest-ridden as the United States of Columbia? Why would not a paramount papal influence blight North America as it has blighted South America? We are sending missionaries to the Roman Catholics in Chili. Still more need is there that we seek to ply Romanists around us with a simple gospel. Patriotism and self-defence, and love of civil and religious liberty, and the interests of popular education, and care for personal freedom and the right of private judgment—all the rights and dignities of manhood and citizenship—demand that we do our best and utmost to bring the truth as it is in Jesus to bear upon the masses of those in our own land who are now adherents of Rome.—From Church at Home and Abroad, organ of Presbyterian Church in America.

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESIDENT OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON PRINTING CO., RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its meaning. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

PRICES: Leatherette, 50c; Cloth, 60c.

Bernard will go to the courts and get the office.——Material for the Confederate monument has arrived, the bronze statues are on the way, and the structure will be finished by spring. A monument costing $35,000 will be dedicated to the lamented Col. L. L. Polk, when the National Alliance meets at Raleigh next month.——An effort is being made to have the State endow a reformatory. Better educate the children.——L. L. Jenkins has been elected president of the Bank of Gastonia, and E. S. Pegram cashier.——The Supreme Court has handed down a decision to the effect that owners of land along the rivers can prevent lumbermen from using the streams for floating logs.

From Haw River.

Brother Bailey:—Our work is moving on nicely, and the church is in perfect harmony. We had a most interesting prayer-meeting Christmas morning at six o'clock, that we have had in many years. The Mt. Zion Union did not meet in session as appointed for our church, owing to the cold weather.

We are going to work very soon on our house of worship. We are hopeful of good work this year. Our beloved pastor, Rev. J. C. Hocutt, is one of the best workers I ever saw. We hope to dedicate a $1,500 house in June if the Lord continues good to us as he has. Pray for us.

Yours in Christ,

C. P. CATES.

Resignation of Elder J. T. Albritton.

Elder J. T. Albritton resigns a four years' pastorate at Piny Grove church, Sampson county, N. C.. The following preamble and resolutions have been adopted by Piny Grove church:

We, the members of Piny Grove church, in conference Dec. 1, 1894, with great reluctance received the resignation of Rev. J. T. Albritton as pastor;—

Resolved, That it is with deep regret that we sever our connection with him who has served us so faithfully for four years as pastor and preacher, and in doing so desire to tender to him our sincere, heartfelt thanks for the faithfulness and edifying manner in which he has served us, and to thank the Great Head of the Church for his great goodness in sending us one of his most honored messengers; and as he leaves us to go forward in the great work the Master has called him, we desire to have his prayers, and that he may be successful in the work.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the RECORDER and Baptist for publication, and a copy to Elder Albritton, and that they be entered on a page of our minutes.

Deacon P. C. Caddell.

Dear Recorder:—I was madesad by your announcement of the death of Mr. P. C. Caddell of Moore county, who died on the 30th of November, 1894, the father of your Corresponding Agent. He was one of the first men I ever knew. Forty five years ago I can remember his frequent visits to my father's. A deacon in Bethlehem church of which my father was the first and continuous pastor for some twenty years and living near neighbors, they were often together counseling for the interest of the Lord's kingdom. He with his father, Neil Caddell, Benjamin Phillips, Jesse Bean, Leonard Lawhorn, Hardie Warner and J. J McIntosh were my father's great advisers when there were but few Baptists in Moore county.

Brother Caddell was an earnest, faithful and quiet Christian, ever ready for a good work, ever present at his church meetings, however pressing other engagements. As honest as ever men be, as pure in life as mortal ever attains, as kind and obliging as a regenerated soul as lives, he belonged to that class of men whose words are "like apples of gold in pictures of silver."

He lived unknown away from his native county, but forever impressed those with whom he had to do that in him was a spirit more than natural to man. By his life and words I was, when only about ten years old, impressed with the idea that I ought to be a Christian. The poor and suffering always found a present help in him.

Without the benefits of an early education, yet he became a sound thinker, wise in council, and a warm friend of education,—succeeding not only in educating his own children, but by his means helping others to get an education, among whom I am a witness. He acknowledged God in all his ways, relying implicitly on his promises—yes, quietly and humbly he walked with him till he bid him come up higher, having fought through many years the good fight of faith,—and now we think of him as the last of his day gone to join his old pastor and former co-laborers in the higher service of our Divine Head. May we some day join them. Till then, adieu my dear old friend!

J. B. RICHARDSON.

High Point, Dec. 21, 1894.

FREE!

This remarkable statement, to which we direct special attention, is from a Tennessee farmer: My age is 63. I suffered intensely from Catarrh 10 years. Had intense headache, took cold easily, had continual roaring and singing in my ears. My hearing began to fail, and for three years I was almost entirely deaf, and I continually grew worse. Everything I had tried, failed. In despair I commenced to use the Aerial Medication in 1888, and the effect of the first application was simply wonderful. In less than five minutes my hearing was fully restored, and has been perfect ever since, and in a few months was entirely cured of Catarrh. ELI BROWN, Jackson, Tenn.

Medicines for 3 Months' Treatment Free.

To introduce this treatment and prove beyond doubt that it is a positive cure for Deafness, Catarrh, Throat and Lung Diseases, I will send sufficient medicines for three months' treatment free.

Woman's Perfect Health

can not be maintained without the greatest care.

From childhood to old age it should be guarded jealously—by parents—husband—loving friends.

Have something always at hand! Something that will strengthen—invigorate—cure at critical times.

Brown's Iron Bitters

has been woman's friend for twenty years—it never fails—it does give the much needed strength—enriches the blood—tones the nerves.

Are you a woman? Then remember that you can (after all else fails) fall back on BROWN'S IRON BITTERS with certainty of relief. It is a comforting thought—has been comforting to many—may it prove so to you!

Look for crossed Red lines on wrapper.

MISS JOSIE BEEMAN, Bath, N. Y., says: "I was a great sufferer from general female weakness. Brown's Iron Bitters has given me great relief."

A Woman's Story.

THE WONDERFUL NARRATIVE OF A PATIENT SUFFERER.

HOW A YOUNG WOMAN WAS CURED OF A TERRIBLE MALADY WHEN SHE WAS NEAR THE BRINK OF THE GRAVE

(From the Detroit Sun)

The large, pretentious brick residence at 36 Miami avenue, in this city, is the home of the heroine of this interesting story. She is Miss Margaret Stenbaugh, and her interesting experiences during the past four years are published here for the first time.

Miss Stenbaugh is a pretty girl of about 20 years and is to-day the true picture of the ideal, healthy, robust and jovial American girl. She was not always so, as is proven by the accompanying statement made by her.

"Four years ago," she said, "I was a sufferer in all that the term implies, and never thought of being as healthy as I am to day. Why, at that time, I was such a scrawny, puny little midget, pale and emaciated by an ailment peculiar to us women, that my father and mother gave me up to die. The local practitioner, whose name was Dr. Glassford, (I was at that time living at Scotland, Ont.,) said it was only a matter of days when I would be laid away in the churchyard. I was so informed, and as I was such a sufferer I cared nothing whatever whether I lived or died; in fact, think I would have preferred the latter.

"I could not walk. I became so weak, and regularly every night my father used to carry me up stairs to my room. I can distinctly remember me telling him that he wouldn't have to carry me about much longer, and how he said, while the tears glistened in his eyes, that he would be willing to do it always, if he could only have me with him.

"It was evidently foreordained that I should not die at that particular time, as a miraculous transformation in my condition was the talk of the neighborhood.

"I read, or was told by somebody, of the wonderful cures that were being wrought by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and my father went to Brantford, where he purchased a couple of boxes from W. Wallace. I commenced taking them, and I thought for a time that they did me no good, as they made me sick at first, but very shortly I noticed a great change. They began to act on my trouble, and in the short space of six weeks I was able to walk. I continued taking the pills, and in six months I was in the condition you see me now. I fully believe that they alone saved me from the grave, and you will always find myself and balance of our family ready to talk about the good Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did for me.

"A short time ago I was feeling unwell. Just a slight derangement, and I at once bought a box of Pink Pills, and commenced taking them. I could actually feel the good results after three pills, and I will recommend them to anybody who is afflicted as I was."

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 15th of December, 1893.

Druggists say that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have an enormous sale, and that from all quarters come in glowing reports of the excellent results following their use. An analysis proves that they contain in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, suppressions, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were first compounded as a prescription, and used as such in general practice by an eminent physician. They are now manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and Brockville, Ontario, and are sold in boxes (never in loose form by the dozen or hundred, and the public are cautioned against numerous imitations sold in this shape) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company from either address.

SMITHVILLE, GA., Nov. 3d. 1894.

Dear Sir:—Since March, 1893, I have used the Electropoise in my family with satisfactory results, for rheumatism, neuralgia, indigestion, kidney trouble and fever. My wife, for whom it was purchased, had been a great sufferer for a long time, her health being completely broken down. Now she is in better health than for fifteen years though she has not taken a drop of medicine since beginning its use. I would not be without it for many times its cost.

Very truly, G. M. PATTERSON,
Principal Smithville High School.

DIED.

ALLEN—Sister Julia Allen passed to the realms of eternal glory October 5th, 1894. She was seventy-one years old at her death, having given the Lord fifty years of her life. Faithfully and long did she serve her God, and sweetly did she trust her loving Saviour when called upon to pass over the cold and dark river. May God comfort the dear loved ones for Jesus' sake. G. T. W.

EARLY—On Oct. 21st, 1894, the angel of death took away little Nina Bell, daughter of B. G. and Nocia Early. She was born Feb. 14th, 1893, and hence was only one year, eight months and seven days old. Though young she was bright and thoughtful. Bereaved parents, weep not, for he who said "Suffer little children to come unto me," has taken little Nina to the kingdom of heaven, for of such it is composed. May we all meet her there when life is over.

C. B. WILLIAMS.

Winton, N. C.

STEVENS—Sister Bettie L. Stevens, the dearly beloved wife of Deacon N. W. Stevens, of Shiloh Camden county, N. C., was called to her heavenly home and reward Dec. 7th, 1894. She was born July 26th, 1863.

Her funeral was conducted in Shiloh church, of which she was a member, by the writer, at her request, in the presence of a large congregation of friends, for she had many. Another bright light is extinguished, making this world darker.

"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." May the hearts of the companion and dear children be comforted.

P. S. C. DAVIS.

THORPE—Sister Nellie Brooks Thorpe, wife of Mr. A. P. Thorpe of Rocky Mount, only daughter of Capt. R. H. and Mrs. Annie Seawell Brooks of Raleigh, and granddaughter of the late Dr. W. T. Brooks of Wake Forest, died at home in Rocky Mount, Dec. 21st, 1894, in the twenty-seventh year of her age.

As a girl, Nellie was bright, amiable and attractive. She loved her home and found real pleasure in the duties of a loving daughter and an affectionate sister. In early life she made a profession of religion and was baptized into the fellowship of the Wake Forest Baptist church by Rev. Wm. B. Royall, her pastor. She afterwards moved her membership to the First Baptist church of Raleigh, and belonged to that church at her death. Her religious life was marked by the same unswerving adherence to principle which characterized her in every relation of life.—faithful, generous, she adorned her Christian life by a daily exhibition of those qualities of heart and mind which emanate from those who have "passed from death unto life."

About two years ago she was happily married, and through her brief married life, which seems all too short, she was the light and life of her sweet and pleasant little home, the joy and pride of her husband, as he trusted to the future for the fuller and more perfect consummation of their happy union. But the dread angel came, taking first the little babe, then a few days of suffering and the mother was summoned to come up higher and be with the little one and others gone before, whose guardian spirits had been about her in life, in her sickness and in her death.

Saved Her Life.

MRS. C. J. WOOLDRIDGE, of Wortham, Texas, saved the life of her child by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"One of my children had Croup. The case was attended by our physician, and was supposed to be well under control. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it strangling. It had nearly ceased to breathe. Realizing that the child's alarming condition had become possible in spite of the medicines given, I reasoned that such remedies would be of no avail. Having part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses, at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given, the child's breathing grew easier, and, in a short time, she was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not hesitate to say that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved her life."

The Home Circle.

The Years.

The current of time more swiftly moves
As it nears the tideless sea,
And the circling years seem in haste to bring Us close to eternity.

A year! Twelve months of dusk and dawn,
Of moon and star and sun,
Of flower and fruit and root and grain,
Ere the year's great work is done.

And birth and death and labor and care,
And love and passion and fear,
And loss and gain and pleasure and pain,
Make up the sum of a year.

A year! So long to look forward to,
So short when it passes by,
So fraught with all that can make or mar
Through a vast eternity!

O Year, New Year! from the hand of God
You come as pure as snow;
We welcome you with a chastened joy,
Your end but God can know.

—Lillian Gray.

Emerson's Youth.

HE SERVED AS A WAITER AND A TUTOR DURING HIS COLLEGE COURSE.

Ralph Waldo Emerson was born May 25, 1803, in Boston, not far from the birthplace of Franklin. His father was a clergyman, who had recently founded what is now the library of the Boston Athenæum. Books rather than the ordinary boyish sports were the delight of the son. He rarely played, and never owned a sled. In the austere New England life of the time there was little leisure for mere amusements.

Emerson's father died before the boy was eight years old, and thereafter the child had to help his mother, who took boarders and tried hard to give her sons an education such as their father's. Emerson entered the Latin School in 1808, and one day the next year, when there was a rumor that the British were going to send a fleet to Boston Harbor, he went with the rest of the boys to help build earthworks on one of the islands. About this time, also, he began to rhyme, celebrating in juvenile verse the victories of the young American navy.

In August, 1817, Emerson entered Harvard College, receiving help from various funds intended to aid poor students, and obtaining the appointment of "President's Freshman," a student who received his lodgings free in return for carrying official messages. He served also as waiter at the college commons, and so saved three-fourths the cost of his board. Later in his college course, he acted as tutor to younger pupils. He seems to have impressed his instructors as a youth of remarkable ability; but he was not a diligent student. In those days Harvard was not a university; it was not even a college; it was little more than a high school where boys recited their lessons. Emerson was only eighteen when he was graduated, feeling that the regular course of studies had done little for him, and having therefore strayed out of the beaten path to browse for himself among the books in the library. He was popular with the best of his classmates, and at graduation he was class poet.

Whatever the value of a college education in those days, Emerson was the earliest of the little group of the founders of American literature to go through college. Franklin, having to work for his living from early boyhood, had no time; Irving, after preparing for Columbia, threw his chance away; while Cooper was expelled from Yale, and Bryant was so dissatisfied with Williams that he left it after a single year. But the authors who came after Emerson made sure of the best education that this country could afford them. Hawthorne and Longfellow were graduated from Bowdoin, while from Emerson's college, Harvard, were to come Holmes, Thoreau, and Lowell.

When he graduated, Emerson's ambition was to be a professor of rhetoric; but such a position was never offered to him. He taught school for a while in Boston, earning money to pay his debts and to help his mother. Then he entered the Divinity School at Harvard, and, in October, 1826, he was "approbated to preach," delivering his first sermon a few days later. For the sake of his health he spent that winter in Florida, at St Augustine. On his return he lived in Cambridge chiefly, preaching here and there; and in the spring of 1829 he became the minister of the old North church in Boston. Being thus established, in September he married Miss Ellen Tucker, but he lost his wife soon after the marriage. Moreover, Emerson was not satisfied to remain in the ministry, and in 1832 he resigned his charge.—Prof. Brander Matthews in St. Nicholas for January.

An Ounce of Prevention is cheaper than any quantity of cure. Don't give children narcotics or sedatives. They are unnecessary when the infant is properly nourished, as it will be if brought up on the Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk.

Modern Marriages.

"Be fair; and own that if all girls weighed as well their chances of married happiness, there would be fewer of the fearful mistakes we see about us. But no! Most of them go to the altar, their heads dizzy with their own importance, with thoughts of their presents, bridesmaids, jewels, establishment, at the side of a lover who swears they are perfection. How many of these escape the hour of bewildered dismay when they realize the bond that makes them subject for life to a man they can have known only on the surface! If wedding-presents could be made into a pile, and the wife of a month could offer herself upon them in suttee, it would be a not uncommon event."—"A Bachelor Maid," in The Century for September.

Some Wonderful Things.

"Martin," said a wise grammar school boy to his little brother of six, "come here, and tell me what you have inside of you."

"Nothing," said Martin.

"Yes, you have. Listen! You've got a whole telegraph stowed away in your body, with wires running down to your very toes and out to your finger-tips."

"I haven't," said Martin, looking at his feet and hands.

"You have, though; and that isn't all. There's a big force pump in the middle of you, pumping, pumping seventy times a minute all day long, like the great engine I showed you the other day at the locomotive works."

"There is no such thing"—

"But there is, though; and, besides all these things, a tree is growing in you, with over two hundred different branches, tied together with ever so many bands and tough strings."

"That isn't so at all," persisted the little boy, about ready to cry. "I can feel myself all over, and there's no tree, nor engine, nor anything else, except flesh and blood."

"Oh! that isn't flesh and blood, that's most of it water. This is what you are made of,—a few gallons of water, a little lime, phosphorus, salt, and some other things thrown in," said his brother.—World's White Ribbon.

The Future of Gold Production.

There are no indications whatever of a falling-off in the future of the productiveness of the gold mines of this country, although, considering the rapid growth of the South African production of gold, it is difficult to predict how long the United States will maintain its supremacy as a gold producer. New mines will, of course, be discovered here but the discovery of such mines is still more likely in Africa. Much will depend on their relative richness. So far as can now be seen, the greatest hope of a largely increased gold product of the United States in the future lies in the removal of all restrictions on hydraulic mining in California. That has already been done to some extent by the so-called Caminetti Act, passed March 3, 1893. If means could be found to remove all restrictions on this class of mining—and that may be a possible achievement—it has been estimated that the deposits in that State would add something like $500,000,000 to the gold stock of the world.—Hon. Robert E. Preston.

It seems hardly possible, but nevertheless it is true, that on an average every fifty-fifth person you meet wears W. L. Douglas shoes. Did you ever realize what an immense undertaking it is to supply one article of wearing apparel to over one million people.

At Last.

When on my day of life the night is falling,
And in the winds from unsunned spaces blown,
I hear far voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown,

Thou who hast made my home of life so pleasant,
Leave not its tenant when its walls decay;
Oh, Love divine! Oh, Helper ever present!
Be thou my strength and stay.

Be near me when all else is from me drifting—
Earth, sky, home's picture, days of shade and shine,
And kindly faces to my own uplifting,
The love which answers mine.

I have but Thee, oh, Father! Let Thy Spirit
Be with me then to comfort and uphold;
No gate of pearl, no branch of palm I merit,
Nor street of shining gold.

Suffice it if my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through thy abounding grace,
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place—

Some humble door among thy many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease,
And flows forever through heaven's green expansions
The river of thy peace.

There, from the music round about me stealing,
I fain would learn the new and holy song,
And find at last beneath thy trees of healing
The life for which I long.

—John Greenleaf Whittier.

Father Time's New Equipment.

Torringford bustling with foundaries, cotton-mills, skate-shops, needle-shops, and hook-and-eye-shops,—shops, not factories, they are called in the local nomenclature,—was one of the water-power villages that the new distribution of power by the railroad had made, just as Bakerville and Riverton were of those that it had harmed. I was told that at Riverton you could buy for $2,000 an excellent scythe-factory that had cost $7,000. But, indeed, even apart from railroads, the scythe is disappearing before the advance of the mowing-machine. It will become an obsolete implement, and we shall have old Father Time mounted on a mowing-machine, and consulting a Waterbury watch instead of an hour-glass.—William Henry Bishop, in the April Century.

SINCE the remedy for diphtheria has established its title, new hope has been aroused that consumption and other diseases that have so far baffled human skill, may yet be overcome. It has been announced more than once lately that a remedy for typhoid fever had been discovered, but it is likely that the announcements were premature. There is no doubt but that methods of treating the disease have greatly improved, and in consequence, it is less fatal.

THE final contest between steam and electricity may not be as far removed as we fancy. That electricity is to be the motive power of the future is a general opinion, but most of us think its day is yet afar off. In Connecticut, however, vast projects are under way, looking to the development of a system of electric railways to compete with the steam systems. Where communities are thickly planted, as in Connecticut, it is easy to perceive how that electric railways may rival and eventually rout the railroads.

THE General Assembly of the State of North Carolina will please stop a minute:

How many of you were denouncing caucuses and caucus methods several weeks ago?

How many of you began your legislative careers by assembling in caucuses?

Caucuses are stumbling blocks, yesterday, to day and forever. Any intervention between the electing by the people and the enacting by the elected is a menace to the prerogative of the sovereign people. Caucuses and lobbyists are such interventions.

IN international transactions nations betray no little of that quality often apologetically spoken of as 'human nature!' It is very human to retaliate.

A commercial war is in progress between European nations and the United States; but none except exporters feel its effects. Austria, Belgium, France, Germany and Spain are resenting with retaliatory measures certain discriminations in the new tariff laws that are injurious to them. It is reciprocity backwards; and as our Congress was aware, when the tariff act was passed, that nations usually retaliate in kind, there is nothing to do but bid them do their worst; and if their worst is worse than ours, then a compromise is desirable. The House, however, has promptly passed bills removing the grievances; the Senate is stubborn with the matter.

THAT the present session of Congress will do nothing more notable than adjourning March 4th, is as definitely settled in the minds of men of considerable experience as political matters generally get to be.

The President has announced his determination not to call an extraordinary session of Congress this summer; so the country will be left to its own resources until next December, when the lately chosen House of Representatives will meet with the new Senators and the remaining members of the "upper house."

Meanwhile the Northern and Eastern citizens are thinking that our system of banks must be reorganized, while the West and South are not only of this opinion, but a good majority of them seek a rehabilitation of the entire currency system.

The defeat of the Carlisle currency bill is taken by many as signifying that free silver legislation is the one determination in the minds of a majority of Congress. There are people who anticipate the enactment of a free coinage bill before March 4th. The seigniorage, as was stated in these columns several months ago, is being coined at the will of the authorities. This is a decided concession by the administration and the monometalists, the latter having characterized the seigniorage bill as a bill to coin a vacuum.

We do not anticipate free silver legislation in this Congress or the next; that something will be done, if not now, within twelve months, is our faith. For something evidently must be done. There is talk of issuing more bonds, even to the extent of $500,000,000. But this is not probable; another issue of $50,000,000, however, is not improbable. It may be well to state here that an effort to make it appear that interest on the recently issued bonds is only two per cent. has been exposed, the real rate being nearer four per cent.

It is worthy of remark that the popular conviction that our coinage system is unsafe is obtaining of late among the lofty financiers; and, moreover, there is extensive suspicion, not only on the streets and in the fields, but in the marts, the banks, and forums, that our banking system needs remodelling.

There is encouraging hopefulness in business circles; but it is scarcely to be supposed that the prospect of cessation of legislative action has anything to do with it. There are many reasons why the country should be expected to gradually regain its former financial vigor, whether favorable legislation is effected or not;—not that legislation is undesirable, but that legislation is only one of several influences upon trade and finance, and that the people may profitably endeavor to set these influences in motion.

THERE is to be a great exposition at Atlanta next fall, in which the cotton States, particularly, and the world in general, are expected to show off. At least, this is what the papers have been saying, not only in a modest, off hand manner, but startlingly in their telegraphic columns. Posters, circulars, etc, etc, are probably going the rounds, or being gotten ready to go, as usual.

Now, of course, since North Carolina is one of the cotton States, and being also reputed to have land and undeveloped wealth and much need of immigrants, and, we might add, being also known to have supported several men in exhibits at the Chicago Fair, North Carolina is expected to expend one or five or ten or twenty thousand dollars at Atlanta. We must display, they say, our marvellous resources, so abundant and so responsive to the touch of the immigrant; and, as a matter of course, it follows that in thus making our State strong and great, we incidentally make the Exposition and the managers of our exhibits attractive and comfortable, respectively.

We believe in advertising; we believe in keeping everlastingly at it; and we also believe that to be successful, advertising must be judicious. The Chicago effort was largely a failure. Its chief service was in securing fat and easy jobs for some men of presentable appearance and good families and some others who were not particular as to their appearance or their families. The Atlanta exposition presents an opportunity to repeat the Chicago experience; and, we promise you, a similar opportunity will be presented as often as the Legislature meets. Appropriations never suffer for takers.

A South Carolina paper startled us all the other day by saying that North Carolina is the greatest Southern State. We cannot say for that, having had mere glimpses of the other States; but we hope the South Carolina journal is right. North Carolina has land and water, hills, valleys and plains, forests, herbs, cereals, vegetables, fruits, sheep, dogs, cattle, horses, birds, fowls and folks, and ores and precious stones besides. We have landscapes, grandeur, magnificence, healthful airs and waters. There are numerous manufactories and corporate enterprises, railways and the like. If any State has something that we cannot show, politics and religions excluded, we hope it will hold up its hands. But we cannot make such an exhibit of these things at Atlanta as will be of any considerable advantage to the State.

People at expositions are sight-seeing or pleasure-seeking; they are not immigrants. Most of them have homes and occupations. They might look at pictures, but they would have no idea of our scenery; they might read circulars, but they could not be expected to believe what they say. They might be forced to examine some bottles of grain, a case of tobacco, a stalk of cotton, a set of jewels or a pile of ore, but they would hardly be impressed. People do not go to expositions to study; their main object is to find unusual sights to tell home folks of.

The development of North Carolina depends upon North Carolinians. If we cannot develop our State, we who have risen to life from the ashes of desolation, immigrants cannot. We would welcome desirable immigrants, but we shall not lament if they go to other States. The passion for immigration generated the revulsion which the West is now suffering.

North Carolina does not need immigration; it does need more and better schools, better roads, and pure and economic government. Institute these and exterminate whiskey-selling, and we will have to fight off immigration, without even so much as making a display or printing a circular.

Annihilation of the Wicked.

BY JNO. T. ALBRITTON.

It is difficult to decide from which source the Christian religion suffers the greater harm,—the external violence of its avowed enemies or the internal attacks of its professed friends.

I am not surprised to find some men in every age, on either pagan or Christian soil, advocating the annihilation of all men and denying immortality to either good or bad.

But it is a matter of surprise and profound regret that, among the professed friends of Christianity, are found men who advocate the annihilation of any part of mankind. Even the great Dr. Watts is said to have inclined to the belief that the dying infants of ungodly parents would be annihilated. Many are to day advocating the annihilation of the wicked. Some deny immortality to all men who do not believe in Christ, teaching that we become immortal only by faith in him. This notion seems to involve the annihilation of all infants dying without having reached sufficient age to exercise faith in the Redeemer, as well as all unbelievers.

Great comfort this to parents bereft of their children!

Whatever the reasons that lead men to the belief and advocacy of annihilation, I contemplate the doctrine with unutterable revulsion of feeling. I believe that God made man immortal, that immortality is an essential property of the soul, and that, whatever else he lost by the fall, man did not lose his immortality any more than he lost his being or his identity. I therefore do not believe in the annihilation of any human being.

THE DOCTRINE IS CONTRARY TO THE PRINCIPLES OF THE SOUNDEST PHILOSOPHY.

I commend to the readers of the RECORDER the following extract taken from the work of Dr. John Abercrombie, at one time first physician to his Majesty in Scotland:

"The effects of that change which we call the death of an animal body are nothing more than a change in the arrangement of its constituent elements; for it can be demonstrated, on the strictest principles of chemistry, that not one particle of these elements ceases to exist. There is, therefore, as Dr. Brown has well remarked, in the very decay of the body, an analogy which would seem to indicate the continued existence of the thinking principle, since that which we term decay is itself only another name for continued existence. To conceive, then, that anything mental ceases to exist after death, when we know that everything corporeal continues to exist, is a gratuitous assumption, contrary to every rule of philosophical inquiry, and in direct opposition, not only to all the facts relating to mind itself, but even to the analogy which is furnished by the dissolution of the bodily frame. * * * We talk, indeed, about matter, and we talk about mind; we speculate concerning materiality and immateriality, until we argue ourselves into a kind of belief that we really understand something of the subject. The truth is that we understand nothing. Matter and mind are known to us by certain properties; these properties are quite distinct from each other; but in regard to both, it is entirely out of the reach of our faculties to advance a single step beyond the facts which are before us. Whether in their substratum or ultimate essence they are the same, or whether they are different, we know not, and never can know in our present state of being. Let us, then, be satisfied with the facts, when our utmost faculties can carry us no farther; let us cease to push our feeble speculations, when our duty is only to wonder and adore.

"These considerations, while they are directly opposed to the crude conclusions of the materialist, also serve to show us how much the subject is removed beyond our limited faculties; and it is not on such speculations, therefore, that we rest the evidence for a future state of being. We know nothing of the nature or the essence of mind; but whatever may be its essence, or whatever may be the nature and extent of that mysterious connection which the Deity has established between it and our bodily organization, these points have no reference whatever to the great question of its future existence. This is a principle which seems to have been too much lost sight of in the discussion of this subject, namely, that our speculations respecting the immateriality of the rational human soul have no influence on our belief of its immortality. This momentous truth rests on a species of evidence altogether different, which addresses itself to the moral constitution of man. It is found in those principles of his nature by which he feels upon his spirit the awe of a God, and looks forward to the future with anxiety or with hope; by which he knows to distinguish truth from falsehood, and evil from good, and has forced upon him the conviction that he is a moral and responsible being. This is the power of conscience, that monitor within, which raises its voice in the breast of every man, a witness for his Creator. He who resigns himself to its guidance, and he who repels its warnings, are both compelled to acknowledge its power; and, whether the good man rejoices in the prospect of immortality, or the victim of remorse withers beneath an influence unseen by human eye, and shrinks from the anticipation of a reckoning to come, such has forced upon him a conviction, such as argument never gave, that the being which is essentially himself is distinct from any function of the body, and will survive in undiminished vigor when the body shall have fallen into decay.

"There is thus, in the consciousness of every man, a deep impression of continued existence. The casuist may reason against it till he bewilder himself in his own sophistries; but a voice within gives the lie to his vain speculations, and pleads with authority for a life which is to come. The sincere and humble inquirer cherishes the impression, while he seeks for farther light on a subject so momentous; and he thus receives, with absolute conviction, the truth which beams upon him from the revelation of God, —that the mysterious part of his being, which thinks, and wills, and reasons, shall indeed survive the wreck of its mortal tenement, and is destined for immortality."—Intellectual Philosophy, pp. 32–36.

My only and ample apology for introducing this long extract from Dr. Abercrombie's work is its appropriateness and superior excellency.

The belief of the annihilation of the wicked is totally incompatible with the well being of the individual man and of society at large. Therefore, in the wise providence of God, the doctrine has never, to any considerable degree, formed a part of the world's religious creed. Go where you may, in pagan or Christian lands, you find the belief in future existence and future rewards and punishments almost co extensive with the spread of the human race. One of the most remarkable phenomena of the human race is the general prevalence of a belief in the supernatural and divine and a worship corresponding to that belief. Man is, in his very constitution, a religious animal, and he does violence to his nature that seeks to divest himself of this constitutional propensity.

How contemptible must human life appear to that man who looks upon himself and his fellow-men as mere creatures of a day, whose existence will be terminated in the article of death? Uninfluenced by either hope or fear of anything beyond the grave, what distinguishes him from the brute creation, except the vividness and multiplicity of his perceptions? How does the sin of self-destruction impress the man who believes in annihilation at death? If the burdens of life grow heavy, if sorrow, anguish, affliction, disappointment embitter his life, what hinders him from seeking refuge in suicide? By means of a rope, a knife, a leap, a plunge, a poisonous draught, he can soon terminate his existence. It is true, he loses a few days; but he gains freedom from care, pain and trouble.

The Grecian wrote:—

"Happiest beyond compare,
Never to taste of life;
Happiest in order next,
Being born, with quickest speed,
Thither again to turn
From whence we came."

He believed in annihilation at death. So, also, did the Roman philosopher, who, later on, proclaimed suicide as the privilege of expiring hope. Said he, "Seest thou yon river? yon well? Freedom sits there in the depths. Seest thou yon low, withered tree? There freedom hangs. Seest thou thy neck? thy throat? thy heart? They are ways of escape from bondage."

Under the preaching of the cheerless gospel of annihilation, how insignificant a thing does human life become!

If, on the other hand, God put man into this world, gave him the present life as a period of probation, and as the first link of an interminable chain stretching into eternity, and led him to expect a future, eternal destiny corresponding to his character and conduct in this world, then, how unspeakably important does human life appear!

The doctrine of annihilation cannot be true, and, therefore, is not from God, since the belief of it degrades human life, and minifies suicide and murder, making these crimes but little more than diverting a little blood and diminishing the number by one of millions of insignificant, short lived creatures.

May heaven save our people from the folly and madness of embracing a doctrine fraught with so much mischief to mankind!

I will close this article with an extract from Robert Hall's great sermon on Modern Infidelity, delivered nearly one hundred years ago. The reader will please bear in mind, as he reads, that the author is endeavoring to show the mischievous tendency of that teaching which obliterates from the human mind faith in God, future existence and the retributions of eternity, and degrades man to the level of the beasts of the field.

"As the advantage of the armed over the unarmed is not seen till the moment of attack, so in that tranquil state of society in which law and order maintain their ascendency, it is not perceived, perhaps not even suspected, to what an alarming degree the principles of modern infidelity leave us naked and defenceless. But let the state be convulsed, let the mounds of regular authority be once overflowed, and the still small voice of law drowned in the tempest of popular fury, (events which recent experience shows to be possible,) it will then be seen that atheism is a school of ferocity; and that having taught its disciples to consider mankind as little better than a nest of insects, they will be prepared in the fierce conflicts of party to trample upon them without pity and extinguish them without remorse.

"It was late before the atheism of Epicurus gained footing at Rome; but its prevalence was soon followed by such scenes of proscription, confiscation, and blood as were then unparaleled in the history of the world; from which the republic being never able to recover itself, after many unsuccessful struggles, it exchanged liberty for repose, by submission to absolute power. Such were the effects of atheism at Rome. An attempt has been recently made to establish a similar system in France, the consequences of which are too well known to render it requisite for me to shock your feelings by a recital. The only doubt that can arise is, whether the barbarities which have stained the revolution in that unhappy country are justly chargeable on the prevalence of atheism. Let those who doubt of this recollect that the men who, by their activity and talents, prepared the minds of the people for that great change—Voltaire, D'Alembert, Diderot, Rousseau, and others—were avowed enemies of revelation; that in all their writings the diffusion of skepticism and revolutionary principles went hand in hand; that the fury of the most sanguinary parties was especially pointed against the Christian priesthood and religious institutions, without once pretending, like other persecutors, to execute the vengeance of God (whose name they never mentioned) upon his enemies; that their atrocities were committed with a wanton levity and brutal merriment; that the reign of Atheism was the reign of Terror; that in the full madness of their career, in the highest climax of their horrors, they shut up the temples of God, abolished his worship, and proclaimed death to be an eternal sleep—as if by pointing to the silence of the sepulchre and the sleep of the dead, these ferocious barbarians meant to apologize for leaving neither sleep, quiet, nor repose to the living."—Modern Infidelity, pp. 70–72.

I hope to continue the discussion in a future article.
